Weight Control News

YOU CAN DINE OUT AND STILL STAY SLIM

A lot of people on diets just give up the whole enjoyable aspect of dining out, and that's a shame because a little common sense can keep you on the straight and slim.

All you have to do is alter a little of your thinking and a lot of your intake. It isn't that hard. Take a good hard look at how you feel, what you order, and be honest about your bad eating habits when dining. Then you can find ways of replacing them with good habits.

If a restaurant is known for its "magnificent, splendiferous desserts" and they are a pitfall for you, then don't go. Particularly if that's about all the place is famous for. Choose a restaurant with a variety of cooking where you can be sure of a choice of at least one or two broiled entrees. Stay away from the fried foods.

Don't rush into the meal. Relax. Have a vegetable or fruit juice cocktail or a non-caloric drink. If you want something alcoholic, try a wine and club soda, or fool yourself and have a club soda with a dash of bitters and a twist of lemon.

Tell the waiter to skip the bread and butter because you know it won't skip you if it's on the table. When you're ready to order try not opening the menu. Ask the waiter to suggest a good broiled fish, chicken, or meat entree. Substitute a vegetable or salad for rice, potatoes or pasta. If you've just got to have a starch (and why not occasionally), don't load it with butter or sour cream or fancy sauces. That's where the calories really come into your diet.

Take small bites. That doesn't make you dainty, just civilized. And chew your food well. Skip dessert or have a simple fresh fruit. Actually it's one of the most elegant of desserts.

Another means of helping you resist the heavy calories is a product called Dietac. It's a safe and very effective appetite suppressant that can help make dining out a lot easier and a whole lot more enjoyable. For a free booklet on Behavior Modification as a means to weight control, write: Dietac, P.O. Box 174, Clifton Heights, Pa. 19018.

THE PUBLIC INTEREST

Aluminum Can Recycling Looks Better and Better

RECYCLING CENTER
CANS

Everybody benefits from can recycling because it creates jobs, conserves energy and raw materials and helps groups and individuals earn extra money.

The more you look at aluminum beverage can recycling, the better it's likely to look. That's because everybody benefits.

In the last eight years thousands of civic groups and over a million individual can collectors have earned over $250 million through recycling. The public profits from a cleaner environment and aluminum companies get to put the used metal back to work.

Recycling also creates jobs. The recycling industry is growing fast. Since 1970, it has added an estimated 18,000 new jobs to the economy. These jobs involve buying, processing, transporting and remelting used cans into new aluminum.

Moreover, recycling aluminum can help some municipalities generate extra revenue. Aluminum is the most valuable material found in quantity in municipal resource recovery systems. Recycling also helps to relieve overburdened landfill facilities.

Recycling conserves energy by saving 95 percent of the energy needed to make new aluminum from ore. In 1979, recycling helped one company, Alcoa, reduce its consumption of coal and bauxite, both valuable natural resources.

More and more Americans are collecting used aluminum cans. Last year alone over nine billion cans were turned in for recycling. That's almost six times as many cans as were collected in 1973.

For free leaflets about this exciting new industry that saves energy as it grows, write: Aluminum Company of America, 841 Alcoa Building, Pittsburgh, PA 15219.

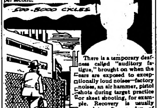
FANCY THAT!

The lowest intensity at which sound can be detected by humans is called the "threshold of hearing." It varies according to pitch. The lowest threshold is between 500 and 8,000 cycles per second.



There is a temporary deafness called "auditory fatigue," brought on when the ears are exposed to exceptionally loud noises—factory noises, an air hammer, pistol shots during target practice or skeet shooting, for example. Recovery is usually complete after a day of quiet.

Through "closed captioning," deaf people can read the audio portions of many TV programs. Viewers need special "TeleCaption" equipment on home TV sets to receive the captions. The device is marketed by Sears, Roebuck and Co. Sears also merchandises television sets with the equipment already built in. The system is demonstrated at Sears stores. Many newspapers and magazines include information about the captioned programs in their TV listings. The system was pioneered by the National Captioning Institute, a nonprofit organization.

Interest plus Checking.™ Here's what people are saying about it.

"We calculated we'd earn about $150 to $200 a year. And that's $200 that's money earned... without having to manipulate those funds."

"Interest Plus Checking® will pay me about $70 or $80 a year."

"...I called banks all over town...I thought it was the best deal any bank had to offer."

"We each have an Interest Plus Checking account...The money I keep in mine should earn me...about $200 to $240 a year..." "I think it's great."

Literally thousands of people have already found out: Interest Plus Checking works.

Because, with Interest Plus Checking, they can still write checks. But they earn 5¼% interest compounded daily on all the money they keep in the bank.

Interest Plus Checking is saving people money, too. With no-charge checking, personalized checks at no extra charge, and no-fee travelers checks and notary service. Plus the convenience of an Instant Cash card.

Thousands of people like you are already money ahead with Interest Plus Checking.

Maybe it's time you were, too.

We're on your side.

TOOLS TO DO THE JOB RIGHT

Check out your arsenal of tools before you tackle the job.

As a member of the growing army of do-it-yourselfers, you'll want to do the job right—right now. But if you have to spend time hunting down the tools—the screwdriver in the kitchen, the saw in the garage, the pliers in the car—that enthusiasm may wane. You may wind up putting off today what you may not even do tomorrow.

Before you start, check out your arsenal of tools. Do you have everything you need to do the job properly and safely? If not, visit your hardware store for help on the proper tools for the job.

Sometimes one tool does many jobs. An example is the Weller Mini-Shop and its vast array of accessories. It's one of the tools by Cooper the Toolmaker, which includes Crescent, Lufkin measuring tools, Nicholson saws and files, and Plumb hammers and axes.

To the Weller Mini-Shop, you can attach everything from a drill bit and polishing brush to sanders and grinders for doing fine shop work.

There are tricks to the trade that make any job easier and safer. Example: a wood screw turns smoothly if the threads are first rubbed with soap, and if the screwdriver has an extra-large, non-slip handle like the Cushion Grip by Crescent.

Doing the job right, right from the start, requires three things: a little skill, determination, and the right tools.

Frosted grapes
Parsley

In skillet, brown mushrooms and cook onions and parsley until tender in butter. Stir in rice, ham, salt and sage. Use to fill cavities in hens. Truss. Arrange on rack in roasting pan. Bake at 400° F. for 20 minutes. In saucepan, combine marmalade and Scotch. Heat, stirring, until jam is melted. Brush on hens. Bake 20 minutes longer, basting frequently with glaze. Serve garnished with grapes and parsley.

SPIRITED COFFEE

1/2 cup Teacher's Scotch
1/2 cup coffee flavored liqueur
4 cups strong hot coffee
2 teaspoons superfine sugar
Slivered lemon peel
Sweetened whipped cream

In coffee pot, combine Scotch, liqueur, coffee and sugar. Keep hot. Garnish each serving with slivered lemon peel and whipped cream. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

BANANAS TEACHER

4 small ripe bananas
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
3 tablespoons banana liqueur
3 tablespoons Teacher's Scotch
Vanilla ice cream

Peel bananas and cut into quarters. Brush with lemon juice. In chafing dish, heat sugar and butter over direct heat until sugar is melted. Add bananas and cook, turning once, about 2 minutes on each side. Add cinnamon. Sprinkle with liqueur. Heat Scotch and add. Serve over ice cream. Makes 4 servings.

Little Oak

Mrs. Arnold Haugen, Goodridge

Funeral services were held on Sat., Nov. 8 for Richard Jepson at Dahlen Lutheran church at Dahlen, N.D.

Richard Andrew Jepson was born in Crookston on Oct. 21, 1898 to parents Jens and Esther Johanson Jepson.

At the age of three years he moved with his parents to Wanke, MN north of Gully. He was confirmed at the Nazareth church. He farmed north of Gully until 1944 when he sold out.

He worked at Proctor for a few years and then moved to Fargo where he worked as a carpenter until he retired. For the past several years he had been a patient at the Moorhead American Nursing center.

He is survived by one sister: Mrs. Amanda Fredrickson of Michigan, N.D. and several nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by two brothers and two sisters, one of these were Mrs. Thora Brovold.

Among those attending the funeral from this area were Mrs. Esther Rindal, Mrs. Mervin Rindal, Mr. and Mrs. Arlie Fore, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Brovold, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Brovold and Lloyd Brovold. Mrs. Jorund Stienlie Nordhagen of Michigan, N.D. and formerly from north of Gully also attended the funeral. All were luncheon guests and visited with Amanda Fredrickson at her new home in Michigan, N.D.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hawk and Mrs. Arnold Haugen visited at the Cora Oftelie home Monday evening.

Cora Oftelie called at the Gene Marquis home on Monday forenoon.

Helen Brozio was a coffee guest at the A. Haugen home Tuesday afternoon. Lois Burstad of Thief River Falls was a supper guest there. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hawk accompanied Lois home. They will spend the night with her and in the morning they will leave for their home in Seattle, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Mostrom of Minneapolis are spending some time at the farm home here. They called at the Arnold Haugen home Monday evening.

Mrs. Roy Hawk and Mrs. Arnold Haugen were coffee guests at the Andrew Hanson home Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Willie Good and Helen Brozio visited with Pearl Kolstrand Monday afternoon. They also visited at the Erling Dahlen and Clarence Hanson home.

Cora Oftelie visited at the Alvin Dahl home in Thief River Falls on Wednesday.

We are glad to hear that Willie Good came home from the Veterans hospital in Fargo, N.D. on Monday. Mrs. Good and Helen Brozio motored to Fargo to get him. He had spent three and a half a weeks there.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Mugaas and Sarah of rural Thief River Falls visited at the Ernest Mostrom home on Saturday. Mrs. Mugaas called there on Sunday to get Sarah as she had spent the weekend with her grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hawk and Lois Burstad called at the Gary B. Johnson home Tuesday evening.

Those who came to the Robert Burstad home in Thief River Falls on Sunday to celebrate Robert's birthday were Mr. and Mrs. Del Bergdahl and Stacy, Tillie Burstad and Mrs. Jeff Olson, all of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Gary B. Johnson, Bradley, Robyn and Brian, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Homme, Mishawn and Chad, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Haugen, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hawk of Issaquah, Wash., also Lois and Bruce Burstad. They all enjoyed a delicious supper there.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hawk of Issaquah, Wash., arrived in Thief River Falls on Friday. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Hawk and Lois Burstad came to the Arnold Haugen home. Lois was an overnight guest there. She returned to her home on Saturday evening.

Arnold Haugen, Olaf and Johnnie Olson called at the Orben Good home Friday evening.

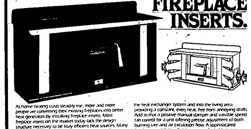
The Hottest Technology in today's FIREPLACE INSERTS.



As home heating costs steadily rise, more and more people are converting their existing fireplaces into better heat generators by installing fireplace inserts. Most fireplace inserts on the market today lack the design structure necessary to be truly efficient heat sources. Many are poorly manufactured with inferior materials. Others are difficult to control. Some are not even engineered properly for effective heat transfer into the living area . . . it goes up the chimney instead. And in today's economy that's a crime.

Arrow—The Efficiency Experts
Arrow fireplace inserts are designed by heating engineers to meet all UL standards and manufactured by a company with 20 years experience in the heating industry. Every Arrow fireplace insert is a happy combination of inventive design and solid construction that squeezes more heat out of every log burned.

The Inside Difference
The firebox of an Arrow insert is lined with durable cast iron around a firebrick floor for maximum conduction of heat. Heat exchangers surround the fire on four sides to extract more heat from the wood than conventional inserts. Two quiet but powerful fans circulate air through the heat exchanger system and into the living area, providing a constant, even heat, free from annoying drafts. Add to that a positive manual damper and variable speed fan control for a unit offering precise adjustment of both burning rate and air circulation flow. A sophisticated fireplace insert that will deliver years of reliable service.

The Outside Style
Outside, an Arrow fireplace insert reflects the same precision and quality as the inside. Clean, contemporary lines blend with virtually any decor. A hardwood handle on the front loading door beautifully accents the rich black finish, yet remains cool to the touch. And the entire door is removable so you can still enjoy an open fire with the optional accessory screen.

Invest in the Best
If spiraling heating bills are getting you down, consider an Arrow fireplace insert. It makes the most of your present fireplace opening without expensive installation costs. Whether used as a sole heating source or a supplement to an existing system, you'll appreciate the features and economy that only an Arrow can provide.

Don't get burned by inferior brands. Insist on an Arrow.

4-H Judging Makes Ruth Legvold A Special Friend

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Ruth Legvold has developed a special friend through the year due to her involvement with families and children of 4-H projects.

And they, just as all friends, have been through both joyous and difficult times and have changed, learned and grown together.

Ruth and her friend became more fully acquainted with each other during 4-H awards night conducted recently in Thief River Falls. Because of the number of years she has contributed her services as a judge of various 4-H projects, Ruth was presented a special award that evening as a "Friend of 4-H" from the Pennington county 4-H council.

"I've judged 4-H projects for quite a few years," she said. "I guess that's why I was presented the award. I really enjoy judging."

Her years as judge began when she was asked by Gladys Hallstrom to judge a good grooming competition in Rocksbury township, she said.

"It was terrible!" she exclaimed, recalling her introduction to the world of 4-H judging and one of the most difficult times of judging in her life. (In addition to the time when she judged dress construction in Fertile from early morning to 5 p.m. with a half hour for lunch. "They were lined up clear outside the building!" she smiled).

"I decided they were all too good and it was impossible to judge them," she said, referring to the good grooming competition.

Ruth, who was born and raised in Grand Forks, came to Thief River Falls to teach high school home economics, she said. After she was married, she substituted for other home economics instructors. "That was during the time when wives didn't work outside of the home." she said.

She also worked for 256 years with the Girl Scouts before she began judging 4-H projects.

"I never thought I'd be connected with 4-H. I was so busy with scouting," she said.

Ruth has judged foods in Hallock and Red Lake Falls, dress revues in Newfolden and Thief River Falls, clothing in Mahnomen and Thief River Falls, favorite foods in Thief River Falls, along with plays in Oklee and Goodridge. She has also done open class judging in various places.

"You see, she explained, "I'm a home economist. To me, cooking and sewing are so important. Maybe I'm old-fashioned but I think it's important for girls to know how to do these things."

4-H judging has changed some through the years, according to Ruth. "It used to be kids would bring projects in and you'd judge them. There would be a whole table of baking powder biscuits to judge and you wouldn't know who made them. That takes away the fun of it. Now there are commentaries along with judging where you talk to the kids and tell them what they did right or wrong and why. It's fun talking with all of them."

Ruth continues to keep in touch with new trends, she said. "Every time there's a refresher course in something I go because I think I should. You can't judge like you used to. For one thing, people dress so differently today."

Even though the roles of women are changing and many today are seeking jobs outside of the home, Ruth feels that many are still taking time to do other projects.

"You see so many nice things at the fair," she said. "They (women) must be making time for other things."

There seems to be more interest in 4-H now than there was in the past, Ruth said, because it (4-H) has moved to the cities and is not only a rural activity. And, a good 4-H leader is an important asset in any 4-H club, she added.

"Those that really want to do things get a chance with a good leader," she added.

Ruth and husband's (Gunder) numerous travel adventures throughout their lives have been a result of their unique professions and interests as well as their

FRIEND OF 4-H award was presented to Ruth Legvold of Thief River Falls during 4-H awards night recently. As a 4-H judge, Ruth has had to travel back and forth throughout the area — something both she and her husband enjoy. "Everything I do, I do because of my husband," she said. "He goes along with me 100 per cent."

NCC Offers Corrections Courses Dec. 1

Northland community college will inaugurate a corrections option as a part of the college's law enforcement program beginning winter quarter, Dec. 1.

In the corrections option, students will be able to enroll in six college credits by taking "Introductions to Corrections" (three credits) and "Probation and Parole" (three credits).

Frank Cornacchione, law enforcement instructor at Northland, will be instructing the new options courses.

317 On Franklin 1st Honor Roll

MACI President Terms Comp Costs An 'Outrage'

Energy Funds Available In East Marshall

Energy assistance funds for low income residents in East Marshall county are available, announces Northwest Community Action, Inc., Badger.

Energy assistance money may be available to low income households in the form of a credit toward future energy costs or as an actual payment for already existing energy bills. Renters, and homeowners who cut their own wood for fuel may also be eligible for the program.

Income eligibility for fuel assistance is based on the total number of individuals in each household and gross income. A household may deduct medical expenses that exceed three per cent of annual household income, and is not reimbursed by insurance or other sources.

Persons must bring in proof of income to be attached to the application, paid heating bills from October 15, 1980 to date of application, and all other heating bills.

Contact outreach aide Karen Skadsem at 222-3309 for further information.

Schedule for taking applications in the area is as follows:

Holt — Nazareth Church, Mondays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., December 1, 8, 15;

Gatzke — senior citizen center, Tuesdays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., December 2, 9, 16;

Grygla — community center, Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., December 3, 10, 17;

Strandquist — senior citizen center, Thursdays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., December 4, 11, 18;

Middle River — community center, Fridays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., December 5, 12, 19.

"Workers compensation costs in Minnesota are an absolute outrage," claimed Winston Borden, president of the Minnesota association of commerce and industry (MACI) at a meeting held Thursday morning at the Best Western inn of Thief River Falls.

The 7:30 a.m. breakfast session was held under sponsorship of MACI and the legislative action committee of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce. Approximately 35 representatives from business and industry were in attendance and a question and answer period followed Borden's talk.

Borden, a former state senator for eight years from the Brainerd area, said that workers compensation costs to Minnesota industries will hit $600 million this year — more than double the corporate income tax paid in the state. Changes in the workers compensation laws will be the number one priority for MACI during the 1981 legislative session.

Zeroing in on unemployment compensation, Borden asked three questions which he believed to be key elements in soaring costs:

(1) Should people make more money when unemployed than when they are employed?

(2) Should people be able to refuse a job at $8 per hour because they previously had a job which paid $10 an hour?

(3) Should a person making more than $20,000 a year be able to receive tax-free unemployment benefits?

"In Minnesota," Borden said, "they can and they do. And that is the reason our unemployment compensation has soared to $200 million annually and Minnesota is one of 13 states where the unemployment fund is insolvent."

On workers compensation Borden said that MACI has done all it can in the courts and rate hearings. Liberal interpretations of the compensation laws have resulted in what Borden considered to be unjustified and unreasonable awards. Workmen's comp rates in Minnesota are already two to six times as great as in neighboring states and an increase of 28.6 per cent ($112 million) is being requested by the insurance industry.

"The legislature blames the courts for the interpretations and awards," Borden said, "and the courts insist they are only following the laws passed by the legislature. I believe people should realize that for most of us, the safest place to be is not in our homes or in our autos but in the work environment."

The MACI president said he was pleased with the success of his organization's program in the last session of the legislature. "We asked for an $800 million tax cut and got a $750 million cut," he said. "We asked for 100 per cent indexing of taxes to income and got 85 per cent. And we pointed out that our death taxes were the worst in the nation and were successful in having those cut by two-thirds.

"I'm convinced that the bipartisan support on those measures and the general conservative nature of the last session of the legislature saved many incumbents from being ousted in the November election this year."

WINSTON BORDEN, president of the Minnesota association of commerce and industry (MACI), discussed concerns of members of the association during a meeting with the Times following a public meeting in Thief River Falls Thursday. Borden had spoken to about 35 business and industry representatives at a breakfast meeting held at the Best Western inn.

Fuel Assistance Sign-Up Coming

More than $850,000 in fuel assistance money is expected to help about 1,700 eligible households with their fuel bills under the energy assistance program for low-income residents in Pennington, Red Lake and east Polk counties. The program is expected to be underway soon.

The money will be available to low-income households in the form of a credit toward future energy costs, or as an actual payment for already existing bills for fuel oil, natural gas, electricity, coal, wood or other energy. Renters and householders who cut their own wood for fuel may also be eligible for the energy assistance program.

Income eligibility is based on the total number of individuals in each household and the gross income. Persons living alone who earn less than $4,738 are eligible for energy assistance. The guideline for a household of four is $12,240 and for a household of six is $16,890. Households with more than six persons should add $2,450 for each additional member, when determining income eligibility.

Medical expenses in excess of three per cent of a household's annual income can be deducted when determining income eligibility. Medical expense records must be brought along when applying for assistance, as well as proof of income and fuel bills.

Individuals or any household member receiving aid to families with dependent children (AFDC), supplemental security income (SSI), food stamps or general welfare assistance are automatically eligible for the program.

A formula is used to determine the actual amount of energy assistance which can be provided to an eligible household. Payments will range from $50 to $1,045, depending on the type of energy which the household uses and the average cost of that type of energy in the region in relation to household income.

Pennington county sign-up sessions will be held December 1, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Thief River Falls regional library; December 2, 9:30 a.m. to noon in the Thief River Falls city auditorium and 1 to 6 p.m. at the St. Hilaire council room; December 3, 9:30 a.m. to noon at the Goodridge city hall and 1 to 6 p.m. in the Thief River Falls regional library; and December 4, 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., at the Thief River Falls regional library.

Red Lake county sign-up will be held December 1, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Brooks hall; December 2, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Red Lake Falls city hall; December 4, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Emardville hall near Plummer; December 8 and 9, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Red Lake Falls city hall.

East Polk county sites for sign-up in the Times area include December 1, 9 a.m. to noon in the Gully hall; December 2, 9 a.m. to 4:30

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Melvie And Grafstrom Vows Spoken In TRF

Miss Kari Ann Melvie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Melvie of this city, became the bride of Brian Lee Grafstrom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Grafstrom, Salol, at 7:00 p.m., Saturday, September 13.

The double-ring ceremony took place at the First Baptist church, Thief River Falls, with Rev. Frank Armstrong officiating. Approximately 350 guests witnessed the exchanging of the rings.

Mrs. Sam Grafstrom, Warroad, aunt of the groom, was organist and Mrs. Boyce Lee, city, aunt of the bride, pianist. For the processional, the organist played Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," and Wanger's "Bridal Chorus." The recessional was Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." Providing violin accompaniment was Kraig Lerud, Dr. Peter Johnson, sang "Lord, Bless This Hour," and "Wedding Prayer." During the lighting of the unity candle, Brenda Laidley, sang "Follow Me." All are friends of the couple.

Forming the chancel setting were candelabra graced with blue bows. On the piano and organ were long-stemmed roses in burgundy and light blue. The pews along the center aisle were marked with large white bows.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a bridal gown of Chantilly lace styled with a ruffled Victorian yoke with a high ruffled neckline banded in satin. Satin bands and ruffles accented her long, full sleeves and complemented her triple-tiered bouffant skirt that flowed into a cathedral length train. A corresponding headpiece of Chantilly lace, trimmed with pearls and iridescents, held her lace edged veil of imported bridal illusion. She carried a silk cascade of burgundy, light blue and white roses, accented with lilies of the valley, greenery and burgundy streamers.

Her personal attendant was Pam Engelstad, a friend.

Matron of honor was Kim Nelson, a sister of the bride. Other attendants were Kay Melvie and Kathi Peppin, sisters of the bride, and Valerie and Vernell Grafstrom, sisters of the groom.

Thora Grafstrom, a sister of the groom, was flower girl. Their spaghetti strapped gowns of burgundy polyester knit were topped by long-sleeved, burgundy, blue, white and gray floral sheer overblouses gathered at the waist. In their hair, they wore a cluster of miniature burgundy silk flowers. They carried blue and white silk flowers, accented with greenery and burgundy ribbon streamers. Their matching necklaces were gifts from the bride.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, David Grafstrom. Groomsmen were Kjell and Keith Melvie, brothers of the bride; Joel Nelson, brother-in-law of the bride, and Erick Grafstrom, brother of the groom. The rings were carried by Luke Grafstrom, a brother of the groom. All wore vested gray tuxedos with burgundy trim, ruffled shirts, gray bow ties and silk burgundy rose boutonnieres. A rose boutonniere in burgundy and blue complemented the all-white attire worn by the groom.

Head usher was Bryant Peppin, brother-in-law of the bride. Other ushers were Gary Laidley, Kevin Anderson, Mike Jury and Arlyn Melvie, friends of the groom. Their gray tuxedos and white ruffled shirts with gray trim, matched the attire worn by the fathers.

Distributing the wedding programs were Peter and Matthew Grafstrom, brothers of the groom.

The mother of the bride was attired in a burgundy gown styled with three-quarter-length push-up sleeves and a floor-length pleated skirt. A rounded lace collar and fagoting trimmed the bodice. The groom's mother was also attired in a burgundy gown. A jacket of matching floral print complemented her attire. Their silk corsages were of blue and burgundy roses. During the ceremony each was presented with long stemmed roses from the bride and groom.

Special guests were the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Melvie of this city, Mrs. Julia Johnson, Roseau, Mrs. Mary Grafstrom, Salol, and a great-aunt, Mrs. Sigrid Tillman, Plummer.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception in the church parlors with Mr. and Mrs. Boyce Lee, uncle and aunt of the bride as host and hostess. They were assisted by Mrs. Morris Flattum and Mrs. Don Brown, friends of the bride. For the occasion, the dining area was decorated with streamers and bells in burgundy, blue and white. Vases of fresh burgundy dahlias and babies breath centered the tables. Roses in corresponding colors highlighted the two guest book tables covered with light blue table cloths. Presiding at the guest books were Mrs. Dawn Melvie, sister-in-law of the bride, and Cheri Grafstrom, a cousin of the groom.

The serving table was centered with a three-tiered chocolate and white wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with burgundy roses. Between the pillars that supported the upper tier, were a miniature bride and groom. The remaining members of the bridal party graced the bottom tiers. At the base were two heart-shaped cakes inscribed with the names of the bride and groom. Topping the cake was a pair of doves on flower-trimmed wedding rings. The cake was baked and decorated by Margaret Rupprecht and was cut and served by Mrs. Corlan Magnell, Oklee, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Robert Geringer, Salol, aunt of the groom. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Dayton Grafstrom, Warroad, aunt of the groom, and Sharon Erickson, Roseau, a friend of the couple.

At the punch bowl and serving the kransekage, the traditional Scandinavian wedding cake, surrounded by burgundy and white sugar bells were Lynn Sagie and Mary Engelstad, friends of the bride.

Gift bearers were Ruth, Ramona and Renae Grafstrom, sisters of the groom. Pinning the flowers were Candi Dial and Candy Joppru, friends of the bride. All the silk flowers were made by Mrs. Leland Enge, a friend of the bride.

Waitresses were Sheila Sorenson, cousin of the bride; Verna Grafstrom, sister of the groom; Barb Laidley, a friend of the bride, and Sally Michal, a cousin of the groom. Ann Grafstrom, a sister of the groom, distributed the rice packets. Members of the Mission circle were in charge of serving.

The previous evening, the groom's parents hosted a dinner at the Melvie home for the wedding party and members of the two families.

Following a brief wedding trip, the couple is now at home near Salol where the groom is engaged in farming.

The bride is a graduate of Lincoln high school and Northland Community college. Prior to her marriage, she was employed at Northern State bank. She is now employed at the J.C. Penney store in Roseau. The groom is a graduate of Roseau high school and attended Northland Community college in Thief River Falls. Photo, Lund studio, Roseau

Chat And Chew Give Reasons For Thanksgiving

November meeting of the Chat and Chew homemakers club was held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Williams. The eight members attending answered roll call by listing why they were thankful. Among the things listed were health, home, family, friends and freedom of religion.

President Betty Feragen presided at the meeting. Pauline Aubol read the homemakers creed and reported on the Crookston meeting, and Marion Williams reported on the meeting held in October. An account was also given on the trip to the Natural Way Mills at Middle River. Members agreed to send a card to Mr. and Mrs. Ray Juhl, thanking them for their hospitality. Members also decided to send a gift and get-well card to Wandy Murphy, who had surgery. Pauline Aubol was selected in charge of purchasing the gift.

Plans were made for the Christmas party. The event was set for December 10, beginning at 1:00 p.m., with a luncheon at Lon's. Following the luncheon members will reassemble at the Chester Aubol home for a business meeting, social hour and a gift exchange. Members will bring gifts for their secret pal as well as the general gift exchange.

A $5.00 donation was given in memory of Lena Haynes, a former club member. It was noted that several members of the Chat and Chew homemakers club had attended the graveside service.

The flower arranging lesson was given with Pauline Aubol giving tips and helpful hints in making the arrangements.

During the social hour, members viewed the wide variety of articles brought for the patients at the Fergus Falls hospital. Marian Williams volunteered to package and mail the articles.

A dessert lunch was served by the hostess.

Happy Seniors Activities Set At Skylite Center

Due to the Thanksgiving holiday, events at the Skylite Center, 415 South Arnold avenue, have been changed. There will be no church services on Thursday, and no regular meeting on Friday. However the center will be open at 1:30 p.m., on Monday (today), Tuesday and Wednesday for workshops.

All senior citizens in the area are welcome to attend these workshops. Anyone wishing further information may call 681-5995.

Campanula Club Selects Officers For Next Year

Officers were elected at the meeting of the Campanula garden club held November 12 at the home of Mrs. Walter Fischer.

Elected were Mrs. Ruth Holmes, president; and Mrs. Victor Franson, vice-president. Re-elected were Mrs. Emil Koglin, secretary, and Olga Johnson, treasurer. Serving on the nominating committee were Bertha Hastad, chairman, Mrs. Walter Fischer and Mrs. Olga Grothe.

Out-going president Geneva Overum presided at the meeting and led the members in reading the club creed and the November poem. Viola Koglin and Olga Johnson gave the secretary and treasurer's reports and Bernice Knutson reported on the activities of the Good Cheer committee. The phenology reports included new birds in the area, gardens prepared for winter and early spring, and tools put away for the season. Some stated that they were still eating ripe tomatoes.

Correspondance included a letter pertaining to the 1981 dues, which were collected. The secretary was instructed to write a letter of appreciation to the janitor at the court house for watering the flower plots and removing the plants after the frost.

The Christmas party was planned. The event will be held December 10 at the home of Geneva Overum. Included will be an exchange of gifts and a program given by the members.

The topic lesson, "Hints on caring for garden tools," was given by Edith Franson. Bertha Hastad gave a timely message on Thanksgiving, and Olga Johnson showed pictures taken at Plymouth, Mass., this past October.

Adding interest was a display of Christmas crafts brought by the members. Mrs. Fischer demonstrated the making of very small flowers using yarn.

During the social hour, lunch was served by the hostess; and the birthday song was sung for Geneva Overum. Bertha Hastad distributed jack-in-the-pulpit seeds to the members and Bernice Knutson gave buttercup squash.

Eight members attended the meeting together with Dorothy Berve, a former member of the club.

N. J. Wessels Of Clearbrook Note Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. N.J. (Bud) Wessel of Clearbrook were honored by family and friends at a 40th wedding anniversary observance on Sunday afternoon, November 9, at the Good Shepherd Lutheran church at Clearbrook.

As the guests gathered, Linda Lindom presented a prelude of appropriate organ selections. She also served as accompanist at the program that followed. The welcome was extended by the couple's son, Joe Wessel, who also served as master of ceremonies. The program began with everyone joining in singing "How Great Thou Art." Rev. Paul E. Knutson gave the devotional meditation based on the marriage ceremony; and Ken Holmquist and Ocel Vanderport told of various occasions shared with the Wessels and paid tribute to them as friends and neighbors. During the program, Mrs. Joe (Glenda) Wessel read "Happy Anniversary," and her brother, Danny Trontvet, sang "Something Worth Living For," "Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us," and "You Light Up My Life." The program concluded with Gene and Joe Wessel paying tribute to their parents and expressing appreciation to those attending the anniversary observance. The honored guests also expressed their appreciation. Following the closing prayer by Joe Wessel, roses were presented to the Wessels by their grandchildren, Amy and Scott.

At the reception that followed, the tables were centered with floral arrangements in fall colors. An anniversary cake baked and decorated by Arlene Moiskness graced the serving table. Adding interest was a display of family photographs. Gene and Debbie Wessel presided at the punch bowl; Eunice Roberts was at the guest book; Helen Vanderport and Clarice Trontvet poured the coffee, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Akre served the cake. Members of the Alice circle were in charge of the kitchen.

Relatives and friends from out-of-town, who attended were from Hagen and Birch Hill, Sask., Canada; Sebeka, Young America, Thief River Falls, Brainerd, White Bear Lake, Bemidji, International Falls, Newfolden, Bagley, Montamedi, Minneapolis, Little Falls, Viking and the area around Clearbrook.

In the evening, a supper was served to about 35 guests.

Among the many congratulatory greetings received by the couple were a letter and telephone call from their daughter and son-in-law, Denise and Michael Martina of Phoenix, Ariz., who were unable to be present.

Mrs. Leonard Yonke
Route 2
Thief River Falls

Date Sandwich Cookies

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 cup white sugar
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 cup shortening, part butter
- ½ cup sour milk
- 2 cups rolled oats (uncooked)

Method: Sift together flour, sugar and soda. Cut in shortening, add sour milk and mix well. Add oatmeal. Place on a lightly floured board and knead well. (The dough may now be refrigerated for several hours or rolled immediately) Roll out one-fourth inch thick and cut, using a two inch cookie cutter. Bake in a 375 degree oven for about 10 minutes or until light brown.

Filling

- 1 lb. dates, cut up
- 1 cup water
- one-third cup sugar

Method: Simmer over low heat until thick, stirring often as it scorches very easily. May be spread between cookies while hot or after the filling has become cold. If a soft cooky is desired, spread at once. For a crisp cookie, spread the filling between the cookies just before serving.

Food Program Responds To Personal Need

Food packages provided to women and children in a U.S. department of agriculture supplemental food program will be more closely tailored to their differing health and nutrition needs in the future, assistant secretary of agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman said recently.

The special supplemental food program for women, infants and children — WIC — provides food and nutrition education as an adjunct to health care to 2.1 million low-income women and children up to five years of age with special nutritional needs. Women reached by the program are either pregnant or breastfeeding or have recently given birth.

"Previously, WIC offered only three food packages — one for infants, one for women and children and one for children with special dietary needs," Foreman said. "Under today's final rules, the number of packages will be expanded to six, specifically geared to the dietary needs of the different participants."

The six packages will be designed for infants through three months; infants four through 12 months; women and children with special dietary needs; children one to five years; pregnant and breastfeeding women; and non-breastfeeding postpartum women.

The food packages include such items as adult and infant cereal, juice, eggs, milk and cheese, iron-fortified formula and the latest additions of dried beans, peas or peanut butter, Foreman said.

"The rules establish a maximum level of six grams of sugar per ounce of dry cereal for all cereals authorized under the program," Foreman said. "This eliminates cereals in which sugar constitutes more than 21 per cent of the cereal by weight. In addition, the WIC program will continue to restrict cereals to those containing at least 45 per cent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance for iron."

Regulations will permit infant cereal and infant or adult juice to be introduced to infants when appropriate after four months of age, at the discretion of a medical professional. Under the previous rules, infant or adult juice could be introduced to infants at any time between 0 and 12 months of age. However, under the new regulations, USDA will discourage issuance of juice before six months, and will stress that juice only be given from a cup, to help prevent tooth decay.

To supply more protein to pregnant and breastfeeding women and to provide an incentive to breastfeed, a choice of one pound of dried beans or peas or 18 ounces of peanut butter has been added to the food package for pregnant and breastfeeding women, Foreman said. Dried beans or peas or peanut butter have also been included in the food package for children to increase food variety and give children the benefit of added protein.

On November 30, 1979, USDA published proposed rules to revise the types and quantities of supplemental foods provided under the WIC program, and invited written comments on the proposals and recommendations for alternatives.

USDA's food and nutrition service received 1,074 comments from state and local WIC agencies, health professionals, Congressional offices, advocacy organizations, the food industry, universities and colleges, participants and the general public. These comments were studied and considered in preparing the final regulations, Foreman said.

Final regulations were published in the November 12 Federal Register, available at most local libraries.

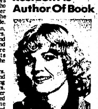
Once McIntosh Resident Is Author Of Book



Miriam Cameron

A former McIntosh area resident, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Joel Pederson, has written a book entitled "Hello, I'm God and I'm Here to Help You". The book has sold 56,000 copies in the past two years and is now in its second printing.

Mrs. Cameron's father is director of Outreach training school and her mother, Elin, is editor of the McIntosh Times newspaper. The book is available at $1.95 at book stores across the U.S.

In her book, Mrs. Cameron says she has "taken the often complex principles of the Bible, grouped them together by subject, and written them in simple, everyday language. They express the ideals most of us share regardless of our religious background."

Stanley Lane and Sammy were Saturday morning callers, Mary Lane was a Saturday afternoon visitor and Mrs. Russell Lane an evening visitor at the Burt Lane home.

Mr. and Mrs. Inar Mikkelson left Friday to spend the weekend at their lake cabin at Park Rapids. From there they left Monday morning to visit the Rudy Dobias new lake home on Ada Lake near Pine River. After spending the day, they returned home Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendall Jensen visited Sunday at the home of Mrs. Sophia Laidley in Newfolden with an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Laidley and Troy of East Grand Forks.

Children And Sexuality Is Program Topic

Children and Parents Learning Together is sponsoring a presentation entitled "Children and Sexuality" in room 104 of Mark Twain elementary school, Tuesday, December 2 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Presentation includes the movie "A Family Talks About Sex" and a question and answer period led by Alice Collins of Planned Parenthood in Bemidji. This presentation is directed toward parents of preschool children.

Registration for second semester sessions will be held December 1-4 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. CPLT offers sessions for parents and their preschool children in Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. Parents and children will share in a wide variety of activities set up for each session. CPLT is located in room 104 of Mark Twain elementary school. For more information, call 681-5670.

Children and Parents Learning Together is one of 36 early childhood and family education programs located throughout Minnesota and funded by the state legislature. Programs are coordinated by the Minnesota council on quality education. The program receives additional funds from the division of vocational-technical education and donations. An expectant parent or parent of a child aged birth to kindergarten enrollment, living within the Thief River Falls school district attendance area, may participate in any program activities. Services are offered at no or minimal cost, with fees waived for those unable to pay.

Borden said the state is in the midst of a fiscal crisis. "The governor says we have a $195 million deficit," he said. "MACI says that the deficit may run to $350 million by the end of the fiscal year."

Borden urged people in attendance to work with their legislators, get to know them and to keep them informed of how laws affect the business and industry of the local area. Legislators know what they can expect to hear from officials of associations such as MACI, he noted, and they want to hear from the small business people and the industrial representatives from their own districts.

He pointed out that northern Minnesota is again strongly represented in the legislature with Sen. Roger Moe of Ada as majority leader in the senate, Sen. Marv Hanson of Hallock as assistant majority leader; Rev. Willis Eken of Twin Valley as majority leader in the House of Representatives and Rep. Glen Sherwood of Pine River as minority leader in the House.

"Government won't go away," Borden told those in attendance at the breakfast meeting. "You don't have to appreciate government intrusion in your private life or your business endeavors, but you should make an effort to control the extent of intrusion.

"The kind of taxes you pay, the extent of your unemployment and workers compensation costs, all these and more are determined by government. Government will more directly impact your bottom line than any sale you make in 1981. You must be involved in determining the extent of government's impact on your bottom line.

"Each of us should get to know our legislators now, before the session begins. When the action is hectic in the legislative session, no legislator can see everyone. Generally, legislators will see and talk with people they know and trust. We need to build that kind of relationship now."

personal desires to journey to new places and to meet new people.

"We just came back from Maryland," she said. "We go there every year for the bird festival where Gunder gets ideas for his carved wooden bird projects."

Then there were the trips to Oregon and Idaho, among others. Because they don't have children of their own, they perhaps have had more opportunities to pursue their interests.

"We don't have children — that's why we have to get them from others," she said, referring to "her" special children in 4-H. "And I've found a lot of nice ones."

Ruth enjoys needlepoint and playing bridge and participating in activities of the church circle as well as other activities at Trinity Lutheran church.

"I've alwasy been busy. There's always something to do it seems," she said.

Her words, "everything in our home has a special meaning to us," were emphasized through the display of paintings, carved birds and needlepoint projects throughout the warm comfortable home. Beneath her plaque received as Woman of the Year of the Thief River Falls Business and Professional Women's club, hung her Friend of 4-H plaque. The sincere look of appreciation upon her face as we admired the awards needed no further explanation.

"That my husband's favorite," she said, turning her attention to a fancy needlepoint wall hanging in the hallway.

"Everything I do, I do because of my husband," she said. "He goes along with me 100 per cent."

Rites Held For Lloyd Quesnell Of This City

Lloyd W. Quesnell, 68, of this city, died unexpectedly on Tuesday afternoon, November 18.

Funeral services were held Friday at 11 a.m., at St. Bernard's Catholic church, with Rev. James Bernauer as celebrant and Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements. Interment was in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Carol Amundson provided the organ music and Judy DuPree led the songs.

Honorary pallbearers were Clifford Bjorkman, Clair O'Hara, Harvey Patten and fellow Soo Line railroad employees.

Serving as active pallbearers were Robert Robarge, Willard Stromberg, James Berg, Stanley Egenes, George Munt and Harold Buck.

Lloyd W. Quesnell was born on Dec. 29, 1911 at Wahpeton, ND, to the late George and Leah Quesnell. The family moved to Terrebonne when Lloyd was a young child and he attended school and grew to manhood there. After school he began working on road construction.

On Aug. 10, 1935 he was united in marriage to Fern Collins at Thief River Falls. After their marriage they made their home in Thief River Falls where they have since resided. He continued to work on road construction and also worked for Land O'Lakes for many years. In 1944 he began working for the Soo Line railroad and retired on Nov. 21, 1975 as a brakeman. He served as president of the UTU for many years and was also a member of the Elks Lodge.

He is survived by his wife Fern; one daughter, Mrs. Robert (Judy) Baumgart of Forest Lake; one son, John "Jack" Quesnell of Minneapolis; six grandchildren; three sisters: Mrs. Gust (Loretta) Craft of California, Mrs. Leo (Vi) LaCourse of Wisconsin and Mrs. Cleone Fuchek of Washington; and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents.

Services For H. Grondahl Held Saturday

Henry Grondahl, Thief River Falls, died Wednesday, November 19 at Oakland Park nursing home at the age of 90. He was a farmer and buttermaker in the area for over 40 years.

Funeral services for Henry Grondahl were held Saturday, November 22, at Grace Lutheran church, Grygla at 2 p.m. Rev. Robert Amundson officiated with Melanie Lunsetter as organist and Mrs. Howard Lunsetter as soloist. Interment will be in Northwood cemetery with Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Harley McMillin, Dean McMillin, Randy Larson, Lowell Larson, Gerald Holthusen and Dale Grondahl.

Henry Grondahl was born Sept. 29, 1890 at Argusville, ND, to Magnus and Helen Gronvold Grondahl. He was baptized as an infant and moved with his family to the Holt area in 1891 where his father homesteaded. In the Holt area he grew to manhood, attended school and was confirmed in the Nazareth Lutheran church.

On Oct. 30, 1916 he was united in marriage to Bertha Modin at Middle River. They farmed for 18 years in Northwood township, Beltrami county and Grondahl worked for a number of years at the state game and fish department. In 1938 they moved to Goodridge where he worked as a buttermaker at the creamery there. After a move to Gatzke he also worked as a buttermaker. At retirement, the Grondahls moved to Steenerson township, Beltrami county, where they lived until moving to Northland village in Thief River Falls in 1973. In the spring of 1979 Grondahl moved to Oakland Park nursing home following some time as a patient at the CNC unit at Northwestern hospital.

He is survived by his wife, Bertha; one son, Kenneth of Palm City, FL; three daughters, Mrs. Glenn (Karyl) Larson of Gatzke, Mrs. Philip (Ardell) Roen of Grygla and Mrs. Donald (Betty) McMillin of Roseau; one brother, Oliver of Holt; 20 grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren.

Grondahl was preceded in death by his parents, two sisters, one brother, two daughters and one grandson.

Kermit Dupont Rites Held At Red Lake Falls

Kermit J. Dupont, 74, died Tuesday, November 18 at St. John's hospital in Red Lake Falls following a lengthy illness. He had been a resident of Red Lake Falls since early childhood, spending the past 11 years as a resident of Fairview Manor in that city.

Mass of the resurrection with military rites for Kermit Dupont was held Friday, November 21 at 1:30 p.m. in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Red Lake Falls. Rev. Jerome Fellon served as celebrant. Music was provided by the St. Joseph's children's choir with Sister Patrice as organist. Nap Pinsonneault, Bud Zimpel, Harvey Klipping, Henry Klipping, Omer Sauve and James Zimpel were pallbearers.

Interment will be in St. Anthony Catholic cemetery, Terrebonne with Rev. Frank Traynor officiating. Petterson Funeral home, Red Lake Falls, was in charge of arrangements.

Kermit Dupont was born Feb. 7, 1906 at Terrebonne to George and Anna (Perrs) Dupont. In 1912 he moved to Red Lake Falls, residing in that area until his death. He served with the U.S. Army air force during World War II, worked for the Northern Pacific railroad and then farmed east of Red Lake Falls until retirement in 1969.

Survivors include one brother, F. Jude Dupont, Bellingham, WA; three sisters, Sister M. Estelle Dupont O.S.B., Mount St. Benedict, Crookston, Mrs. Eugene (Marie) Arnett, Springfield, MO, and Mrs. Lester (Mildred) Holmes, Fergus Falls; and several nieces and nephews.

Dupont was preceded in death by his parents, one brother and three sisters.

Services Held Today For A. Erickson, 81

Adolph Erickson, 81, formerly of the Grygla community and recently a resident of the Thief River Falls community, died on Thursday evening, November 20, at Northwestern hospital.

Funeral services will be held Monday (today) at 2 p.m. at Zion Lutheran church of Thief River Falls with Rev. Richard Larson officiating. Interment will be in the Valle cemetery of rural Grygla.

Jerry Joringdal will serve as organist and a duet will be sung by Mrs. Roy Nordby and Mrs. Rodney Anderson.

Serving as pallbearers are Sam Brattell, Orvis Nordby, Kernel Paulson, Clifford Sandsmark, Marvin Sistad and Palmer Sandsmark.

The body will repose at the Green Funeral home until one hour prior to the time of services.

Adolph Erickson was born Nov. 6, 1899 near Grand Forks, ND, to the late Gust and Christina Erickson. When he was five years old the family homesteaded in Valley township, Marshall county. He attended District 94 county school and grew up in Valley township.

He was united in marriage to Tilda Hyland Nov. 20, 1926 at her home in Grygla. They lived on a farm at Grygla for two years and then moved to Waukegan, Ill., where he worked as a carpenter for three years. They then moved back to the Grygla community where Adolph worked as a carpenter. On June 1, 1976, they moved to Thief River Falls where he continued to work as a carpenter until May of 1979 when he suffered a stroke.

Erickson was a member of Zion Lutheran church in Thief River Falls and formerly of the Grace Lutheran church in Grygla. He was active in community affairs, having served on the rural school board at Grygla, Valley township board, Farmers' Union board for 25 years, GTA Farmers' Elevator board in Thief River Falls and the P.C.A. board for 27 years in Thief River Falls. He also served on the Valle church board and Grace church board and was a member of the Minnesota association of cooperatives.

He is survived by his wife, Tilda, four sons, Dale of Thief River Falls, Rev. Clinton of Duluth, Gerald of Cedar Rapids, Iowa and Dennis of Aitkin; and 12 grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by one brother and two sisters.

TO MY FRIENDS IN DIST. 3

Thank you for your loyal vote in the general election. I thoroughly enjoyed making new friends and also seeing my old friends again. You certainly are a great! group of people.

— Lyle Jennings

Dear friends,

Have you ever marvelled at the human eye? At great distance, you can discern the shape of a bird and identify it - you can differentiate an elm leaf from a maple or an oak.

And color - the pleasure of the myriad shades of color, everchanging hues in the landscape, the sky, a flower garden.

In the gift of sight alone, there is so much to be thankful for.

Children Learn To Talk At Different Levels Of Growth

by Jeanne Hanson
University News Service

It's almost a miracle. At six months, a baby babbles but is unable even to imitate a "hello." At two and a half years, the child can form clear sentences.

Babies learn language quickly. But the process is less regular than psychologists used to think, according to results of a two-year intensive study of three children — Alissa, Justin and Sadie — by a University of Minnesota child psychologist.

The children, monitored monthly throughout their language development, had different language strengths and leapfrogged over each other in their progress. Their language training, provided in those cases mostly by their mothers, also varied.

"None of the mothers ever spent less than 35 per cent of her time in language teaching," said Catherine Lord, professor of child development at the University of Minnesota. Even when their children were only six months old, the mothers engaged in "dialogues" with them. This involved interpreting even the child's movements as an effort to join in a conversation and supplying the child's side of the dialogue.

As their children grew, the mothers all increased the complexity of their speech but remained somewhat repetitive for the benefit of the child, Lord said. They varied in how well-formed their sentences were, in whether they confined conversations to items present, and in other ways.

Although it is still unclear exactly which teaching strategies worked best, the mother whose child was the most advanced at the end of the study did several things slightly different from the others. She found the most meaning in her child's early words, did the most coaching ("Say 'book.'") and used the simplest speech.

All children learn language at different rates, Lord said. They enter the "one word stage" somewhere between 12 and 20 months. At this point, they begin to use single words like "dat" and "kitty" spontaneously. In Lord's study, Justin was the last of the three to enter this stage, but soon used a greater range of one-word phrases than the other children. Sadie entered the state at 12 months, but had been imitating words since she was eight months old.

Then, at about 20 months, children usually enter "stage two," the beginning of two and three-word phrases such as "look, doggy" or "see dat boy." But some skip this stage almost entirely, Lord said, and jump to the occasional three or four-word sentences and question-asking of "stage three." This often occurs by about 21 months with questions like, "Is that a birdy?" In Lord's study, Alissa had the largest vocabulary and longest sentences in this stage. She then fell behind Sadie, but is new a "spectacular first-grader," Lord said.

By "stage four" (about 33 months), children can use sentences of four or more words. And "stage five" comes at four-and-a-half to five years, when the child can form complex sentences and vary sentence length at will, Lord said.

"Parents shouldn't worry unless their child says nothing at all by 18 months old or speaks no sentences by 30 months," Lord said.

Langauge cannot be used as a measure of intelligence until a girl is seven or eight years old and a boy is a bit older, she added. Children with advanced language development by age two are probably intelligent, but those without it are not necessarily less intelligent. Speed at which a child moves through the stages is more important than when he or she starts them. Boys and later-born children in a family usually begin a bit later. Parents often worry unnecessarily about their boy's language development in early elementary school, Lord said.

Children with language disorders who are not retarded or autistic are rare, she said. Probably one or two children out of 10,000 fall into this group. They seem to have untraceable, minimal brain damage from birth, often as a result of being born quite prematurely. They cannot, for example, learn a new word and a new face at the same time. But even in these cases, the birth problems are not as significant as the social problems that can come from them, Lord said.

The family's attitude toward learning and education is the most important long-range factor for normal language development, she added.

To improve their children's language development, parents should remember to include them in conversations, Lord said, instead of relying on television, a poor language teacher. They should ask questions, listen and avoid a lot or correcting. The usefulness of "baby talk" has never really been evaluated, she said. But some aspects of it, such as repetition, sound-play and varied intonations, do seem to further young children's interest in conversation.

EXAMINING the mitten tree in the new senior craft shop in St. Hilaire is Hilda Opdahl (left), comprehensive senior support program director of Inter-County community council — the sponsor of eight craft shops in the area. Idea behind the various craft shops is to recognize the handicraft work of seniors over 55, including those who are handicapped, by placing their items on sale at various shops, with space donated by cities or private individuals in Bagley, Fertile, Fosston, Mentor, Oklee, Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls and now St. Hilaire. Each participant contributing crafts places his or her own prices on the item. St. Hilaire shop is presently open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and is located behind the St. Hilaire post office. The shop, which opened Thursday, contains an assortment of Christmas items. Employee at the shop, funded through CETA, is Lonie Dargon.

Adoption Trend To Be Viewed On Public TV

A shortage of healthy white infants has meant big changes for adoption in the U.S., according to a new public television outreach program: "Adoption In America," scheduled Wednesday, November 26 at 8 p.m. on Prairie public television. The "Cover Story" special airs during national adoption week.

"Adoption In America" is the third in the PBS "Cover Story" series. Immediately following the national broadcast, some 100 PBS stations will air locally produced programs featuring adoptive parents and adoption professionals who will give viewers up-to-date information on local community services and activities.

Legalized abortion, the widespread use of birth control and single mothers who opt to keep their children are contributing factors in the severely reduced number of infants available for adoption.

"Adoption In America reports the results: years-long waits for white babies and an increased number of adoptions for older children, foreign children, black children and handicapped children. The magazine program also features two searches — a Vietnamese mother looks every day for eight children she surrendered to Operation Babylift, and a young adopted woman is tearfully reunited with her birth mother after 23 years.

Bill To Raise Price Support Passes House

A bill to increase minimum price support loans for the 1981 crop year has been approved by the U.S. House of Representatives.

Speaking in support of the bill, Congressman Arlan Stangeland said "Passage of this legislation is essential. The close of Congress is at hand and the American farmer must be reassured that this nation supports him wholeheartedly and appreciates the sacrifices he has made as a result of the Russian grain embargo imposed by this government.

"Grain prices have fluctuated and markets have disappeared as a result of governmental actions. This legislation will not guarantee that similar actions will not occur in the future, but it will help minimize their effect on farm prices."

The bill (H.R. 3765) accepts Senate amendments which authorize increases in the minimum statutory price support loans for the 1981 crop. It acts to:

—Increase the loan rate of crop from $2 to $2.25 per bushel;

—Increase the loan rate for wheat from $2.35 to $3 per bushel;

—Establish the minimum loan rate for soybeans at $5.02 per bushel; and —Set loan levels for grain going into the farmer-held reserve at $3.30 per bushel for wheat and $2.40 per bushel for corn.

It also allows farmers additional flexibility in making production decisions by moving the announcement date for feed grain set asides from November 15 to November 1. Furthermore, the bill authorizes a price support loan program for grain purchased and stored by small-scale producers of alcohol for fuel. This provision should help these small processors in establishing a domestic alcohol fuel production program which is needed to assist the nation in meeting energy needs and establish energy independence, Stangeland said.

MCC Parents - Teachers Form Organization

A new parent-teacher organization for Marshall county central parents and teachers was formed November 17 at the Newfolden elementary school.

Those 30 attending the meeting elected Leola Engelsrud, president; Doreen Amundson, vice president; and Betty Carlson, secretary-treasurer.

Elementary school principal Jim Hodney presented the advantages for students, parents and teachers with a functioning parent-teacher organization.

A group discussion included possible programs for the future, establishing an advisory council and whether or not to affiliate with the state PTA organization.

Entertainment was provided by Sweet Spirit of Newfolden. Next meeting is scheduled for Jan. 19, 1981 at 8 p.m. and parents and teachers of all children in District 441, at Newfolden and Viking elementary schools and the Newfolden high school, are urged to attend..

On Giving Thanks

Columnist Mayme Sharp, who writes the "Farmside Inn" column in the Becker County Record at Detroit Lakes, commented on giving thanks in a recent offering.

She begins her column with a mythical conversation among mythical characters representing several areas of livelihood. Leading off the column is a statement by one that "I bet if all the thankful folks were lined up in a row, that line wouldn't reach very far." Another replies, "Oh yeah? They'd reach all right. I bet they'd be reaching for a lot more." Another gives the opinion that the only optimists in the line would be the guys who hadn't heard the news that day.

Then her column continues as follows:

That pessimism was all startling, and then we got to thinking that it is too true. Somehow we are all like that. We do not appreciate the blessings we have till we lose them. We thought about the world's suffering people — hungry, even starving thousands. And the ones who live in fear all the time, with wars and terrorism that scares, wounds and kills. Thanksgiving is surely hard for millions of people.

"You know," Lucille Marvin said, "I should think that President Carter would be thankful as that heavy burden drops off his shoulders. When he took over that big job four years ago, he was full of assurance, confidence and promises, but he was not finding the answers. He has not even found any way to get our American hostages free; and there are many hard unanswered problems, and now he is free of them all. I wonder if he won't have a happy Thanksgiving.

We who love our groceries as we do, and who demand oil, oil, oil, lay our worries and burdens onto the President and say "You'd better straighten things out. We've got to have less taxes and lower prices too." I wonder: what kind of a Thanksgiving will Reagan have?"

Reverend Smythe gave us something to think about. "It is those who have starved a little, who thank God the most. Unless we have suffered we are not grateful to God for health and do not thank God for comfort. If we well caloried Americans could look back to that first Thanksgiving Day, we would wonder what the Puritans had to be thankful for; but they were sincerely grateful to God for a harvest of grain and corn — that would look pitifully small to us now. May we consider this suffering world and be thankful for our 'daily bread' — and not demand cake."

Pete laughed, "Yes, suffering thorn apples, we Americans drive many miles to celebrate Thanksgiving through our full stomachs. And do we say "Thank you'?"

I bowed my head and repeated Bobby Burn's little prayer of thanks:

Some hate meat, and canna eat
And some wad eat, that want it.
But we hae meat and we can eat
And sae the Lord be thankit.

The Question Is Asked

Americans must in general be considered a generous people. Not only have we responded time and again to the unfortunate throughout the world, we have made extensive effort to give understanding, equality and even preference to those with special problems in our midst.

There is something to be said about the oft-repeated statement of being generous to a fault. The Lapeer County Press of Michigan asks a question which we have seen no one have the courage to ask before. The answer may not be clear-cut, but is certainly worthy of some thought.

Here's what the County Press said in a recent issue:

Never is a question raised about the laws requiring facilities for the handicapped in all public buildings and vehicles. Ramps, toilets, aisles, doorways must all be designed to permit use by the handicapped. Even the new buses are required to have wide doors and hydraulic lifts to admit wheelchairs.

Sounds like a great idea. But did anyone ever talk to the handicapped about it?

It's figured that the cost of these laws now totals over $7,000 for every handicapped person in Michigan. Many of these facilities are never used. At the 4-year-old County Press building, for example, we have yet to see a wheelchair user come up our ramp or use our toilets.

We wonder how the handicapped would have voted if we had asked them, "Would you prefer wheelchair facilities in public buildings or $7,000 in cash?"

We suspect the majority would take the money.

The law is another example of good intention gone awry. Instead of asking if a proposed law is good, our lawmakers should ask, "Is it worth it? Is there a better answer? Could the money be better spent elsewhere?"

Time For Some Fortitude

The 1981 session of the Minnesota legislature will be a time for the state's lawmakers to show some real fortitude in dealing with the problem of our troubled highway system. And they will have to deal straight and above the table with the highway user looking on. Unlike other taxes tied to percentages, user taxes don't increase automatically with inflation.

There is no question the highway system has been crippled severely by multiple blows, namely reduced sales in gallons of motor fuel which are taxes on a gallon basis; increased costs of materials and equipment used in road construction and maintenance; and most recently defeat of an amendment to the constitution which would have made sale of bonds possible to provide desperately needed funds.

Legislators in the recent past have cowered behind their desks whenever the suggestion of gasoline tax increases has flown about the legislative chambers. That aversion to act has compounded the problem, and continuation of the refusal to face facts will be unforgiveably financially irresponsible.

In our opinion, the legislature should waste no time in the 1981 session to increase the gas tax and divert sales tax money from automobile sales into the highway fund. And it should take an honest, open-minded and comprehensive look into whether or not commercial truckers are paying their fair share of user fees in relation to the damage they cause to the state's roadways.

Engineers in the department of transportation will tell you that the passenger cars which travel Minnesota highways could never do enough damage to wear out the road surface. But heavy trucks, and especially over-loaded trucks, can break down a roadway in a remarkably short span of time. If there is no money to adequately repair the roadway, the demolition will be that much quicker — and the truckers will be the first to complain.

It is true that commercial truckers are important to virtually every segment of Minnesota commerce and industry — and that means everyone who buys or sells at wholesale or retail in the state is affected. It is true that transportation or freight rates affect the prices of the goods we buy, and that increased costs for road user fees would drive up freight rates.

But it is also true that the burden of those increased costs would be spread over the population of the state on an equitable basis, whether the people drive a personal automobile or not. It is not equitable, in our estimation, to compel the private auto owner to subsidize the commercial carrier by over-payment of user fees in relation to road damage caused.

Increased costs of motor fuel in the past several years have left auto owners reeling, and the end is far from in sight. Projections of gas prices in the area of $1.60 to $1.80 per gallon in 1981 have already been made. But the 1980 model car is 50 per cent more fuel efficient than the average car of a dozen years ago, and by 1990 the average car on a Minnesota highway will probably get about twice the gas mileage as today.

As cars get better mileage, they will still be going about the same number of miles each year. The fuel tax would have to double by 1990 to allow the state to collect the same tax per mile as today. In terms of real dollars in gas tax, the owner of a 1980 car is paying 68 per cent less per year in 1980 than he did a dozen years ago.

Can a driver tolerate an increase of nearly a dollar a gallon for gasoline over a several year period and legitimately complain about a few cents increase in gas tax to build and maintain the roads he uses?

Where, we wonder, will the realistic legislator surface to lead both his colleagues and his constituents in this distasteful but necessary action? Will there be someone in this session with enough fortitude and foresight. We certainly hope so.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Say Big Brother, Can You Spare About $50,000?

The chances are you haven't heard about this because the event received very little publicity. Nevertheless, a recent meeting of the Quadrennial Commission on Federal Executive Compensation, which reviewed pay scales of members of Congress, federal judges and top appointed federal executives, demonstrated the tremendous obstacles President-elect Reagan will face in trying to cut the cost of government.

The meeting was attended by our chief economist, Dr. Richard Rahn, and two members of his staff, who went to testify on behalf of the U.S. Chamber. While awaiting their turn, they witnessed a scene that almost brought tears to their eyes. Here, briefly, is a bit of the sad tale they heard.

Groups of federal judges, whose pay is now in the $50-$60,000 range, rose to give emotional and eloquent accounts of the deprivations they are having to endure just to scrape by on their paltry salaries. Some of the sacrifices seem mind-boggling, even unconscionable. For example, they include not being able to send their children to Harvard, having to drive cars with 110,000 miles on them and not being able to afford having their basements pumped out. Watch out Mother Teresa, you've got competition!

To remedy such squalid living conditions, the judges recommended a new salary of $97,000 for district judges, and warned that $90,000 should be considered an absolute bare minimum. These heart-throbbing stories evoked much sympathy from us. And yet . . . and yet. We were constantly jarred back to reality by two nagging facts: First, the average attorney maintaining an office makes slightly more than $20,000 a year after meeting all his or her expenses and risks of self-employment. Second, these judges who were pleading poverty already earn more than three times the average American family's income, which, incidentally, in many cases includes the earnings of a wife.

When it came time for the Chamber to testify, we bravely presented our case, but it was received by — how should I best describe it — perhaps a certain lack of warmth? Why, you ask? Well, we said, for example, that since many people seek to become members of Congress, and since our Congressmen are now well remunerated and, indeed, enjoy outside benefits, the Chamber could recommend only a modest increase in pay. As for judges, since many people also seek those positions, and since federal judgeships generally pay significantly more than state judgeships, compensation for that group should not be increased at all. We did recommend, however, that pay for top federal executives be increased substantially from the present $60-$70,000 range, since those jobs do entail very great executive responsibilities. But we recommended that mid-level executive positions not be raised significantly since they are already at competitive levels.

When it came time for questioning, Dr. Rahn was immediately challenged on his statement that members of Congress enjoy outside benefits. He pointed out that Congressmen do get a tax-free housing allowance, and a travel allowance, and that Martha Griffiths, one of the members of the Quadrennial Commission, had noted that the pension benefits accrued by Congressmen have a cash value of approximately $20,000 a year.

Dr. Rahn was then asked how he could make a recommendation of no pay increase for federal judges. He explained that on the basis of general Chamber policy we could not consider the large, requested pay increase for judges as consistent with sound management principles. That did it! At this point, the tone of the questioning turned hostile.

It might interest you to know that based on the list of witnesses appearing before the Commission, the Chamber appeared to be the only group that did not go to ask for more money. For its part, the Commission seemed most interested in orchestrating a sympathetic forum for the desperate plight of federal employees earning $50-$60,000 and more. Were not many of these people the very ones who cheered loudest when President John F. Kennedy once said:

"Ask not what your country can do for you.

"Ask what you can do for your country."

Garden Valley Phone Book Is Out For 1981

Several hundred new listings and other current information are contained in Garden Valley's 1981 telephone directory, 18,000 copies of which were released this week.

Upon receipt of the new books, all old directories should be discarded to avoid using incorrect information.

Emergency numbers (including fire and police departments) are printed on the inside front cover and on page one of the new telephone book. Space is provided for members to write in their important emergency numbers.

Numbers of Garden Valley members for whom service was installed after the printing of the new directory — or other recent changes — can be obtained by dialing toll-free numbers 1-411, if information requested is within their own exchange, or 1-555-1212 for other exchanges within Area 218. For updated numbers in other areas, dial 1 plus the area code plus 555-1212.

To provide a convenient reference for members of the cooperative, the complete corporate by-laws of the Garden Valley Telephone company are included in the 1981 directory.

The photograph of a moonlit lake scene appearing on the front cover of the new book was selected from among the entries in this year's directory cover contest. The picture was taken by Rev. Bruce Frederickson of Bagley. The panoramic aerial view on the back cover was taken near McIntosh by Beth Mjelde of Erskine.

Garden Valley members may now use the following telephone numbers when calling the cooperative's headquarters in Erskine: Dial 687-2121 for repair service; dial 687-5251 for other telephone business.

There will be no long distance toll charges for calls to these company numbers when dialed directly from any of Garden Valley's 24 exchanges.

These new numbers will continue to provide members with a convenient toll-free method for calling the office under a system which will be more cost efficient for the cooperative.

Goodridge To Participate In Skills Program

Goodridge public school will participate in the Minnesota basic skills program. Mrs. Helen Davidson, who has been appointed the School District 561 local basic skills director, is completing a comprehensive program of preparation during the months of October and November of this year.

Workshops are being conducted by Doug Sorenson, basic skills coordinator for the Northwest Minnesota educational cooperative service unit in Thief River Falls.

This program of preparation will train the Goodridge director in the development and maintenance of a high quality basic skills program. Training will include local program assessment, program planning, implementation alternatives, inservice in basic skills instruction, assessment of pupils' needs, curriculum selection, and progress evaluation.

Basic skills program was established by the 1979 legislature and Governor Al Quie to provide leadership, technical assistance and training in basic skills instruction on a regional basis to those school districts and non-public schools who choose to participate. The program has grown out of the concern that all children have the right to achieve their full educational potential; and that children from all socio-economic backgrounds deserve the opportunity to receive instruction in the basic skills of listening, speaking, reading, writing and computation in order to be able to function politically, economically and socially in a democratic society.

Top Herds In County DHIA Are Listed

Jerry Hamre, supervisor of the Pennington county dairy herd improvement association (DHIA), lists the following herds as top in the association for August and September.

In first place is Gene Nelson, whose herd produced an average of 52.7 pounds of milk and 2.06 pounds of butterfat, followed by Duane Krohn, 50.3 and 1.84; Hanson Heritage, 49.4 and 1.64; Knute Nesland, 48.2 and 1.51; Leland Nelson, 47.2 and 1.58; Clarence Swanson, 47.1 and 1.80; Gordon Wetterlund and Son, 47.0 and 1.72; Merle Lundeen, 46.0 and 1.59; Warren & Lowell Hamrick, 44.0 and 1.85; and Walter Brothers farm, 43.7 and 1.66.

Herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butterfat produced is averaged out over all the cows. If many dry cows are included in the herd, the average for the month may be low, even though the cows which are milking are high producers.

There were 29 DHIA herds and five owner-sampler herds on August-September test for a total of 34 herds on test. There were 47 cows which completed records with over 625 pounds of fat in 305 days or less.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

This is in reply to a letter by Mr. Fred Montry published in your November 10, 1980 edition concerning a visit to our plant by Congressman Stangeland. Mr. Montry's letter mis-stated our policy in regard to visits to our plant by candidates for political office and accordingly, I believe it's important to set the record straight.

Arctic's long-standing policy is to accommodate any reasonable request by any such political candidate to visit our plant. Mr. Stangeland made such a request during the recent campaign; Mr. Wenstrom did not. If Mr. Wenstrom had desired to arrange such a visit, he would have received the same courtesy shown Mr. Stangeland.

Very truly yours,

ENERGY ASSISTANCE

Energy Assistance funds for low-income residents of Pennington, Red Lake, and East Polk counties will soon be available according to Inter-County Community council. I.C.C.C. staff said over $850,000 in fuel assistance money is expected to help approximately 1700 eligible households with high fuel bills.

The Energy Assistance money will be available to low-income households in the form of a credit toward future energy costs, or as an actual payment for already existing fuel oil, natural gas, electric, coal, wood, or other energy bills. Renters and households which cut their own wood for fuel may also be eligible for the Energy Assistance Program.

Income eligibility for the fuel Assistance Program is based on the total number of individuals in each household and gross income. Persons living alone who earn less than $4,738 are eligible for the energy assistance. The income guideline for a household of four is $12,240 and $16,890 for a household of six. Households with more than six persons should add $2,450 for each additional member when determining income eligibility.

Medical expenses in excess of three per cent of a household's annual income can be deducted when determining income eligibility for the energy assistance. Persons must bring medical expense records, as well as proof of income and fuel bills, when applying for the Energy Assistance Program.

Individuals or any household member receiving Aid to families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Food Stamps, or General Assistance, are categorically eligible for the program.

The actual amount of energy assistance provided to an eligible household is determined by a formula. It takes into account the type of energy which the household uses and the average cost of that same type of energy in the region in relation to household income. Assistance payments will range from $50 to $1,045.

Chimney Fires Are Among Hazards Of Heating With Wood

In scores of American households this winter, the snug atmosphere around the family's wood-burning stove will be broken by a thundering roar, a shaking, red-hot stove pipe and immediate danger to family and belongings. A chimney fire!

Chimney fires usually result from the build-up of a sooty substance called creosote inside the chimney. "When a chimney fire occurs, three actions are crucial," advises a fire safety engineer for a large insurance company. "Call the fire department. Close all air inlets and dampers. And don't throw water on a hot stove; that could crack the stove and cause a second fire."

Chimney fire, according to the engineer, is only one of the risks of using or installing a wood-burning stove improperly. "There are a lot of mistakes the inexperienced stove owner can make," he said. "Like disposing of ashes in paper bags, or other combustible containers, putting your stove on an unprotected wood floor, using a stove pipe that's too small or cheaply constructed — those things might not cause a fire right away, but they probably will eventually. The risk is serious."

According to the national fire data center, heating systems burning solid fuel (wood or coal), are associated with about 49,000 home fires each year, involving about 250 fatalities, 290 serious injuries and more than $110 million in direct property losses each year.

If you have a wood-burning stove — or are thinking about buying one — it's essential to consider proper installation. Check with local building authorities before putting in your stove, even if this is not required in your town. You will probably get cost — and time-saving advice on materials, space requirements, suppliers and workmanship. And arrange for an inspection after your stove is installed.

Stove owners should follow installation instructions to the letter. "Above all, don't try to short-cut the manufacturer's directions, don't skimp on clearances from walls and floors, and don't count on word of mouth advice from other stove owners," the engineer stressed. Covering a wall with aluminum foil, for example, does not make it non-combustible."

Stove owners should follow detailed instructions, available from the manufacturer or retailer, to be sure that stove pipe dimensions and materials are adequate. Ordinarily, the pipe should not pass through a wall or ceiling.

"If you must go through a combustible wall, you'll have to allow an 18 inch clearance all around the pipe. Or, you can use a section of approved factory-built chimney," he added.

"As for hooking the stove pipe to a masonry chimney, you'll need to extend the connector through the masonry wall of the chimney to the inner face of the flue liner (not beyond), and cement it to the masonry. It's important to use high-temperature cement."

Remember that every stove needs a damper or draft regulator to help control combustion. If your's is automatic, be sure it's installed according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Your chimney should be inspected before installing your stove and annually thereafter. If you are buying a factory-built chimney, be sure it has recognized testing laboratory approval. If you are connecting to an existing fireplace chimney, you must seal off the chimney below the stove pipe's point of entry to prevent toxic gases from coming into the room. It's dangerous to connect more than one heating device to a single flue.

As for chimney maintenance, remember that creosote residue accumulates on a relatively cool chimney lining and, when ignited, causes an extremely dangerous fire. To prevent creosote build-up, maintain a moderate fire — hot enough to prevent a cool flue liner, but not so hot that it ignites creosote already formed.

Burn only dry, well-seasoned hardwood. (Green wood produces large amounts of creosote and is especially dangerous in an "air-tight" stove; trash is highly flammable and will produce a sudden, hot fire.)

Above all, never start a fire with gasoline, kerosene or other flammable liquids. And don't use artificial logs in your stove. The gases generated could cause an explosion.

To melt small amounts of creosote on your flue lining, burn your stove hot once a day, for about 30 minutes. Don't make this your first fire of the day — the sudden heat could crack your stove or ignite the creosote residue.

However conscientious you are in day-to-day habits, it's still necessary to have your chimney inspected each fall for creosote.

Inspections should be more frequent — as often as once a month — if you have been burning green wood or suspect a creosote build-up.

Although the precaution may seem obvious, many people fail to keep clothing, log hoops and other combustible materials at least three feet away from the stove. Parents should also remember that a wood-burning stove does not look "hot" to a small child. Mark off an area surrounding the stove which is "off limits" to small fry.

"A wood-burning stove is an excellent way to save on your fuel bills," the engineer concluded, "My family has one and we get a lot of pleasure out of it. But we realize it's not a toy — it has to be treated with respect."

REACT Assists Drivers Through CB Channel 9

There's a mostly invisible army out there whose sole purpose is to help motorists involved in an emergency situation, reports the Automotive information council (AIC).

The emergency volunteers are part of an organization named REACT International, a non-profit organization whose members are part of local teams which monitor CB Channel 9 24 hours a day, using their own CB equipment.

Should a motorist have an emergency — an accident, a flat tire, run out of gas — he tunes in Channel 9 and asks for the local REACT team. The REACT member then obtains all the pertinent information, such as injuries, location and other needed details and calls the appropriate emergency service, such as police, ambulance or tow truck. There is no charge to the user for the REACT service.

Formed in 1962, the organization's teams have handled an estimated 85 million emergency calls, including more than 20 million highway accidents.

It has about 100,000 volunteer members and 2,000 teams in virtually every city in the country and also overseas.

REACT also works with national and local Red Cross chapters to provide help during large emergencies.

Members also work with the American trucking assns. to serve more than a million cups of coffee annually to holiday weekend travelers along the nation's highways.

AIC commends these participants for their efforts on behalf of the nation's motorists.

REACT International is at 75 E. Wacker Drive, Chicago, 60601.

Lower Highway Funding Means Poorer Roads

Revenue reductions and their related budget cuts as they affect street and highway maintenance operations this winter are cause for concern for William H. Lautz, chairman of the national safety council's committee on winter driving hazards.

Because he is also project development engineer in the division of highways and transportation facilities of the Wisconsin department of transportation, Lautz is well aware of the ill-effects of economic downturns, reduced gasoline tax income and federal funding upon highway operations.

"Mnay areas across the country," Lautz pointed out, "will not have the money they've had in the past to provide the level of manpower, equipment and materials to clear winter clogged and slick roadways. This places an even greater burden on every driver's know-how on overcoming adverse winter road conditions."

The primary cause of winter highway mishaps, Lautz observed, is a combination of the well-known winter twin-destroyers — poor traction and reduced visibility. These problems compound when maintenance operations are curtailed or delayed and the most common accidents that result include sliding off the road, skidding into intersections and skidding into other vehicles.

Duluth Faculty Suspended From 'U'M Senate

Faculty on the Duluth campus of the University of Minnesota (UMD) are no longer part of the university senate and will not be unless they bargain for membership through union negotiations.

The board of regents "suspended" senate participation by the UMD faculty on an 11-0 vote. Regent Lauris Krenik was not present.

The university senate is an elected body of faculty and students from all five campuses that meets with president C. Peter Magrath and other administrators and has legislative control over internal educational matters. The senate is the primary voice of the faculty.

The regents' vote is the result of a UMD faculty decision last month to join a union, the University of Minnesota Duluth Education association. UNDEA was certified November 3 as the official union for UMD faculty, and must now negotiate with the university under provisions of the public employee labor relations act (PELRA).

According to attorney Tom Keller, the law is "quite specific in suspending faculty participation in the existing governance structure." PELRA prohibits the discussion of "terms and conditions of employment" outside certain limits, and working conditions are often discussed through senate channels.

"To continue to use those mechanisms would be a clear violation of that act," Keller told the board members. Keller said that action was also necessary to "assert inherent managerial rights." Senate authority is delegated by the board of regents.

UND faculty may decide it wants to remain part of the senate structure, but will have to bargain for that right through its union, said Nils Hasselmo, vice president for administration and planning.

The regents' action also suspended the constitution of the Duluth campus assembly and the constitutions of the schools and other units of the campus where unionized faculty members work.

Several aspects of the UMD governance system were immediately reinstated by Magrath "on an interim basis." They include regulations for promotion and tenure, grievance procedures, and faculty activity required by law because of outside memberships.

Magrath said the temporary provisions were necessary to keep the university functioning until a contract with the UMD faculty is signed.

Hasselmo said he expects contract negotiations to begin in the next several weeks. The UMD faculty is the only group of university faculty members to unionize so far.

4H CLUB

Sanders

The Sanders 4-H Club met on November 14 at the Sanders Town Hall. 20 members, 9 parents, and six visitors were present.

The meeting was called to order by Larry Moe. Secretary Tracy Lord read the minutes of the last meeting. A treasurer's report was given by Jeff Moe. A committee was set up to plan the Christmas party.

A demonstration on pheasants was given by Jon Jagol. Edna Johnson presented a project talk on foods. Dale Dobias and Cindi Solem explained the correct and incorrect ways of giving a demonstration. The recreation was led by Michelle Lord and Doretta Mosloff.

The next meeting of the Sanders 4-H Club will be December 12.

New Solum

The New Solum 4-H club met at the Edington home on November 19. Twenty-two people were present including eleven 4-H members, three parents, three visitors and five leaders.

A report on the Holiday craft fair was given by Polly Edington. Mark Johnson mentioned that the new club project was to be Arts and crafts. Joyce Kron explained some of the activities that can be done in this project.

The club decided that each family was to donate $1.50 which will be given to Camp Sunshine and the Fergus Falls Hospital.

The club also decided to have a Christmas party sometime during Christmas vacation. It would be a roller skating party at The Place.

There was a discussion about raising money for the club and it was decided to consider participating in a flea market in the summer.

The new project material was handed out. Tarry Edington received an award for First Year Leader and Ron Solney one for third Year Junior Leader.

New members initiated were Val Noel, Gordon Hall, Jaki Weleski, Roy Natvik and Lisa Edington.

Mark Johnson and Cheryl VanHorn both gave demonstrations on Arts and Crafts. Mike VanHorn directed the program. Jaki Weleski played the piano. Tarry Edington talked about record keeping.

Recreation included the playing of the game called "Fruit Basket Upset" and was directed by Maria and Lisa Edington. The next meeting will be held at the Holmstroms.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Having recently been witness to a person suffering a heart attack, I would publicly like to acknowledge the heroic efforts made by the ambulance crew who were called to the scene. There was not a moment wasted. We are often ready to criticize when it seems to take a long time for an ambulance to arrive. However, there is no doubt in my mind now that they get there as swiftly as circumstances allow.

Also, I do not think the public appreciates the danger these people put themselves in. My office is located on a busy street when I frequently see ambulances pass. I am amazed at the number of people who do not pull over to the side of the street for an emergency vehicle. When seconds can mean the difference between life and death, are we really in that much of a hurry that we can't stop to let an ambulance pass?

Spring Wheat Quality Survey Is Completed

Quality of the 1980 hard red spring wheat crop is generally considered good, but not as good as the five year average, reports Minnesota wheat council chairman Einer Satter.

Late summer rains, resulting in a substantial amount of sprouting in Minnesota and North Dakota, reduced the overall quality of the wheat in the four state area, he said. Satter's comments were based on the results of a regional hard red spring wheat quality survey, conducted by the cereal chemistry and technology department at North Dakota state university. The survey was sponsored jointly by the Minnesota wheat council and the wheat commissions in North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana.

According to Satter, the regional average protein content, adjusted to reflect the production in each of the states, is 14.4 per cent on an "as is" basis, with Minnesota protein slightly below the average at 13.7 per cent. Average test weight is 58.9 pounds per bushel, with Minnesota very close at 58.5. The average moisture of the 1980 crop is 11.7 per cent, with the data indicating Minnesota wheat contained an average moisture of 12 per cent. The average grade of the 1980 crop is No. 1 northern spring wheat, compared to the five year average grade of No. 1 dark northern spring.

Satter reported that the wet conditions reduced the test weight, increased the damage and lowered the average grade of the 1980 spring wheat crop. He indicated, however, that the total defects to the crop as reported at a regional average of 2.1 per cent does not represent the total damage found in the 1980 crops. This is because very badly sprouted wheat does not necessarily get into the trade channels, or at least had not at the time of the survey.

According to Satter, a team of U.S. cereal specialists will be conducting a series of crop quality seminars in Europe in November to discuss the quality of the 1980 wheat crop with European buyers and processors. The seminar series is sponsored by U.S. Wheat Associates.

Dr. Bert D'Appolonia, a professor at the cereal chemistry and technology department of North Dakota State University, will be participating in the seminars to discuss the quality and utilization of the U.S. hard red spring wheat and durum crop. Dr. D'Appolonia will be reporting to the European buyers that, despite the higher damage in the 1980 crop, flour milled from the wheat should still give satisfactory baking performance.

Satter reported that the 1980 hard red spring wheat crop quality survey was the first to be completed on a regional basis by North Dakota state university. Previously the analysis was performed only on North Dakota production. Comprehensive regional survey was made possible in part by a grant from the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council, as part of its promotion program for Minnesota wheats.

East Grand Forks was selected as the "team to beat" in Section 8 high school hockey this winter, according to coaches who responded to a preseason poll conducted by Frank Fee of KROX radio in Crookston.

The defending Section 8 champion Green Wave received eight of the 15 first place votes from the 17 Section 8 coaches (Crosby-Ironton and Little Falls coaches did not vote). Nine teams received votes, with coaches asked to select their top six teams.

East Grand Forks led the voting with 79 points, followed by Roseau 67, Moorhead 48, Thief River Falls 46, Crookston 43, Fergus Falls 16, Warroad 10, Bemidji 5 and Alexandria 1.

While East Grand Forks received eight first place votes, Roseau collected three, Moorhead two and Crookston two.

Fourteen of the 17 teams will be in Thief River Falls Saturday for the Section 8 preseason jamboree, a Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) sponsored affair that begins at 2 p.m.

A quick look at the 17 Section 8 teams by Fee revealed:

+ East Grand Forks — lost five of top six scorers and returns just one defenseman off last year's state tournament team. But big Mark Pagnac returns in goal where he carried a 3.4 goals-against average last year. The Green Wave also had a fine junior varsity squad and had 51 report for hockey.

+ Roseau — Eight skaters return for the Rams, who should be strong defensively. But they'll have to find scorers to go with Bill Yon. Goalie Al Desrosier played in just one varsity game last winter. Most players will come from last year's strong junior varsity team.

+ Moorhead — most experienced team, and also the biggest. Only three players missing from last year's surprising squad, but two of them accounted for 29 of the Spuds' 51 goals. However, Greg Korinck may rank as the best goalie in the section.

+ Thief River Falls — hit heavily by graduation, with top seven scorers and all-section goalie Bill Jury missing. Return just two forwards and two defensemen who played regularly last year, with Scott Wiebolt (10 goals, 10 assists) the top returner.

+ Crookston — lost just six players off last year's first place regular season Section 8 team, but those six scored two-thirds of the Pirates' goals. Half of the team were members of the unbeaten Class A state football champions, including all-state runningback Steve Johnson, a 17-goal scorer last winter.

+ Fergus Falls — lost top three scorers and starting goalie to graduation.

+ Warroad — John Bjorkman, one of the top individuals in Section 8, leads the Warriors, who had just 23 report for the start of practice, which included four goalies. Five of the top 1979-80 scorers graduated.

+ Bemidji — tremendous Bantam team of the year ago may have to fill holes left by the graduation of eight seniors. Top goalie Jim Wizner will miss the early part of the season because of scholastic problems.

+ Detroit Lakes — nine return off last year's team, but those nine scored just 19 goals in 20 games.

+ Alexandria — lost six players from last year's first-ever Section 8 tournament-qualifying team.

+ Brainerd — expects to field best team ever after returning top scorers, the entire defense and outstanding goalie in Paul Hennen, who carried a 2.3 goals-against average a year ago.

+ Hallock — things look good for the Bears who have artificial ice and 33 players out, including top two scorers from a year ago — Scott Norland and Henry Mingo, along with goalie Larry Fertig, who averaged 36 saves per game.

+ Indus — Gary Lindmark, a 21-goal scorer, with goalie Scott Hasbargen return for the Trojans.

+ Lake of the Woods — Doug Ebeltoft is expected to have a big year in the nets for the Bears who had 31 report for practice.

+ Red Lake Falls — Thief River Falls graduate Jeff Lindquist's first year at Red Lake Falls will also be the Eagles' first season with artificial ice in their arena. Lost most of the scoring punch from a year ago, but return defenseman Tom St. Marie.

+ Crosby-Ironton — 25 players, but only one senior reported to first-year coach Joe Ernster, whose second-year Rangers practice and play games at Brainerd — 18 miles away.

+ Little Falls — first year of varsity hockey for the Flyers, who had 16 report to coach John Wagner. Have just a 12-game schedule.

Miscellaneous

Prowlers Challenge Spuds For Section 3 Swimming Honors

Moorhead, with its individual standouts, and Thief River Falls, with its superior depth, are expected to wage a hotly contested first place battle Tuesday and Wednesday in the 1980 Section 3 girls swimming and diving championships at Bemidji State University.

"It's going to be extremely tight," predicted Thief River Falls coach John Hustad. "Moorhead has to be the favorite. They have the fastest swimmers in most events. But they don't have the depth. I think we have a lot more depth than most of the teams, and depth will score you a lot of points."

Nineteen Thief River Falls girls will participate in the two-day state-meet qualifying event. The group includes seniors Kathy Dillon, Franki Kuyath, Betsie Hallstrom, Brenda Lund, Andrea Lia and Joan Glauque; juniors Lori Swanson, Lisa Desrocher and Robyn Dallmann; sophomores Karen Dillon, Shari McGann, Loudeen Flom, Mary Geatz and Sarah Green; freshmen Karla Lokken and Denice Anderson; and eighth graders Georgia Howard, Shelley McGann and Connie Geatz.

Competition starts with prelims Tuesday at 5 p.m. Diving prelims will be held Wednesday at 9 a.m., with the swimming and diving finals set for 1 that afternoon. Top two swimmers in each event, plus the top four divers will earn spots in the 1980 Minnesota state high school swimming and diving championships Dec. 5-6 at Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Moorhead is the defending Section 3 champion, finishing with 231 points a year ago when Brainerd was second with 216 and Thief River Falls was third with 188. That snapped the Prowlers' title reign that saw them win Section 3 crowns in 1975, 1977 and 1978, along with a third place finish in 1976, just two points behind co-champions Brainerd and St. Cloud Tech.

Five Thief River Falls swimmers qualified for the state meet in 1979 when Hallstrom finished second in the 50-yard freestyle at the Section 3 meet; Lund, who won the Section 3 diving competition; Desrocher, fourth in diving; and the Prowlers' second place 400-yard freestyle relay team of Hallstrom, Lund, Glauque and Kathy Dillon.

Hustad says the Prowlers can expect to score points in every event at Bemidji.

"What we need is to put one or two girls in the finals, and I think we can do that in most events," explained Hustad. "And we also have to have people score points for us in the consolation finals."

While Moorhead and Thief River Falls, along with Brainerd and Fergus Falls, slug it out for top honors, it might well be one of the also-rans that play a big part in deciding the outcome.

"What might make a difference," pointed out Hustad, "is a smaller team with one or two individuals who will steal points away from one of the leaders."

"We're the underdogs," said Hustad. "But I'm really looking forward to the meet."

Thief River Falls finished the 1980 season with a 9-4 dual meet record and came up with a victory in the Prowlers' relays while also participating in invitational meets at Fergus Falls, Brainerd and Grand Rapids. The Prowlers lost two dual meet decisions to Moorhead this fall, 96-73 back on Sept. 30 and a close 89-82 decision here Nov. 6.

Eight Pirates All-Conference

Crookston dominated selections on the 1980 Northwest Athletic Conference all-conference football team announced Wednesday by league officials, with the unbeaten Minnesota Class A state champion Pirates placing eight players on the 22-member NWAC honor squad.

The team, which included 11 offensive and 11 defensive players, had two repeat selections — Paul Holmquist of Crookston on the offensive team and Daryl Tysdal of Fergus Falls on the defensive unit.

Thief River Falls all-conference picks were seniors Scott Wiebolt and Rick Gobell, named to the defensive team, and junior Mark Harder, tabbed for offensive honors.

Harder and Scott Mesker of Fergus Falls, a junior named to the defensive team, were the only underclassmen selected for post-season honors during a meeting of league coaches and officials at Mahnomen.

Crookston all-conference choices were Steve Johnson, Fred Knudsvig and Holmquist on the offensive team, Brent Weiss, Mark Berg, Scott Radi, Kyle Roelofs and Brian Hoganson on the defensive team.

The Pirates posted a perfect 13-0 record this fall, 4-0 in the NWAC to qualify for post-season play.

Bemidji and East Grand Forks each placed four players on the NWAC all-conference team, while Fergus Falls joined Thief River Falls with three selections.

East Grand Forks picks were offensive players Jeff Strandell, Carl Kringlen and Paul Bothun, along with Troy Laidley on defense.

Bemidji was represented by offensive picks Jim Cleveland, Pat Erhart and Andy David, along with defensive choice Todd Hendricks.

Eric Erlandson, an offensive choice, joined Tysdal and Mesker as Fergus Falls all-conference players.

DNR Magazine Needs Funds

For the first time in its 40-year history, The Minnesota Volunteer magazine, official publication of the Department of Natural Resources, will invite readers to make voluntary contributions to enable continued publication of six editions annually.

John McKane, senior Volunteer editor, said the decision was motivated by the austere budget faced by all state departments.

"We are hopeful that our readers will contribute sufficient funding via the pre-addressed envelope in our November-December edition so the department can avoid the necessity of cutting one edition in the current fiscal year," McKane said.

The Volunteer has a circulation of 75,000. Nationally recognized for its excellence, the bi-monthly magazine costs approximately $23,500 per edition or about 30 cents per copy.

McKane emphasized that "without soliciting advertising, our present public service policy is the wisest course.

"The number of persons we would have to add to our present staff for billing, posting and accounting in order to publish a subscription charge magazine is false economy.

"Studies by The Wall Street Journal and by 'no-charge' states such as Missouri, support our no-charge policy. And we do not believe we should compete with private sector publications by commercializing the Volunteer."

McKane said also that exceptional authors and artists from outside government have willingly contributed

Team Arctic Racing Tandem . . .

Elsner, Dimmerman Ready For 1980-81 Sno Pro Races

Start of the 1980-81 Sno Pro professional snowmobile racing season begins in early December, with a familiar Bob Elsner-Jim Dimmerman tandem once again handling the Team Arctic driving chores. They'll begin Dec. 6-7 in Winnipeg, Man., with the three-month, 14-race circuit continuing through the March 6-7-8 World Series of snowmobile racing in Waldheim, Sask.

The Eagle River World Championship race, the highlight of the snowmobile season, is scheduled Jan. 17-18 in Eagle River, Wis.

Bob Elsner

He's known as the "grandfather" of the Sno Pro circuit, and at age 37, Team Arctic veteran Bob Elsner is asked constantly why he continues to race rather than hang up his helmet and retire from the grueling oval track.

The answer to that question, says Elsner, lies in the Sno Pro record books.

Age not withstanding, Bob Elsner is simply one of the most successful drivers in Sno Pro racing history. Last year, despite an injury early in the season, Elsner had big wins in the 340X class at Waldheim, Beausejour and Portland. In 340 and 440 races, Elsner captured first place wins at Beausejour, Montreal, Superior and Portland and claimed two victories at Peterborough.

In 1978-79, he raced in the Sno Pro 250, 340 and 440 classes. Victories included a sweep of all races at Owatonna and wins in the 440 class at Portland and Peterborough. In the 250 class, Elsner scored wins at Montreal, Portland, Peterborough and Walheim. His biggest victory though, came at Eagle River, where he won the coveted World Championship. Elsner's racing record was so impressive in 1978 he earned the Sno Pro driver of the year title.

If age is a problem, it certainly does not show on the track. "I'll continue to race as long as I continue winning," Elsner explained in a matter of fact manner. "I enjoy being on the circuit too much to quit, especially when I do well against the other successful pros. But when the victories become few and far between, I'll know my time as a Team Arctic driver is up and I'll retire. It could be next year or five years from now."

To Elsner, winning is a combination of experience and skill, the latter meaning quick reflexes and the ability to handle the tough corners on the oval track. "Success on the track doesn't come from having a fast machine or being an extremely strong driver. That might have been the case years ago, but today's circuit requires more sophisticated driving techniques and a sled in perfect racing form," he said.

Elsner began racing in 1969 near his home town of New London, Wis. For two years he confined himself to racing cross country, but in 1971 he started racing on oval tracks and has been surrounded by them ever since.

From 1972 until 1975, Elsner was considered to be the top Arctic Cat independent on the circuit. His record against the factory pros was impressive.

In 1975 Team Arctic drivers Dave Thompson and Charlie Lofton were injured during the season. This left Arctic Cat with only one driver and, in January, company officials approached Elsner with an offer to become a Team Arctic pro. He walked off with a class division win at Eagle River that same year on Thompson's sled and continued to win big for Arctic throughout the next four years.

1980-81 Sno Pro Races

Dec. 6-7 — Winnipeg, Man.; Dec. 13-14 — Aberdeen, S.D.; Dec. 20-21 — Alexandria; Dec. 27-28 — Kinross, Mich. or Madison, Wis.; Jan. 3-4 — Peterborough, Ont.; Jan. 9-10 — Martin, Mich.; Jan. 17-18 — Eagle River, Wisc.; Jan. 24-25 — Montreal, Que.; Jan. 31-Feb. 1 — a New York site; Feb. 7-8 — Portland, Maine; Feb. 14-15 — Superior, Wis.; Feb. 21-22 — Cody, Wyo.; Feb. 28-March 1 — Wataskewan, Alta.; March 6-8 — Waldheim, Sask.

This year's streamlining of the Sno Pro circuit into one 340 Formula class is going to improve racing, according to Elsner. He believes it will quicken the pace of the races making it more exciting and easier for spectators to follow. He says it will also improve the technical skills of the driver and support team by being better able to prepare for that one key race.

According to Elsner, "he's getting older and smarter every day," and there is no one who works harder or concentrates more on victory during the season. He is looking forward to this season with another triumph at Eagle River as a major goal for 1981.

For Bob Elsner, age may one day get the better of him, but on the oval track it hasn't caught him yet.

Jim Dimmerman

Jim Dimmerman heads into his fourth year as a Team Arctic driver on a very optimistic note. Gauging by his improvements over the last three years, including major wins and consistent top finishes last year, the 1980-81 racing season should shape up as his most successful yet.

According to Dimmerman, a change in driving technique is responsible for his present reputation as one of the top Sno Pro racers around. "When I first began racing Sno Pro," he said, "I used the throttle more than I used my head. I've reversed that logic over the past year and half, and it has begun to pay off. I'm a veteran out on the track these days, using the edge of experience rather than acceleration to get me across the finish line first."

Experience is something that has come rapidly to the White Bear Lake native. Working with seasoned professionals like Arctic's Bob Elsner, Dave Thompson and Larry Coltom has provided him invaluable insight and inspiration. Last year his accomplishments included the overall point championship for Sno Pro's 340 class, a number two spot in the 440 and number four overall in Sno Pro. A special honor for him was winning the Hetteen Cup in Alexandria, a race recognizing the Arctic Cat's founder Edgar Hetteen.

Winning the World Championship at Eagle River continues to be an important goal for Dimmerman this season. He has qualified for the finals two of his three years driving for Team Arctic, and in 1979 he won every class except the championship.

Dimmerman is optimistic that the streamlining of Sno Pro classes this year will benefit him and teammate Bob Elsner. "With the elimination of all classes except the 340 Formula, I will be able to concentrate much more on the big race. However, competition will be more keen, and this in turn, will put more pressure on the Arctic mechanics. Experience should steer Bob and I clear of trouble on the track though, and the Arctic support team knows how to keep a machine in perfect shape. We expect to do very well this season."

Whatever the effect of this season's new rules, the future looks bright for this good natured 25-year-old. Dimmerman has trained harder and is in better condition this year than any previous season. He expects to continue a rigorous training schedule throughout the winter, and feels now is the best possible time to be involved in Sno Pro racing.

Since October, Dimmerman has been in Thief River Falls working in the race shop. In November he's been burning up the test track, and when the flag is lowered for the first Sno Pro race, Dimmerman may well be on his way to his best season ever.

Charlie Lofton

Arctic Cat racers can look forward to some expert advice this season, as well as a complete inventory of all the necessary parts for a Sno Pro sled, from the "fastest man on snow." The 1980-81 racing schedule will once again find former Team Arctic driver Charlie Lofton directing the newly restyled Arctic driver support van.

The 1980-81 racing season marks the fifth year of the driver support program, initiated in 1975 to support the growing number of independents racing Arctic Cat models. Though other manufacturers have experimented with a similar program, today Arctic stands alone in this customer support arena. The 40-foot van, now an Arctic "tradition" will arrive at the track before the races begin and will stay until the races are finished on Sunday evening. The van will be stocked weekly with factory-manufactured parts. Information and equipment will also be available to help Arctic owners achieve maximum performance from their sleds.

Lofton, who heads this effort, is tagged with the "fastest man on snow" nickname because of an incredible speed trial in Boonville, N.Y. in 1971. Driving Arctic's Boss Cat II, a 2,000-pound speed machine with an aerodynamic design and a super-charged Chevy V-8 engine, he was clocked at 139 miles per hour for the first pass, 128 miles per hour on the second. United States snowmobile association officials disallowed the new speed record on the grounds that Lofton's clothing was not flameproof. He continued driving the Boss Cat II, however, and less than a year later set the world speed record of 128 miles per hour at West Yellowstone, Montana.

Needless to say, Lofton has accumulated a tremendous amount of expertise in his racing years — expertise he is happy to share with Arctic owners.

"There is a tremendous sense of satisfaction in helping people at the track," said Lofton. "It represents Arctic's total commitment to making the best sleds possible and then standing behind them 100 per cent. I really enjoy meeting customers at the races, and if I can give them a little advice on their machines in terms of clutching or handling, it benefits everyone involved."

Now that he is retired from the racing circuit, Lofton spends much of his time commuting in his Cessna 180 between the Arctic Cat experimental racing department in Thief River Falls and his 1,200 acre farm in Wannaska, 60 miles to the north. Combined with his on-the-road duties for the driver support program, that does not leave Lofton many hours in the day. But then again, time doesn't stand still, and neither does Charlie Lofton.

Arctic Cat Racing Hall of Fame

—Roger Skime — winner of the first Eagle River World Championship race in 1964. Skime is currently vice president of engineering for Arctic Enterprises, Inc. His revolutionary design for slide rail suspensions remains one of the major innovations in snowmobiling history.

—Roger Janssen — racing career was brightest in January, 1969, when he won at Eagle River for Arctic Cat's second World Championship. The 1971 Kawartha Cup was among his many other wins.

—Dale Cormican — owns many cross country victories in his career as an Arctic racer, including two successive Winnipeg to St. Paul championships in 1968 and 1969. He later became well known as the driver of Boss Cat I, Arctic's initial record-setting speed sled.

—Larry Coltom — enjoyed unequalled success during his ten-year career as an Arctic driver. Coltom's accomplishments include class championships at Eagle River, West Yellowstone, Ironwood, Bangor, Beausejour, Boonville, Rhinelander and Lake Tahoe. He made history in December, 1975, when he captured in one weekend the Hetteen Cup and the Dayco 440X International Championship at Alexandria, winning snowmobiling's biggest purse at the time. In 1976, Coltom earned honors as "Sno Pro driver of the year". He was Arctic's first paid factory driver in snowmobile racing and today is Team Arctic's performance evaluation engineer.

— Charlie Lofton — is known as "the fastest man on snow," after he set the world speed record of 128 miles per hour at West Yellowstone in 1972 while driving Arctic Cat's Boss Cat II. The previous year, Lofton unofficially obtained speeds of up to 139 miles per hour at Boonville, N.Y. Throughout his racing career, Lofton consistently scored numerous wins and high placings. He is currently head of Arctic's driver support program.

—Dave Thompson — began his racing career at Arctic Cat in 1968. Becoming one of the most consistent and successful drivers on the circuit, victories were his at West Yellowstone, Rhinelander, Milwaukee and Peterborough. In 1973, he won the Bosch 40-40, one of the snowmobilings most prestigious races of the 70's staged in Milwaukee. A devastating accident at Eagle River in 1975 severely damaged Thompson's arms, back and legs. The next season, however, found him back on Team Arctic, fighting as hard as before. For the past two seasons, Thompson has been the crew chief of Team Arctic.

—Bob Elsner — winner of the World Championship at Eagle River in 1979. This was the third of Arctic Cat's World Championships, and Elsner has continued on to become one of the most victorious racers in the history of the sport. This year, at age 37, Elsner is the oldest and among the most experienced drivers on the circuit.

—Jim Dimmerman — joined Team Arctic in 1977 and quickly began compiling an impressive racing record. Major career wins include a 1977 clean sweep of all three classes at Hales Corner, Wis., all three class titles at Eagle River in 1979 and the coveted Hetteen Cup in Alexandria in 1980. Dimmerman is recognized as one of the foremost drivers on the circuit.

TEAM ARCTIC RACING tandem of Bob Elsner (left) and Jim Dimmerman will begin the 1980-81 Sno Pro professional snowmobile racing season Dec. 6-7 in Winnipeg, Man., marking Arctic Cat's 15th consecutive season of snowmobile racing.

Turkey Hunt Permit Deadline Is December 12

Minnesotans who would like to apply for one of 1,500 permits in the state's fourth annual turkey hunt — to be held in the spring of 1981 — have until December 12 to get their applications to the Department of Natural Resources.

Charles Burrows, director of fish and wildlife, said that application blanks and instructions are available from county auditors' offices and from most license agents.

Most of the general regulations are the same as last year: applicants must be at least 16 years old by April 18, 1981; be Minnesota residents for 60 days preceding April 18, 1981; not have held a Minnesota turkey license during either of the previous two years; and not have had their small game hunting privileges revoked within one year previous to Feb. 6, 1981. Applicants who received a 1978 turkey license are eligible for the 1981 drawing.

Again as last year the law provides that up to 20 per cent of the permits will be drawn for landowners or tenants who live on 40 acres or more of agricultural or grazing land within a turkey hunting zone.

Those successful in the special landowner-tenant drawing shall permit others to turkey hunt on their land. (Landowners or tenants unsuccessful in the special drawing will automatically be placed in the general drawing.)

A map showing private lands open to public hunting will be available to all 1981 turkey hunters.

"Expansion of the turkey range has allowed an increase in hunting area and number of permits," said Borrows. "Hunters this year may apply for one of six zones and one of four, 5-day hunting periods from April 18 through May 10."

Lake of the Woods

This hunting report comes from Elmer's Sportsmen's Center in Baudette:

"We enjoyed unusually fair early November weather up here on the Canadian border. Sunny with just a slight chill; perfect for that ambitious northwoods hunter. Grouse and sharptail have been particularly numerous this year.

Deer season looked more promising than ever. Deer are more numerous this year than they have been in several years, probably due to the excellent winter last year and the bucks only season the past few years. A few skilled archers got their deer by means of bow and arrow. Muzzleloading is popular this year, too.

Due to the nice weather, several anglers also got in some last minute fishing using mostly jigs, leaches and shiners.

Baudette Summary

Elmer Hamre of Elmer's Sportsmen's Center in Baudette has posted the final scoreboard for Lake of the Woods fishing for 1980.

Largest muskie registered in 1980 weighed 35-pounds, one-ounce, caught by John Caskey of Granger, Ind.

Pat Stay of Baudette caught the largest sturgeon. It weighed 35-pounds, 8-ounces.

Largest lake trout weighed 18-pounds, 5-ounces, was caught by Rick Palm of Baudette.

Prize-winning walleye weighed 11-pounds, 12-ounces and was caught by William Hill of Bemidji.

Grouse Hunting

Orin Wolden of Wolden's Service at Blackduck is happy about grouse hunting in his area:

"Grouse hunting has been excellent with many hunters enjoying the nice fall weather. A good winter and dry spring apparently contributed to a good hatch. Grouse hunters report seeing many deer. Archers were getting some nice deer especially during the nice falls days."

He expressed hope that Volunteer readers would contribute sufficient funds to sustain a complete publication schedule over the next two years.

Senators Get Boost In Fund For BWCA Use

Senators Rudy Boschwitz and Dave Durenburger were successful Friday in moving the federal government closer to fulfilling its commitment to northern Minnesota and the boundary waters canoe area. The Senate approved the earmarking of an additional $1 million for reforestation and timber stand improvement in the BWCA.

"In 1978 the government said it would compensate the people of the BWCA for losses resulting from the designation of the wilderness area," Boschwitz said. "However, to date they have not fulfilled that commitment."

Durenberger and Boschwitz proposed an amendment requesting an additional $2.85 million for the BWCA. However, opposition to that amendment was strong and after lengthy negotiations the leadership in the senate agreed to earmark the additional $1 million if the amendment was dropped.

"Allocating the additional $1 million for reforestation and timber stand improvement," Durenberger said, "will mean that $12.4 million will be available to the BWCA in fiscal 1981."

The senators agreed that the senate action does not completely fulfill the commitment made in 1978. "It does bring us closer," Boschwitz said, "and Dave and I will continue working to see that the federal government lives up to the promise it made."

DNR Wildlife, Forest Programs Are Integrated

A new policy, signed by commissioner of natural resources Joseph Alexander, requires that wildlife and forestry administered lands be managed for both forest and wildlife benefits.

The divisions of forestry and of fish and wildlife are directed to follow planning and management guidelines to insure that wherever possible wildlife management objectives will be met through forest management practices.

In cases where long term management objectives are in conflict, consideration will be given to transfer of custodial control from one division to another. Leaving or acquisition would be other alternatives to resolve this type of management conflict.

The policy makes it clear, however, that these steps will only be considered where critical habitat needs cannot be met through cooperative planning.

Alexander said the policy became necessary to insure that both forestry and wildlife requirements were taken into account in managing state lands.

"Frequently," he said, "both foresters and wildlife managers tend to concentrate on creating vegetative conditions or undertaking other management measures that will result in the maximum benefit to either the forestry or wildlife resource — the one they are primarily concerned with.

"This is only natural but the department's policy must be one that stresses management of public lands for the benefit of all the public. This is the basis for the "multiple use" management principal applied by government agencies to most lands under their jurisdiction."

Alexander said he foresees few conflicts between foresters and wildlife managers over management of specific tracts of state land once objectives are agreed to on the habitat and vegetative conditions desired within a specific area.

Ray Hitchcock, director, division of forestry, and Chuck Burrows, director, division of fish and wildlife, noted that they "have made a commitment whereby our divisions will be more closely involved in each others decision-making porcesses for the betterment of the resources we manage."

The policy provides that management actions of the field are to be jointly reviewed and that any disagreements will move upward through area and regional offices or to the central office in St. Paul until they are resolved.

"It is my belief," said Alexander, "that the policy will result in an improvement in both forest and wildlife management programs."

In 1935, the National Labor Relations (Wagner) Act established the first national labor policy of protecting the right of workers to organize and to elect their representatives for collective bargaining, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

In Shoplifting Program . . .

Essay Contest Winners Receive Cash Awards

"Who Does Shoplifting Affect" was the topic for the theme contest sponsored by the DECA chapter at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute recently. The contest for high school and middle school students was part of the DECA club's anti-shoplifting emphasis.

First place in the younger division was won by Brenda Kolseth, an eighth grader at Franklin middle school. First place in the older group went to Julie Johnson, a ninth grader at Our Saviour's Christian academy. Second place awards went to Lorna Jean Palmer and Sheri Nelson. Each of the first place winners received $5 cash awards from the DECA chapter.

Essays written by the winning first place students are as follows with spelling, punctuation and grammar as originally written:

Who Does Shoplifting Affect?

by Julie Johnson

First of all, it affects the person who shoplifts because he is sinning against God. It goes against the Seventh Commandment because it says, "Thou shall not steal". If the person steals and gets away with it, he or she would get more greedy and take more and more stuff until he finally steals a car or robs a store. It could be something worse. Then, when he gets caught he would get put in prison.

Then it affects the person who is with him. When the person goes into the and his friend steals and he doesn't know it, he could get caught and get in trouble. They would mark it on his record so more people wouldn't let him have a job.

It affects the parents, because they would have come and pick their child up and pay the fine. And other people because the people that own the store would raise the prices and we would have to pay more.

It affects the policemen because they have to come and pick up the child or give him a warning.

Remember the Seventh Commandment "Thou shall not steal".

Who Does Shoplifting Affect?

by Brenda Kolseth

Shoplifting affects yourself because you are the one who does it. It's so easy just to pick up what ever it is and put it in your pocket, coat or purse. You think you will never be caught because it is so small. If you do it once and don't get caught you will probably do it again. Most of the time I think kids do it for kicks, to see if they can get by with it. Some people do it because things are to expense of, because your friends dare you too, because you don't have enough money.

When you take something the store usually lets you get out of the store first because if they stop you in the store, sometimes people say they forgot to check out. If you get outside, the manager will take you back to the manager.

They will ask you some questions. Then the officer will take you to the Police Station. They will ask you all kinds of questions, like what is your name, how old are you, why did you take it, have you ever did this before. They will fingerprint you, have you call your parents. Most kids think that is the hardest part. You tell your parents what you did over the phone. They lock you up until your parents come, some parents just say let them sit their until tomorrow. Most parents come right away. If both of your parents come you have pretty good parents. If one of your parents come you will probably be back there again soon.

The shoplifting age can be from twelve up to any age. The kids that shoplift really don't know what there getting into when they take something that they didn't pay for.

Maybe the kids get influenced by the older people. They see older people do it and get by with it, so the kids think they can too.

When you try to get a job when your old enough. It may affect you, and it may not. If you we're trying to get a job at Red Owl and when you we're fourteen you had shoplifted something from Pamida. When you fill out your application. They ask you if you have every shoplifted anything you can say no because it happened when you we're a juvenile. The manager of Red Owl was having dinner with the manager of Pamida and the manager of Red Owl talks about the boy that he thinks he is going to be highered. The Pamida manager says let me see, that name rings a bell, yea he shoplifted something from my store back awhile ago. You probable won't get the job.

Shoplifting will affect your whole life. You may not be able to get a job they may not take a risk on hiring you.

Older people may shoplift more and more because the prices are so high. Maybe when they get fined they will realize they should've paid the high prices.

There might not be is many shoplifting among young kids when the fine comes out. They may not take the risk of being caught for so much money. The kids may not shoplift for kicks when they have to pay a fine of $15.00 dollars every time they get caught.

Flashing Blue Lights Signal Highway Work

Flashing blue lights signal maintenance operations and serve to alert motorists to the movement of equipment in clearning snow from trunk highways and sanding of curves and bridge decks, according to Larry McNamara, assistant division director, office of operations, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

With blue lights distinctive to road maintenance activity, the motoring public is alerted to a specific type of hazard involving generally slower moving or stationary equipment on or near travel lanes. Blue is in contrast to the amber lights used by a wide range of other motor vehicles.

Minnesota state law prohibits the use of blue lights on all vehicles except road maintenance equipment operated by or under contract to the state or political subdivision.

Aged Surveyed To Develop A 3-Year Plan

During August and September the area agency on aging conducted a survey of the needs of senior citizens in the seven counties of Region I. Purpose of the survey was to assist in the development of a three-year area plan for the aging program in the region. Some statistical data was asked of the participants in the survey and current or past involvement with the various service programs offered to seniors and actual need areas were also asked.

Major need areas as taken from the completed surveys were: In-home services such as chore or home-delivered meals, transportation, legal assistance, employment services for seniors, handicapped-accessibility to public buildings, senior centers and information and/or counselling about long term care choices.

There were also a large number of senior citizens who stated that they did not feel they were adequately represented in government and many of the seniors indicated strong interest in continuing education programs, especially in the hobby area.

The three-year area plan has now been developed and submitted to the Minnesota board on aging for approval. Copies of the plan are available upon request from Michael Moore, Northwest Regional Development Commission, 425 Woodland Avenue, Crookston, MN.

Growe Objects To Projecting Vote Results

"Vote projections of the national news media prior to the polls closing on election day should be prohibited", Secretary of State Joan Growe said in a letter to the Minnesota congressional delegation.

"These types of sweeping pronouncements that one candidate or the other has won the election — two or three hours before the polls close — cannot help but have an adverse impact on voter participation" Growe observed.

"As president of the National Association of Secretaries of State, I have spent the past year encouraging voter turnout in the United States by pointing out to people that their vote is important", Growe said, "and then the news media comes along and says in so many words "it's all over, and your vote won't make any difference.

"I think", she declared, "that it is an absolute disgrade that this can happen, and I think citizens across the nation should express their displeasure with the situation".

Lead Poison Problem Will Be Discussed

Many Minnesotans will be interested in one of the special sessions at the 42nd midwest fish and wildlife conference to be held in St. Paul December 7-10, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

The session will deal with the conversion from lead to steel shot for waterfowl hunting in areas where lead shot has been a problem. In these areas, waterfowl pick up spent shot while feeding, resulting in the annual poisoning of an estimated two million birds across the nation.

The biology of lead poisoning has been covered in scientific writings and in the news media. The ballistics of lead versus steel has also been the subject of considerable discussion. However, the administrative, public relations and political aspects of the steel shot issue have not been aired — even though the problems underlay one of the most important policy issues in natural resources management today, said DNR officials.

The steel shot symposium will feature five speakers — each viewing the problem from a different perspective: a federal wildlife agency, a state wildlife agency, a national hunter-supported conservation organization, a national conservation organization (which is neither pro nor anti-hunting) and an outdoor writer.

The presentations and following discussion will identify and analyze the factors that have made steel shot controversial and explore barriers to acceptance of the program.

House Okays Bill On Revenue Sharing Plan

The U.S. House of Representatives has approved a substitute bill to continue the general revenue sharing program through 1983, thus eliminating the possibility that local communities would have to operate without federal assistance.

Congressman Arlan Stangeland said, "I am very pleased with the House approval of continuing revenue sharing. As a long time supporter of this program I believe in the theory of returning these tax dollars to local communities to use for programs and other items they believe will benefit the people living in their communities.

"I also think it's important that this substitute will bring states back into the revenue sharing program in 1982 and 1983 providing appropriations can be obtained."

Stangeland emphasized the point that he is glad the substitute won out over the revenue sharing extension bill (H.R. 7112) approved by the House government operations committee.

"I was unhappy with a portion of the original bill which would have required defining what exactly constitutes an eligible unit of local government for purposes of the general revenue sharing program. This change would have required local governments to verify the types and costs of services they provide to their constituents. The general idea sounds good, but the fact of the matter is it could make, according to information from the department of treasury, 17,000 local governments ineligible for general revenue sharing."

The Seventh District congressman added that he was "prepared to offer an amendment to the committee bill to guarantee revenue sharing to these 17,000 communities, 628 of which are in the Seventh district of Minnesota.

"The general revenue sharing program was set up to benefit everyone living in every local community throughout America and I cannot and will not support any program or bill which attempts to place stipulations on which communities can receive the funding and how they can spend it. Many communities, if not all, depend on the revenue sharing program to fund needed programs, construction and general services and by proposing to eliminate that funding because of federal regulations would do nothing but rob hard working taxpayers of the right to have their community put those tax dollars to use," said Stangeland.

Stangeland concluded that this was "another attempt by the bureaucrats in Washington" to grab control over how Americans spend their money.

"By continuing revenue sharing, the possibility of placing requirements on local communities has been eliminated and, as a result, my amendment was not needed this year. There is the possibility, however, that we could be faced with a similar situation in the future and I guarantee I will continue to fight to insure local communities receive their fair share."

County Board Proceedings

November 24, 1980
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
October 28, 1980

Pursuant to adjournment, the Pennington County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 1:00 P.M., October 28, 1980.

Members present: Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. Members absent: Hoffman and Grabanski.

The Pennington County Soil Conservation Board met with the County Board and presented a proposed budget for the year 1981. The new budget indicated a total of $34,765.00 with the County share requested being $20,265.00. The County contributed $13,000.00 in 1980. After discussion the matter was taken under advisement.

The Board Chairman instructed the Auditor to record in the minutes that the Board, while on Road, Bridge and Ditch inspection in the forenoon of this date, met with Ernest Moe, Charles Edgar, John Erickson, W. Ortloff and Loring Lord at the site of a proposed Ditch Repair of County Ditch 25 in Sanders Township and discussed various ideas at the site. The Board reviewed with the Engineer the proposals that had been advanced and it was determined that the only way the proposals could be met would be thru a Ditch Improvement process which by reason of a change in the State Law requires a petition for improvement to the Red Lake Watershed.

Engineer Arvid Olson then reported on the progress of the year's activities:

Contract with Holthusen for construction of CR 26 was well along and it is proposed that gravel be applied in the spring. CR 7 getting ready for gravel — problems with weather. Three bridges (culverts) will be in place by the week-end and the bridge for SA 3 is ready for installation.

The Board was presented with a petition signed by 11 Landowners asking for a re-determination of benefits on County Ditch No. 21.

The Board reminded themselves that a need exists for the same process on Judicial Ditch 25-3.

The Board determined that Viewers will be selected at the earliest opportunity.

Quotes on items surplus in the Old Sanatorium as advertised and called for were opened and quote from Ken Juel of Heritage Home in Middle River was approved for various items. Payment of these items was designated to go to Oakland Park Nursing Home.

A letter relating to the Indian Hunting Rights and the Supreme Court decision was reviewed by the County Attorney. The Supreme Court upheld the Counties position and the Board expressed satisfaction with their efforts in this regard. A related matter in the White Earth area is still pending and because of the assistance of the various Counties in the local situation the County is still involved in the White Earth matter.

Commissioner Stenberg advised the Board of the withdrawal of East Grand Forks from the Busing agreement and the need for a revised payment schedule. Moved by Stenberg seconded by Koop that a revised budget for bus services be approved in the amount of $3,420.00. Motion declared unanimously approved.

Moved by Koop seconded by Stenberg that a Certificate of a minor correction as presented by the County Surveyor be accepted as it refers to a correction of Lot numbers in Plat known as Swensen's Subdivision in the City of St. Hilaire. Motion declared unanimously adopted.

Moved by Koop seconded by Stenberg that meeting adjourn to convene at 10:00 A.M., November 4, 1980. Motion carried.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
November 4, 1980

Pursuant to adjournment the Pennington County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 10:00 A.M., November 4, 1980.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

The minutes of the meeting of October 7th were read and approved as read.

A group of Landowners in the area served by Sander-Black River Ditch No. 1 appeared and asked that the ditch be repaired by removing Beaver dams and obstructions. A major cleaning was objected to. The Board instructed the Engineer to investigate and proceed if taking out the dams and a few high spots would suffice.

The Board then discussed various ditch and road matters with the Engineer with no specific action.

Dr. David Brown of Goodridge presented a need for a County Planner that could plan for the County and for the smaller Cities and Townships in the County. Dr. Brown also indicated that the Goodridge Lions Club needed to use the facilities available at the Trapper & Trader for operating Bingo games on occasion, and no ordinance was in place to authorize such activity. The County Attorney was instructed to draw an Ordinance that would provide for Bingo operations in the County under the provisions of State Law.

Moved by Stenberg seconded by Grabanski that reimbursement paid County Employees for authorized County travel be at the rate of 20 cents per mile effective December 1, 1980. Motion declared unanimously carried.

John Quinlaven, City Planner, presented a plan for a HUD proposal for rehabilitating an area in the Tessum's Addition area North of the Fairgrounds. After discussion the matter was taken under advisement.

Douglas Olson, Custodian, visited with the Board and indicated he was taking an early retirement on the 1st of the year and that the Board would have to consider the possibility of a replacement. Matter taken under advisement.

Moved by Hoffman seconded by Stenberg that the Road Committee and Bridges and Culvert Committee inspect roads, bridges and culverts at 9:00 A.M., November 25th. Motion declared carried.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES WELLS (left) of rural Goodridge have received the Red Lake reservation outstanding farm family award at the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus "Harvest Bowl 80" November 14. Award was made by James F. Tammen, dean of the college of agriculture at the university. Purpose of the Harvest Bowl was to recognize agriculture and outstanding farm families in Minnesota and to provide a forum to discuss agricultural issues. Mr. and Mrs. Wells farm approximately 600 acres on the west edge of the Red Lake Indian reservation, raising mainly small grain crops, grass seed and forage for livestock. Their daughters Yvonne and Rita are licensed practical nurses at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls and their son Andy is an industrial arts instructor at Bemidji state university.

Moved by Grabanski seconded by Stenberg that meeting adjourn to convene at 7:00 P.M., Nov. 14, 1980. Motion carried.

GLENN TASA, CHAIRMAN
PENNINGTON COUNTY BOARD

ATTEST: C. W. RODEKUHR COUNTY AUDITOR
EX-OFFICIO,
CLERK OF THE BOARD

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
November 14, 1980

Pursuant to adjournment the Pennington County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 7:00 P.M., November 14, 1980.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Stenberg, Koop and Tasa. All present.

The Board discussed the fact, disclosed by the minutes of the meetings, that a second Office is being opened up in Crookston by the Red Lake Watershed Board. The Board questioned the necessity of such a move and instructed the Auditor to write the Red Lake Watershed Board for an explanation of the need for such a move.

Budget matters were then discussed in detail. The fact that a Revenue Sharing Plan was not in effect at the moment caused some concern as well as satisfaction that the policy that has been maintained over the years of not depending upon Revenue Sharing for operation funds for the County has been the proper one. Non-recurring purchases of Capital Improvements has been the prime use of the Revenue Sharing Funds and has proven valuable to the County. It was deemed advisable that the Congressional Representatives from this area should be advised of the need and of the assistance of the past. The news of the day seems to indicate that a renewal of the Revenue Sharing Plan may be forthcoming and when this happens a Public Hearing will have to be held to allow the Public a word in the allocation of the funds.

Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, the County Welfare Board has submitted a budget for Welfare purposes for the year 1981 and has requested a tax levy to provide funds to enable it to meet its responsibilities under Section 393.08, MSA; and

WHEREAS, such budget and requested tax levies have been duly considered;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the Board of County Commissioners approve such budget, including the following tax levy, with the provision that when taxes are collected and apportioned, the apportionment to each of the seven welfare funds shall be in the ratio that the levy for each bears to the total levy for welfare purposes.

Minnesota Supplemental Aid, $1,000.00, .26 per cent; Aid to Families with Dependent Children, $49,000.00, 12.70 per cent; General Relief, $6,500, 1.68 per cent; Administration, $74,600.00, 19.33 per cent; Medical Assistance, $85,700.00, 22.20 per cent; Social Services, $166,000.00, 43.00 per cent; Non-Expendable Personal Property, $3,200.00, .83 per cent. Total, $386,000.00, 100 per cent.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the County Auditor be hereby authorized and directed to spread a levy for Welfare purposes in the amount of $386,000.00 on the tax roles of the County. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Grabanski and upon vote being called for was declared unanimously approved and adopted.

The County Auditor then submitted the proposed budget and levy for Pennington County, as follows: (Budget requests) Revenue Fund, (Amount), $663,311, (Less Local Govt. Aid) $167,095, (Net Levy), $496,216; Road & Bridge Fund, $403,000, $403,000; Welfare Fund, $386,000, $386,000; Oakland Park Home Bonds, $37,553, $37,553; Law Enforcement Bonds, $68,098, $68,098. Totals: (Amount) $1,557,962, (Less Local Govt. Aid), $167,095, (Net Levy) $1,390,867. Special Levies certified by other taxing entities: Northwestern Regional Commission, $6,925; Red Lake Watershed — In area served by this Watershed, $18,430 with an additional 1.4 mills to be shared equally with the Lower Red River Watershed, according to Statute; Middle River-Snake River Watershed — In area served by this Watershed 1 Mill with an additional 1.4 mills to be shared equally with the Lower Red River Watershed, according to Statute.

Moved by Grabanski seconded by Koop that the Board accept the levy and budget and authorized and directed the County Auditor to spread said levy on the tax roles of the County for the year 1981, with the provision that as part of the Road & Bridge levy there is hereby appropriated the sum of $28,500 to the City of Thief River Falls to be paid from the tax collections in 1981 for use on City streets designated as State Aid streets. Upon vote the motion was declared unanimously carried.

Commissioner Grabanski introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the City of Thief River Falls be granted Easement for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, operating, altering, repairing and removing water mains, sewer mains, telephone lines, CATV lines, gas mains, electrical power lines and other utilities with all necessary appurtenances over and under the following described property, situated in the County of Pennington and State of Minnesota, to-wit:

The North Five Feet (N.5') and the East Five Feet (E.5') of Lot One (1), Block Two (2) and The South Five Feet (S.5') and the East Five Feet (E.5') of Lot Two (2) of Block Two (2); and The East Five Feet (E.5') of Lot Three (3), Block Two (2); and The West Five Feet (W.5') and the South Five Feet (S.5') of Lot Four (4) of Block Two (2); and The West Five Feet (W.5') and the North Five Feet (N.5') of Lot Five (5) of Block Two (2), all in LaBree's Rearrangement, Pennington County, State of Minnesota, and pursuant to MS 282.04, Subd. 4, which relates to Forfeited Tax Property, the County Auditor is hereby authorized and instructed to sign said Easement which is before the Board. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and upon vote declared unanimously adopted.

Moved by Koop seconded by Grabanski that the Auditor be instructed to Publish a Notice of Intention to enact an Ordinance regulating Bingo in Pennington County with a Public Hearing to be held at 3:00 P.M., December 8, 1980 prior to enactment of said proposed Ordinance. Motion declared carried.

Moved by Koop seconded by Grabanski that meeting adjourn to convene at 3:00 P.M., November 25, 1980. Motion carried.

In order to give proper notice for persons interested in future meetings it was announced that the December Meeting would be held at 10:00 A.M., December 8, 1980. (A Monday meeting).

Notice of Hearing On Proposed Assessment

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: Notice is hereby given that the City Council will meet at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, December 9, 1980, in the basement meeting room of the Municipal Auditorium to pass upon the proposed assessment for the Central Business Parking Assessment District Project. Improvements consist of acquisition, demolition, excavation, backfill, drainage, surfacing, and painting acquired properties, pursuant to M.S.A. 429.011 to 429.111 and 459.14.

The area proposed to be assessed for such improvement is as follows except residential and church properties located therein: Original Townsite — Blocks 18-22, 27-31, 34-38, 55-59, 63 and 64; Owner's Rearrangement of Blocks 61 and 62 of the Original Townsite, and; Block 1 of Porter's Addition.

The proposed assessment is on file for public inspection at the City Clerk's Office. Written or oral objections will be considered at the meeting, but the Council may consider any objection to the amount of a proposed individual assessment at an adjourned meeting upon such further notice to the affected property owners as it deems advisable.

An owner may appeal an assessment to district court pursuant to Minnesota Statutes Section 429.081 by serving notice of the appeal upon the mayor or clerk of the city within 30 days after the adoption of the assessment and filing such notice with the district court within ten days after service upon the mayor or clerk; however, no appeal may be taken as to the amount of any individual assessment unless written objection signed by the affected property owner is filed with the city clerk prior to the assessment hearing or presented to the presiding officer at the hearing.

TOOTHPICK ENGINEERS Mark Wiebolt of Thief River Falls (left) and Blaine Barth of Gaylord placed ninth among 105 competitors in the annual toothpick engineering contest sponsored by Moorhead state university's engineering department recently. Their structure using a maximum of 500 round wooden toothpicks glued into a form with a clear span of 20 inches, supported 81.6 pounds of weight and had a 524.8 pound-to-pound ratio. The overall winning entry carried a load of 191.1 pounds, but the best structure had a 737.7 pound-per-pound load ratio.

Now Is Time To Plan For Energy Future

Minnesota can negotiate the bridge to a successful energy future — a future with secure and affordable energy supplies — but the choices to determine that future must be made now, reports the Minnesota energy agency.

The supply of fuels on which Minnesotans traditionally rely — primarily fuel oil, natural gas and electricity — will decrease over the next 20 years. At the same time, they will become considerably more expensive, and if we continue to rely on them completely, will drain the state's economy. On the other hand, investments in conservation and Minnesota's renewable resources will invigorate the state's economy while providing a secure long-term energy source.

The demand for energy is expected to grow more slowly than in the past, because economic growth is slowing down, because people are already investing in low-cost conservation measures, and because the federal government has instituted mandatory energy conservation programs such as miles-per-gallon targets for automobiles. Nevertheless, without a substantial change in energy usage habits, demand is expected to grow by 27 per cent between 1980 and 2000

At the same time, traditional fuel supplies are expected to grow only five per cent during the next 20 years, with demand outstripping supplies by the mid to late 1980's. Thus, while we will continue to rely on traditional supplies for years to come, finding new sources of these supplies will become increasingly difficult and expensive.

Petroleum, which is refined into heavy fuel oil, light fuel oil, gasoline, propane and jet fuel, provides 43 per cent of our total energy supply. Even under the most optimistic prediction, this petroleum supply is expected to shrink by 32 per cent between 1980 and 2000. This still leaves the United States importing 36 per cent of its oil in the year 2000, which results in a balance of payments problem as well as an insecure supply.

The second largest portion of primary energy supply comes from natural gas — 25 per cent. Again, even under the most optimistic predictions, the supply is expected to drop six per cent, and this will occur only if many very favorable circumstances occur simultaneously.

Moreover, the real price (not including inflation) of both fuels is expected to continue to increase, with residential fuel oil prices doubling and natural gas increasing by 150 per cent.

Coal and uranium supply the bulk of the state's electricity, and electric demand is expected to increase by 52 per cent. If demand does grow at this rate, utilities will probably have to import electricity from other states, requiring additional transmission lines; or they may build additional baseload capacity. Coal supplies should be adequate for the extra capacity, but greatly increased use of coal is environmentally damaging, and building new power plants is very expensive. It could result in electricity that would cost two to three times as much as now.

There are several ways we can choose to fill the gap expected to occur during the next 20 years between traditional supplies and demand; we can follow the very costly avenue of increasing the supplies of traditional fuels; we can reduce demand through conservation and efficiency improvement in the ways we use energy; and-or we can develop new sources of energy which keep energy dollars within the state or nation.

The cost of replacing traditional fuel supplies is high. Synfuel development, enhanced recovery techniques and new power plants all require very high capital costs. It already costs much more to replace old gas supplies with new gas supplies. Alaskan gas, for instance, is expected to cost $15.84 mcf (thousand cubic feet) compared to $7.08-mcf for domestic gas in 1987.

Gas from enhanced recovery techniques will cost even more. Furthermore, these large capital investments would be made in resources which are ultimately limited no matter how much money we spend on them. This is not always apparent to consumers since new prices are averaged in with old, but it would become very clear if we have eventually to rely on replacement supplies.

Continued reliance on traditional fuel supplies alone will also have a negative impact on the state's economy. Most of each dollar spent on traditional fuels goes out of the state to pay for the imported supply. Therefore the effect is to drain the state's economy.

If the people of the state choose, instead, to rely on increased conservation and development of appropriate renewable resources to replace some of our traditional supplies, the environmental and replacement costs will be lower and the net economic effect will be to generate income in the state rather than drain it.

Scholarship Contest Open To Students

Opportunity to win scholarships worth up to $5,000 each and two all-expense-paid trips to Cairo, Egypt, is now available to qualified graduating seniors in high schools in this area. International competition is being publicized in this area by Otter Tail Power company.

Sponsors of the scholarships are the Thomas Alva Edison foundation and the Max McGraw foundation. By recognizing the scientific accomplishments of high school students, these non-profit organizations hope to motivate more young people to become interested in science-oriented careers to help revitalize invention and innovation in this country.

Ten scholarships will be awarded, and the winners will be introduced at the annual meeting of the American association for the advancement of science in Toronto, Ont., Canada, Jan. 3, 1981.

Two of the 10 winners will be named grand award scholars following personal interviews with industrial and academic leaders in Cleveland January 2. Two grand award scholars will receive $5,000 each, an all-expense-paid trip to the International Edison birthday celebration in Cairo, Egypt, February 9-13, 1981, and a plaque. Their teachers and their schools also will receive plaques.

Eight other scholars will receive $1,000 each and a plaque and their teachers and schools also will receive plaques.

National science supervisors association and the council of state science supervisors are coordinating the overall program. Applications are being invited from graduating high school seniors who most nearly demonstrate the creativity and ingenuity exemplified by the life and work of Thomas Alva Edison and Max McGraw. Students in public, private and parochial schools are eligible. A letter of recommendation from the student's teacher, supervisor or sponsor must accompany the entry.

The entry, typed in standard English on 8½x11-inch paper and limited to 1,000 words, should be an 'abstract' of a proposal, idea or experimental procedure dealing with a practical application in science and-or engineering. It may represent either an already completed experiment or a projected idea. Page one must contain title of the entry, student's name, home address, telephone number, name of school, school address and school telephone number. Page two must repeat the title and begin the abstract itself. Entry deadline is Dec. 1, 1980.

Each entry must be sent to: Edison-McGraw Scholarship Program, in care of Dr. Robert Dean, P.O. Box 80953, San Diego, California 92138. Only winning entries will be acknowledged. All entries become the property of the Thomas Alva Edison foundation and the Max McGraw Foundation Scholarship program.

MMCDC Given $620,335 In Impact Grant

Congressman Arlan Stangeland has announced that the Midwest Minnesota community development corporation has received a $620,335 special impact grant from the community services administration.

Located in Detroit Lakes, the corporation serves Becker, Hubbard, Clearwater, Mahnomen, Pennington, (East) Polk and Red Lake counties.

The grant is to cover program expenses from Oct. 1, 1980 through March 31, 1982.

Midwest Minnesota community development corporation (MMCDC) will pursue its projected work program for this 18-month funding period in four major program areas. They are:

(1) Business Development — Establish a rural development loan fund to assist businesses located within the 13-county area encompassed by regions I and II and Becker county.

(2) Community Development and Support Services — Provide job training sites within MMCDC and or its investments for a minimum of 24 unemployed persons. Sponsor at least four training seminars for small business owner-operators located within the special impact area.

(3) MMCDC Development — Implement measures designed either to improve MMCDC's current membership base or to establish a new membership structure, based upon conclusions raised by an investigation of the membership base by the executive committee and subsequently approved by the board and membership. Provide opportunities for personal development through an on-going training program for members of the board of directors.

(4) MMCDC Operations — Develop a manual to describe MMCDC's current management, information system and determine if certain accounting functions can be automated.

As Thanksgiving Nears . . .

Tim Kazmierczaks Share True Meaning Of 'Family'

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Thanksgiving is, almost without exception, the family's day.

That's what "The Book of Festivals and Holidays the World Over" by Marguerite Ickis tells us. And that's what Tim and Marcella Kazmierczak explained to us as they prepared for their Thanksgiving holiday with their family of six children.

The chilly winter air of a Minnesota November was eased by the warmth found one recent day inside the Kazmierczak home located approximately six miles southwest of Thief River Falls. Most of the children in the family assist Dad in cutting wood for the stove to warm the home — one of the many tasks the kids enjoy doing, according to their parents.

The family moved from west St. Paul 13 years ago mainly because Tim and Marcie's parents are from the area. For 12 of those years Marcie was a waitress at Kife's Cafe in Thief River Falls, while Tim worked at St. Hilaire Supply. For the past year, he has been employed with Doug Barth, farming, while the family became the operators of "The Place," a roller skating rink, for a year.

That rink brought the family one of their most unforgettable Thanksgivings, according to Marcie.

"We had Thanksgiving dinner at the rink for all the college students who couldn't go home for the holidays," she said. "We ate, then went roller skating. We weren't with the rest of our families that year and it was a different kind of fun."

Each year the Kazmierczaks and their relatives take turns having everyone else over for the Thanksgiving feast because of their large families. This year the family will travel to the Twin Cities.

Our conversation last week had hardly begun when a small figure strolled in from a back room rubbing his eyes and began wandering toward the television set.

"I can't sleep Mom," he said. Brian, 3, is the youngest of the Kazmierczak children. Next comes Wayne, 10, followed by Scott, 12, Deborah, 13, Connie, 15 and Arnold, 16.

"Don't forget, little boy, no fighting," his dad warned with a smile.

By that time Brian had gathered together his coloring book and color crayons and was busying himself on the floor.

"Don't color the floor!" was the command, while Brian simply replied with a hint of anxiety in his voice, "I found a new color!"

The Kazmierczaks have had as many as 70 guests at their home for a Thanksgiving feast — counting all the "little ones."

"We like them all to come and eat here," the couple agreed. And, according to Marcie, preparing a meal for WAYNE KAZMIERCZAK, 10, has his own coin collection — which his mother, Marcie, often enjoys working on herself. Wayne is thankful this Thanksgiving for a warm house, he said. He, along with his parents and five brothers and sisters, believe that the key to a happy family is sharing in all activities — at work and at play.

Assessment Dist. Near Final Hearing

Their share of costs in the Thief River Falls parking assessment district has been sent to downtown property owners, and those owners and renters are being notified of a final assessment hearing to be held Tuesday, December 9, at 7 p.m. in the city auditorium meeting room.

According to Donald L. Stewart of the Stewart & Walker engineering firm, total project cost is placed at $601,775 with $486,950 to be spread among the various business, professional, commercial and industrial entities within the district boundaries. The city of Thief River Falls is expected to contribute $114,825 worth of in-kind services.

Properties proposed for acquisition to be used for off-street parking in the project are as follows:

Existing Sjoberg Cable TV parking lot and Thief River Falls Credit Bureau building, on Main avenue estimated acquisition cost of $181,200;

Former Lind Motor supply building and adjacent 50 feet of parking area presently owned by Northwestern Hospital services on LaBree avenue, estimated acquisition cost of $144,850; and 100x140-foot parcel of land owned by Northern State bank at the corner of Horace avenue and Fourth street, estimated acquisition cost of $65,550.

According to Stewart, the Sjoberg-Credit Bureau property would accommodate 42 cars, the Lind Motor-Hospital site would have space for 48 vehicles and the Northern State bank property would also have room to park 48 cars for a project total of 138. The Sjoberg lot and hospital property are currently used for parking, so the Credit Bureau, Lind Motor and Northern State bank lots would be the new parking area under the project.

Acquisition costs listed above total $391,600. To this amount, Stewart said, would be added $36,050 for one year of temporary financing at an estimated eight per cent interest and $59,300 in miscellaneous project costs for legal fees, engineering, relocation, real estate fees and other items. These three figures — acquisition, interest and miscellaneous project costs — total the $486,950 to be spread among the participants in the parking assessment district.

Under the formula developed by the district committee, there are five categories of participation. In an attempt to weigh traffic generated and benefit from additional parking, the formula was established for different types of property within the district, Stewart explained. Church and residential properties, including residential rental properties, are not being assessed.

Assessments are based on square footage of property with credits for areas used for storage and for on-site parking. A listing of the five categories of property and their portion of the project includes the following:

(1) Retail, commercial and financial property — Assessed at 100 per cent of the basic rate established of $1.06 per square foot. There are 62 of these properties in the project and they will pay 61.2 per cent of the district's share of $486,950.

(2) Food, beverage and clubs — Assessed at 90 per cent of the basic rate. Thirteen of these properties will pay 4.6 per cent of the project cost.

(3) Public, office, service and professional — Assessed at 70 per cent of the basic rate. There are 61 of these properties in the project area and they will pay 31.8 per cent of the project cost.

(4) Wholesale and processing — Assessed at 50 per cent of the basic rate. There are four of these properties in the district and they will pay 2.3 per cent of the project cost.

(5) Manufacturing — Assessed at 20 per cent of the basic rate. There is only one manufacturer (Northern Woodwork) in the assessment district area and it will pay one-tenth of one per cent of the project cost.

There are two public entities which are also involved in the project — the Pennington county courthouse and the law

Council Resolves Zoning, Airs Drug Paraphernalia

Because all members were present at the Thief River Falls city council meeting last evening, a decision was reached on the rezoning issues which have been the subject of prolonged council consideration for a number of meetings.

Two seven to one votes accepted the planning commission's recommendation to deny two separate rezoning requests from the Investment Development company of Fargo. (Alderman Bill Penning voted against denying the requests).

First request was for a zoning change from Agriculture to R-2 in the northern portion of the Crookston Diocese property near Greenwood street and Allwood Acres addition to permit the construction of duplexes.

Second rezoning request from the Investment Development company involved a zoning change from Agriculture to R-2 (medium density) with a special use permit for a townhouse development. This request involved an area in the southern portion of the Diocesan property.

Denial of the requests was based on three major reasons: (1) The incompletion of Greenwood street as a connector of two major arterials; (2) neighborhood opposition citing property value loss and increased traffic; and (3) the fact that there is no evident need for subsidized housing in the city.

Both requests had been discussed with legal counsel during a special session at 6 p.m. before the decision was finalized by voting at the regular meeting.

Approximately 100 citizens filled the meeting room in the basement of the city auditorium during the regular meeting, many of whom had appeared to express their concern about the sale of drug paraphernalia and pornography items in local stores.

Jackie Schwietz, spokesman for those gathering for the discussion, brought before council members a display of various devices she had obtained in Thief River Falls and were similar to those displayed and discussed by Ken Froschheiser, chief of police, and which had been confiscated in the city of Thief River Falls. Also brought before council members by Schwietz was a magazine obtained from Dave's News in Thief River Falls and which she objected to being sold.

Following the actions by Schwietz and Froschheiser, Marty Collins, owner of the Record Barn in Thief River Falls (one of the stores in question) brought before council members a display of various magazines and

Fair Board Considers Facility Improvements

Pennington county fair association discussed ideas for grandstand and track improvements and a possible market livestock sale at the annual meeting held Monday evening in the Pennington county courthouse.

Reelected to the 17-member board of directors for three-year terms were Si Hanson, District 1; Arlen Ellingson, District 2; Laverne Hamre, District 3; Beth Blankenfeld, District 4; Terry Nelson, District 5; Keith Nelson, Goodridge; and Bernard Huot, St. Hilaire.

Officers reelected at a reorganizational meeting of the directors were Vernon Lee, president; Duane Olson, vice president; Oliver (Skip) Swanson, secretary; and Richard Anderson, treasurer. Lee, Swanson and Anderson were elected as delegates to the Minnesota Association of County Fairs convention to be held January 18-21 at the Hotel Leamington in Minneapolis. Any director on the board may serve as an alternate delegate.

The fair association has been considering improvements to the grandstand and track area for some time. Information presented at the annual meeting Monday indicated that a cost estimate of $24,000 had been obtained to erect a roof over a grandstand area 220 feet long. Cyclone fencing around the entire race track was estimated at $16,000.

The board is also considering doubling the size of the section of the present grandstand which is in the best condition. Cost estimates have not yet been obtained. At the present time the association has an outstanding debt of only about $2,500 left to pay on the last building constructed on the fairgrounds.

Report of operations of the 1980 Pennington county fair showed total income of $40,063, including $26,727 from direct operations of the fair and $13,335 from other sources.

Major items in the operating income were $11,898 from grandstand ticket sales, $745 from auto parking, $3,765 from exhibit space rentals, $7,902 from carnival income and $1,820 from advertising in the premium books.

Thanksgiving Holiday Affects Community

Thanksgiving holiday schedule will affect a number of public offices and businesses in the Thief River Falls community as well as the schools which will be closed Thursday and Friday of this week.

Pennington county offices will also be closed until Monday, having opted for the Friday after Thanksgiving as a holiday rather than President's day. The state job services office will be closed on Friday as well. City offices and federal offices will be open on Friday after being closed for the Thanksgiving holiday Thursday.

The post office will have its normal holiday schedule Thursday with no rural or city delivery or window service. Thief River Falls stores will be closed Thursday but open Friday night until 9 p.m. as the start of the Christmas shopping schedule.

Hearing Held On Hog Wrestling

Whether hog wrestling is covered under a Minnesota statute on greased pig contests or not, and therefore whether hog wrestling participants are guilty of a misdemeanor, is a question which came closer to resolution with a hearing held this morning in Pennington county court in Thief River Falls.

Judge J. A. Harren presided at the hearing on a motion for dismissal of the case brought by the state of Minnesota against Robert Fincher of Viking, president of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association, and three of the association's directors. The four men participated in a hog wrestling event at the Pennington county fairgrounds August 17 to test the state law.

Attorney Kurt Marben entered the motion for dismissal with the court on the grounds that the statute is vague and that there is no probable cause that a violation of the statute occurred. Attorney John Novacek, representing the state and city of Thief River Falls as prosecuting attorney, contended that probable cause does exist and that a violation did take place.

Novacek suggested to the court that the charge be reduced to a petty misdemeanor, in which case there could be no jail sentence in the event of conviction. The defendant did not consent to the reduced charge since it would waive the right to a jury trial. According to rules read by Judge Harren, the defendant would have to consent to the petty misdemeanor motion, and therefore the charge would continue as a misdemeanor.

The prosecution called Police Chief Ken Froschheiser as a witness and he described the events of the day, his involvement in them and what he witnessed as having taken place. He testified that he knew the statute existed before the contest was held and that it had been read to the public over a speaker system before the event was held at the fairgrounds.

Don Murray, a feed manufacturer's representative and a principal in a hog finishing operation which handles about 1,500 animals at a time, was called as a witness for the defense. Under questioning from Marben, he cited his views of differences between a feeder pig — considered to be a 30 to 50-pound animal — and a butcher hog — considered to be a 200 to 240 pound animal.

Under cross-examination by Novacek, Murray agreed that the terms pig and hog are commonly used interchangeably and that the animal captured in the contest and placed in a barrel may or may not have experienced pain.

Milo Hagen of Grygla was called to the stand and testified regarding greased pig contests held on the rodeo grounds at Grygla. He said a 30 to 40 pound pig had been coated with a vegetable shortening and was released in the rodeo arena where approximately 40 youngsters from the age of 8 to 12 were to try to catch it. He said it was caught in 20 seconds or less and that the youngster who caught it was permitted to keep it.

Dalton Anderson of Grygla, one of the participants in the contest, testified as to the size of the hog used in the Thief River Falls contest (about 240 to 250 pounds) and that it had not been greased or oiled prior to the event.

Judge Harren gave the attorneys until December 8 to submit additional briefs on the case and said he would begin his deliberations on December 9. His findings will determine whether the case should be dismissed in accordance with the motion or brought for trial.

IS THERE A DIFFERENCE between a pig and a hog? Defendants in the hog wrestling case being heard in Pennington county court contend that there is, and that the difference means they haven't violated the law. The prosecution says the law is clear and there is probable cause a violation did take place. The pig above doesn't care; it was busy making friends with every visitor to the feeder pig show held in August at the county fairgrounds. The hog wrestling contest — which featured 250-pound biological brethren of the 40-pound porker above — took place on the evening of the feeder pig show and sale.

Kris Oppegaard At UND Meet

M. Kristine Oppegaard of Thief River Falls was among 111 persons who attended a conference on "Patient Education Moving Into the 80s: The State of the Art" recently at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks.

Sponsored by UND's school of medicine and division of continuing education, the conference described plans, equipment and roles of health professionals in patient education and approaches for implementing, documenting and evaluating patient teaching in various settings.

Safety Is Topic For Volunteer Women's Group

"I don't know if there is a more noble cause in the world than saving lives. As the chief safety officer for the state of Minnesota, it is my responsibility to protect and save the lives of Minnesotans travelling on our roadways. I ask your support in this effort and I expect you to demand action from me."

Those remarks were part of a speech made by Minnesota department of public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic during the Minnesota Association of Women Highway Safety Leaders (MAWHSL) conference conducted in Minneapolis recently.

MAWHSL is a volunteer organization made up of women community leaders from throughout Minnesota and led by Serene Hanson, president. The organization's main goal is increasing public awareness of traffic hazards while helping to reduce the number of deaths and injuries resulting from traffic accidents.

Conference workshops and panel discussions were conducted on a wide range of traffic safety related topics including child auto safety seats, safety air bags, school bus safety, bicycle safety and the dangers of driving while intoxicated.

In his speech, Sopsic described how Minnesota has historically been an active leader in the promotion of traffic safety and accident reduction activities. However, he added that, "during the eighties, we are going to see an increased mixture and merging of trucks, full-size autos, compacts, subcompacts, buses, mopeds, motorcycles and bikes. Smaller vehicles will have to compete with the larger vehicles on our roadways. We have to recondition the drivers of the larger vehicles to watch out for the other drivers."

Often this can be done best at the community level. "We at the state level will have fewer people to do more work with less money. The success of any traffic safety program relies on involved and knowledgeable people who care enough about their fellow men and women to get things done," said Sopsic.

Many examples of such community based traffic safety efforts were discussed during the conference. One was offered by MAWHSL representative Margaret Orlich who encouraged parents and teachers to ride school buses on occasion. "Minnesota law permits this and often times there is better behavior on a bus when there are adult riders," Orlich said.

Commissioner Sopsic concluded that active participation on a community level by groups like MAWHSL can be extremely important to safety. "I believe that women willing to become more aware of traffic safety concerns and willing to organize and implement traffic safety activities in schools and through other service organizations can help to prevent accidents and reduce death and injury."

CHAMPION of the Minnesota and North Dakota state contest in Make It Yourself with Wool competition Friday and Saturday in Fargo was Mrs. Orville (Marilyn) Hanson of Thief River Falls. She won the district contest adult division at Thief River Falls on November 8 to advance to the combined Minnesota-North Dakota competition where she won a championship prize of luggage. Only junior and senior winners advance to national competition.

Kathy Johnson On District Music Board

Kathryn Johnson, the daughter of Mrs. Tarkel Ose of Thief River Falls, has been appointed district representative of the Minnesota Elementary Music Educators organization for a second term. She represents District 15 of Region 4, the St. Paul schools, and will be responsible for coordinating association activities for the district.

Johnson has taught music in the St. Paul public schools for the past three years. She attended California Bible school for two years before graduating from the University of Minnesota.

Kathryn has been active in church and community related activities including Sunday and Bible school teaching, church organist, choir director, sharing and caring groups, visitation groups and private piano instructor. She was selected as a candidate for the organization's state board for 1981.

Calorie Intake Key To Proper Weight Control

Calories do count — at Christmas and New Year's as well as other times of the year, says the Minnesota Medical association (MMA). There's a sort of fantasy about holiday snacking and dining which seems to say that all the fat has been taken out of all holiday goodies.

Unfortunately this is not the case. Calorie balance is the key word. It's a matter of intake vs. the burning up process of calories which have often been referred to as fuel — the solution necessary to maintain life and keep the body well and moving. When the body takes in more food (or fuel) than it can use, the excess is stored up as additional weight.

It has been estimated that the average person leading a moderately active life requires about 15 calories per pound to maintain his or her weight. For example if you weigh 150 pounds and you want to maintain that weight despite all of the holiday culinary temptations you must limit your holiday food and cheers to 2,250 calories each day.

On the other hand, if you are in the ranks of the pleasantly plump and you make a New Year's resolution to lose weight, keep in mind that there are approximately 3,500 calories in every pound of stored fat. To lose a pound per week means that the total food intake must be cut 500 calories per day. A two pound per week weight loss goal requires a 1,000 calorie cut per day. Ordinarily it is unwise to plan a weight reduction program which results in a loss of more than two pounds per week.

A well balanced diet is essential to maintain weight loss and good nutrition. Avoid the crash diets. A slow and sensible weight loss program should offer conditioning and training in establishing better eating habits in order to maintain healthy weight levels.

Don't get carried away with a do-it-yourself diet if you want to lose weight. Plan your weight loss program with the guidance of your personal physician. Some people are overweight because of an unsuspected illness, and to undertake an inappropriate diet could be counterproductive if not downright dangerous.

Lt. Governor To Lead MN. Smoking D-Day

Lieutenant Governor Lou Wangberg will serve as honorary chairman for Minnesota D-Day 1981. Wangberg, who quit smoking on D-Day 1980, says not smoking has improved his general health and his attitude about fitness.

"Smokers face serious health risks, including cancer, emphysema, heart attacks and chronic bronchitis," Wangberg said. "We want to reach all age groups about D-Day and the hazards of smoking. The way to quit smoking for good is to stop smoking for just one day — Minnesota D-Day."

The theme for Minnesota D-Day 1981, Thursday, January 22, is "Come to Your Senses." This will be the seventh observance of D-Day.

Buddy Ferguson, public information officer for the state department of health and D-Day 1981 steering committee chairman, said, "Fifteen per cent of the 60,000 individuals who pledged to quit smoking during past D-Days have managed to quit permanently. Only one in three Minnesotans smokes today."

This year Minnesotans will be approached through businesses, civic organizations, and educational institutions to pledge to quit smoking on D-Day. The Minnesota Jaycees have adopted D-Day as a special project of the statewide civic organization.

Minnesota D-Day is sponsored by the Minnesota lung association and the American cancer society, Minnesota division. Cooperating groups include the association for non-smokers' rights, the Minnesota medical and dental associations, the Minnesota department of health, the Minnesota interagency on smoking and health, the Minnesota society for public health education and the Minnesota association of student councils.

Closing Deal Frustrating In Home Buying

One of the most mysterious, surprising and sometimes frustrating steps in buying a home is closing the deal.

A new guidebook prepared by the U.S. department of housing and urban development (HUD) warns that closing costs may add two to 10 per cent to the cost of buying a home. The information workbook comes with checklists and sample legal forms.

A "closing," the workbook explains, is a meeting between the buyers, sellers, their representatives or agents, real estate broker and, in some cases, a title insurance representative.

The purpose of the meeting is to transfer ownership of the property from the seller to the buyer.

Weeks often elapse between the first agreement to buy and final settlement. During this period, a new deed is prepared, financing and home insurance is secured, the title is "searched" and tax adjustments are made between buyer and seller.

Under the real estate settlement procedures act (RESPA), federal law requires that the lender provide the buyer with a "good faith estimate" of the closing costs. Some charges, not listed on the RESPA statement, do not have to be disclosed until 24 hours before settlement. They may come as a surprise to the unsophisticated buyer.

The checklist included in the information package advises the buyer to expect to pay legal fees (incurred by the lender for preparing and recording documents), an origination fee (the lender's charge for making the loan — usually one per cent of the loan), appraisal fees, inspection fees, mortgage insurance, credit report, loan application fee and survey fee. In addition, the buyer will probably have to pay for the office secretarial help required during the settlement meeting.

The package also points out that many other one-time costs — some of these substantial — are often overlooked by the buyer until the moment of settlement.

These include real estate taxes, town service charges (which might include a special assessment), home and mortgage insurance payments that must be paid several months in advance, and interest charges from the date of the closing to the date of the first mortgage payment.

The package advises the buyer to bring more money to the settlement table than the lender has estimated and to do it in the form of a certified check. If it's too much, the excess will be rebated.

Just prior to settlement, the package cautions the buyer to make a last-minute check of the home being purchased to make sure all agreements made in the contract have been complied with and that all of the seller's furniture and trash will be out of the house by settlement.

The buyer who has been renting is reminded to give the landlord ample notice, confirm a moving date with a moving company, and notify utility companies when to shut off service at the old dwelling and turn it on at the new one.

The section on closing costs is one of seven categories to be thoroughly discussed in the information package. Samples of legal documents used in a typical transaction and a glossary of real estate terms also help to dispel the mystery surrounding a home purchase.

Subtract those things gathering dust in your home and add dollars to your income.

Wangsnes In "Who's Who" For Colleges

Kraig Wangsnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Wangsnes of St. Hilaire, was recognized at the senior recognition assembly program at Union college, Lincoln, NE. He received a certificate indicating that he has been selected to "Who's Who among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

This honor was given to 21 seniors at Union college this year who were considered to have demonstrated excellence in scholarship, leadership and participation in academic and extra-curricular activities, model citizenship and service to the college, promise of future usefulness to the church, society and business, and spiritual commitment and leadership. Kraig was also named on the national dean's list.

Some 103,000 widows, wives of totally- and permanently-disabled veterans and their children are enrolled in colleges or other training this year with Veterans Administration financial help.

Pennington ASC Election To Be Concluded Mon.

Election of Pennington county committeemen for the agricultural stabilization and conservation service (ASCS) committee is underway with ballots mailed to producers in the county to be returned by December 1.

Ballots will be counted at a meeting open to the public on December 4 and community chairmen, vice chairmen and regular members will meet at the county convention December 15 at 1:30 p.m. in the meeting room of the Thief River Falls regional library. County committee will be elected at that meeting and Merle Hedland, executive director of the Minnesota Wheat council, will be the guest speaker.

Candidates for community committee men in each of the six communities of Pennington county include the following:

Silverton, Kratka, Cloverleaf — Ivan Downs, Clayton Hanson, Daniel Johnson, Carl Lindblom, Don Longevan, and J. Duane Nelson;

Mayfield, Hickory and Deer Park — Eugene Arveson, Henry Burack, Harry Hanson, Darrow Lundeen, Ernest Mostrom, Orlan Stolaas, Loren Vettleson;

Smiley, Wyandotte, River Falls and Black River — Curtis Christensen, Verdeen Grove, Arnold Hammer, Robert Peterson, Kenneth Schoeder and Bryan Steiger;

Norden, North and Rocksbury — Dake Ayers, Donovan Dyrdal, Kermit Finstad, Clayton Mathson, Scott Olson, Andrew Skaar;

Numedahl, Bray, Sanders and Polk Centre — Herman Aaseby, Clarence H. Anderson, Charles Naplin, Melvin Scholin, Chester Swanson, Curtis W. Swanson and Peter Mosbeck;

Goodridge, Reiner, Star and Highlanding — Kenneth Coan, Eugene Fiedler, Selmer Holen, Glenis Iverson, Robert O. Parnow, Marlin Sand.

Candidate receiving the greatest number of votes in each community will become the community chairman. Candidate with the second largest number will become vice chairman and candidate with the third largest vote will become the regular member. Those with fourth and fifth greatest votes will become first and second alternate members.

City Resolves Zoning; Hears From Citizens

devices that he had obtained in various other stores throughout Thief River Falls — some of which could be used with drugs, also.

"If we don't say 'no' to the sale of these things now, it will be easier for other businesses like these to arrive in the city," Schwietz said.

Following her statements, she presented a compilation of petitions bearing the signatures of 933 Thief River Falls citizens, in opposition to the sale of the paraphernalia in the store.

Ken Murphy, a second spokesman for the petitioners, discussed various laws connected with this problem that have been enforced in some Minnesota municipalities. He compared the problem to that of speed laws enforced within the city.

"We have a 30 mph speed limit in the city," he said. "For a driver to obey this law but to not look left or right while driving through the city is an irresponsible action. If we do nothing about the problem of the sale of these items in the stores, we are supporting a trade in the community."

Robert Wurst, city attorney, speaking on the legal aspect of the problem, discussed the problem of prohibiting the sale of something simply because it "could be used for drugs."

"Syringes, Bunsen burners and teaspoons can be used for administering heroine, yet we don't prohibit the purchase of those items," he said.

"On the other hand," he stressed, "just because some of the items can be purchased in a variety of stores, it doesn't mean the sale of them should not be prohibited."

Following the discussion, alderman Dr. Don Goodrich introduced the resolution to refer the matter to the city attorney for an in-depth study with a report back to the council at their second regular meeting in December.

Council resumed with the proposed hearing of the Federal Revenue Sharing Budget for 1981 which had been scheduled for 7 p.m. last evening, but which has been delayed due to the special session with council and legal counsel concerning the rezoning issues.

Roger Delap, assistant city clerk, discussed the proposed budget items included within the proposed budget estimated at $87,000.

Purpose of the hearing, he said, was to provide the citizens of Thief River Falls an opportunity to submit oral or written comments for the proposed use of federal revenue sharing funds.

Items included within the proposed budget are senior meals; garbage rate subsidy, para-transit bus program, Falls Delivered Meals program; pedestrian walkway at the corner of Nora and Pennington to the Red Lake River dam; payloader for the street department, and a cement culvert at the L. B. Hartz park.

Next step, following the proposed use hearing, will be a budget hearing, which will be scheduled at a later date.

With the adjournment of the proposed hearing, council members reconvened for their regular meeting, beginning with a discussion of planning commission recommendations discussed by Jack Quinlivan, city planner.

First request was the recommended approval of the request by Harland Knutson and Bruce Russell to rezone from R-2 (medium density residential) to C-1 (neighborhood commercial) the property at 605 N. Main. Council approved the request as recommended by the planning commission based on the inclusion that parking requirements are met.

Council members accepted the commission's recommended denial of a request by Anderson Brothers to waive platting requirements. The waiver would have facilitated the transfer of one acre of property;

Finally, following a discussion of the annexation of 67.9 acres of land northeast of the intersection of Highway 1 and 59 as initiated by Alpha Investments, council members voted to adjourn last evening's meeting to Monday (December 1) at 7:30 p.m. at which time members of North township, Thief River Falls chamber of commerce, and city planners will be invited to further discuss the issue. City attorney Robert Wurst was instructed to contact the executive director of the Municipal board to discuss a possible delay in the hearing date on the matter set for December 3.

Planning commission had denied the annexation of the above described property based on (1) economic conditions; (2) further consideration which should be made of the area, including costs and site location; and (3) comments from residents.

In further council action, Jay Jorgenson's request for the use of space in the cemetery commission office for full days (rather than half days as last year) to receive applications for fuel assistance, was approved by council. Period will extend from December 1, 1980 to April 30, 1981.

Request from Jim Fremstad regarding the use of the upper floor of the old library building for alcoholic anonymous meetings twice weekly was referred to the building committee for further consideration.

Parking assessment district hearing is set for 7 p.m. December 9, before the next regular city council meeting which will begin at 7:30 that evening.

enforcement center — and they will be assessed a combined total of $17,418.77. School District 564 is not included in the assessment. Northwestern hospital is included in the third category of public, office, service and professional.

Should the city council accept the assessment roll following the December 9 hearing, property owners assessed will have a 30-day period to file objections on equity of assessments or to pay all or a part of their assessment without interest. Following the 30-day period the assessments will be added to taxes on the property. A projected repayment period of 10 to 15 years is being considered, depending on the time period for which the best bond interest rate can be obtained.

Jon Larson is chairman of the assessment district committee which also includes business representatives Dick Bjorkman and Duane Walton and city representatives Mayor Bob Carlson and aldermen Bill Penning and Dr. Donald Goodrich. Technical assistance has been provided by Stewart; city clerk Jerry Wigness and city planning director Jack Quinlivan.

Sen. Boschwitz Heads Foreign Ag Committee

Senator Rudy Boschwitz has been named chairman of the agriculture committee's subcommittee on foreign agriculture policy.

Boschwitz, who will assume the post in January when the new Congress convenes, was selected for the position by other Republican members of the agriculture committee.

Commenting on this new role, Boschwitz said, "I plan to direct the subcommittee toward a more active role in promoting the export of American agricultural products. This is important both to the balance of trade of the U.S. and to the economy of Minnesota, which ranks fifth of all the states in the export of ag products."

"One out of every 10 people in our state lives on a farm," Boschwitz said, "and agriculture is clearly our largest industry in Minnesota. Because there will be little expansion of sales within this country, new production will have to be exported in the coming years. Although these exports have been increasing yearly, I think we can do even better in seeking out new markets and supplying food to the world.

"This subcommittee slot will be very important to Minnesota," Boschwitz said, "because it will give me an even better opportunity to formulate and direct legislation to improve our export situation in terms of agricultural products."

Boschwitz said Minnesota ranks fifth in the export of soybeans and feedgrains, eighth in export of wheat and first in dairy products. "That is an excellent record," he says, "but we can do better and we can explore new markets for the export of finished meat products as well as dairy products."

In preparing for his job of subcommittee chairman, Boschwitz said he is planning action in five major issues that affect the export of American agriculture products.

"I will ask immediately for a meeting with President-elect Reagan and urge him to lift the Russian grain embargo," Boschwitz said. "This embargo has been harmful for export programs and threatens the future sale of ag products abroad."

Boschwitz said he would also call for a meeting of all the exporters for the purpose of establishing a moratorium on bilateral grain agreements.

"The only purpose of these agreements, he said, "is to carve up the world market place. In periods of short supply the U.S. may not be able to satisfy their traditional customers if they are locked into these trade agreements. Such agreements also interrupt normal grain trade patterns through direct government involvement," he said, "and I think the job can be better done by private firms.

"I will introduce legislation to establish a revolving fund for U.S. export credit programs," Boschwitz said. "This program would provide loans to foreign governments at prevailing market interest rates for the purpose of financing the importing of American agricultural products."

Boschwitz also called for immediate implementation of the agricultural trade act of 1978. "That act," he said, "authorized the establishment of new trade offices overseas. However, only one-fourth of these offices have been put in operation and we need to get going on this program if it is to do its job."

"I will also work to strengthen the PL 480 or Food For Peace program," Boschwitz said. "We should expand the Title III program which would permit countires to use some of the funds due the U.S. as repayment to finance development projects within their own country.

"These are a few of the measures for which I will be working as chairman of the foreign agricultural policy subcommittee," Boschwitz said.

Self-Control, Exercise Make Dieting Work

by George E. Jordan
'U' M News Service

Self-control, common sense and physical exercise are the keys to effective weight control, and without them, experts at the University of Minnesota say, sustained weight loss is almost impossible.

"In the long run, there is no shortcut to weight control," said Joann Eccher, professor of public health nutrition. "The big thing about weight control is that people think it's easy."

Eccher said controlled eating combined with exercise is the healthy way to lose weight and that many diet plans that use other methods result in physical discomfort and only temporary weight loss.

Research indicates that some overweight people see their excess fat as separate from the rest of their body, like an overcoat that can be shed anytime. They may turn to quick weight-reduction plans such as those advertised in popular magazines.

"If you try one of those quickie diets, you'll lose a lot of water weight but your body eventually will rebel against the diet," Eccher said.

There are three widely publicized types of diets that Eccher calls "pretty bizarre ways to lose weight." Simple examination shows each of them to be unhealthy, she said.

The first calls for eating high-protein foods, such as meats, drinking several glasses of water a day, and avoiding high-carbohydrate foods like bread and fruits.

Another quick-weight-loss diet calls for high consumption of fatty foods like butter, eggs and meat. This high-fat diet also limits high-carbohydrate foods.

Eccher said any diet plan that prohibits carbohydrates causes a buildup of ketone bodies in the bloodstream. A buildup of this acetate-like agent can cause headaches, nausea and possible liver and kidney damage.

Most low-carbohydrate diets call for several glasses of water a day to flush ketone bodies from the bloodstream, delaying the onset of ketosis. Eccher said dieters should be wary of plans that include drinking a lot of water.

The third type of diet involves some kind of gimmickry. Usually the dieter is required to eat nothing but a specified food, like apples, grapefruit or soup, over a period of several weeks.

Eccher said dieters often become bored with gimmick diets and return to uncontrolled eating. "All these diets achieve is deception," she said.

"The best and only way to lose weight is to control your eating habits and to exercise. If you diet but do not exercise, you lose lean body mass faster than fat," she said.

To achieve long-term weight control, Eccher said, "one must develop a positive body image and high self-esteem." Dieters must control stress and tension, which can lead to between-meal snacking, she said.

Finally, dieters must have a well-balanced nutritional plan, and should try internal pep talks to convince themselves that weight loss is possible, Eccher said.

Owners of front-wheel drive cars are reminded that snow tires should be mounted on the front axle where they can help pull the car through snow. If radial tires are used on the front, radials should be used on the rear regardless of whether the vehicle is front-wheel or rear-wheel drive.

Minnesotans Are Observing 55 MPH Limit

More Minnesotans are observing the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit which is good news in safety and monetary terms, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Latest Federal Highway administration speed monitoring summary for the state, prepared by the Minnesota department of transportation for July through September of this year, shows a significant increase in the percentage of motorists in compliance with the 55 mph law.

Average for all vehicles in compliance for the period was 48.3 per cent, up from 45 per cent for April through June of this year.

Comparison with 1979 is also of interest. From April to June, 1979, the average percentage of those in compliance with the 55 law was 40.8 per cent. For the July-September period the percentage was 48.1 per cent. Last October to December the compliance percentage was only 39.7 per cent.

Col. D. Roger Ledding, chief of the Minnesota state patrol, believes the Project 20 enforcement team of the patrol has made a difference. Project teams have been working in high traffic areas for the past year. Ledding thinks presence of troopers to check speeds and provide motorists with a more visual reminder of the enforcement program is producing results. "We will continue to pursue our goal of encouraging compliance with the speed limit," Ledding said.

From a financial standpoint, Minnesota will continue to receive federal money for highway programs if it meets the federal compliance schedule which requires 40 per cent compliance by this September 30, 50 per cent by next September, 60 by 1982 and 70 by 1983.

Minnesota has more than met this year's federal standard.

Must Apply By January 31 For Trainee Status

Students pursuing a course of study in soil conservation, soil science, range conservation and agricultural engineering who are interested in being a student trainee next summer, must establish their eligibility before Jan. 31, 1981.

Student trainee positions include both participation in planned on-the-job training in a federal agency, usually during vacation periods, and attendance at an accredited college during the school year. Students receive continuing career-conditional appointments at the GS-3 and GS-4 grade levels and are granted leave without pay to return to school at the end of each vacation work period. After graduation from college, trainees are assigned to continuing professional positions offering good promotion opportunities in the field for which they were trained.

For educational requirements, the applicant must have successfully completed or will complete by the date of appointment the number of academic years of study specified below:

For GS-3 — One full academic year (30 semester hours or 45 quarter hours) of study leading to an appropriate major.

For GS-4 — Two full academic years (60 semester hours or 90 quarter hours) of study leading to an appropriate major.

College study must be at an accredited college or university in a full four-year or longer curriculum leading to a bachelor's degree. College study at an accredited junior college will be accepted if the credits are acceptable in full by a four-year accredited college toward completion of its own cirriculum in the field concerned.

To qualify for these jobs, course schedule must be such that at the time of graduation, the applicant will meet the basic minimum requirements listed below for the specialization for which he or she is applying.

Soil Conservation — Major study must be in soil conservation or a closely related natural resource or agriculture field, such as forestry, agronomy and wildlife biology.

Soil Science — Major study must be in soil science or a closely related subject matter field.

Range Conservation — Major study must be in range management or a directly related subject matter field.

Agricultural Engineering — Major study must be in agricultural engineering.

Applications will be accepted only from students meeting the educational requirements. Student must also have a valid driver's license at the time of appointment.

Application forms should be mailed to USDA, Soil Conservation Service, Special Examining Unit, 10,000 Aerospace Road, Lanham, Maryland 20801. Application forms can be obtained from the local soil conservation service or a federal job information center.

In some states, you can purchase a home without acquiring the land it sits on under a land lease agreement. The down payment is smaller and so are the monthly payments. The agreement should include a property lease giving you an option to buy within three to five years, advise CPAs.

November Election Results Announced

Official results of the November election as certified by the state canvassing board have been announced. The canvassing board's report indicates that a record 2,079,411 persons voted in the election. This was 71.9 per cent of the persons qualified to vote and it appears at this point that Minnesota again led the nation in voter turnout.

Number of persons who were qualified to vote on constitutional amendments was 2,079,015 and therefore 1,039,508 "yes" votes were needed in order to pass a constitutional amendment. Based upon that figure the only amendment to be certified by the canvassing board was the amendment requiring limits and disclosure in campaign spending.

Proposed amendments received the following votes: Amendment 1 — reapportionment — 1,036,581 "yes" votes and 754,935 "no" votes; amendment 2 — campaign spending, 1,457,454 and 398,551; amendment 3 — highway bonds — 964,212 and 823,192; amendment 4 — initiative and referendum — 970,407 and 854,164; and amendment 5 — notaries public — 944,883 and 850,251.

Since the Minnesota Constitution was approved in 1857 there have been a total of 195 amendments proposed to the voters of which 103 have been adopted and 92 rejected. A proposed amendment must receive a majority of those voting at the election in order to be adopted.

The following votes were cast for president:

Not voting — 27,495, 1.3 per cent; Carter (Democratic Farmer Labor) — 954,173, 45.9 per cent; Reagan (Independent Republican) — 873,268, 42.0 per cent; Clark (Libertarian) — 31,593, 1.5 per cent; DeBerry (Socialist Workers) — 711, .03 per cent; Griswold (Workers World) — 698, .04 per cent; Hall (Communist) — 1,117, .05 per cent; Anderson (Anderson Coalition) — 174,997, 8.4 per cent; McReynolds (Socialist) — 536, .03 per cent; Commoner (Citizens) — 8,406, .4 per cent; no candidate specified (American party) — 6,136, .3 per cent; and write-in votes — 281, .01 per cent.

There were 433,567 persons who registered on election day which was 20.85 per cent of the people who voted at the election. Secretary of state Joan Growe said, "county auditors and city clerks are currently in the process of contacting all of the people who registered on election day to ensure that they actually live at the address they used when they registered."

Election officials send a non-forwardable post card to all of these people and if the post office cannot deliver the card it is returned to the election official who begins an investigation to determine if voter fraud has occurred. Often the errors are clerical or easily explained, but if there is any indication of fraud the county auditor will inform both the secretary of state and the county attorney who will determine whether prosecution is in order.

Giving false information to register is a felony punishable by not more than five years imprisonment and a fine of not more than $5,000.

"Since election day registration was authorized in 1973," Growe said, "over 1,750,000 persons have registered at the polls with only three reported cases of fraud. Those three people, I'm happy to report, each received a severe sentence for their action."

AMC Annual Meet Examines County Role

Seventy-first annual conference of the Association of Minnesota Counties (AMC) entitled "The Changing Role of County Government," was conducted recently at the Radisson south hotel in Bloomington.

Conference was attended by an estimated 550 people, among them county commissioners, auditors, engineers, AMC staff members, spouses and family members, including several from Pennington county.

Theme of the conference was addressed from several different perspectives by four guest speakers. Management consultant Dr. Richard Byrd tackled county government's changing role directly, and challenged the "will to manage" of county officials. Oklahoma Congressman Wes Watkins defined and spoke on behalf of "grassroots government" and outlined the necessity for rural governments to protect their own financial interests. Jay Beecroft, a management consultant from San Francisco, addressed pervasive problems of leadership and management by presenting his own "biases and prejudices" on the subject, and Bernard Hillenbrand, executive director of the national association of counties, opened the conference with a plea for unity and expressed his concern over the stalled progress of revenue sharing appropriations.

A number of policy resolutions were passed at the recent business meeting expressing member positions in the areas of labor relations, forest lands, building code laws, acquisition of wilderness areas, boundary waters canoe area funding, scenic and wild rivers, remonumentation, fuel allocation, health, and human services. One amendment, dealing with the amending of public assistance rules to increase burial policy amounts from $750 to $1200 for welfare recipients, was voted down.

Lighter moments of the conference included a spouses tour of the Betty Crocker Kitchens and a comparison and contrast mock county board meeting, which offered a glimpse of the practices and malpractices of county boards from the fictional counties of "Camelot" and "Notsohot."

Also during the 71st annual meeting of the association, Cottonwood county commissioner Frank Jungas assumed the presidency of the AMC, succeeding commissioner Dennis Hron of Scott county.

"There can be no north, no south, no east or west, no metro or urban counties," said Jungas, who has been active at the national level in the movement to reform the welfare system. Since 1975, he has chaired the National Association of counties welfare reform committee. This work led him to testify before Congress and to meet with President Carter during 1978 on behalf of the welfare reform effort.

Ramsey county commissioner Donald Salverda was elected first vice president of the association. Salverda, in addition to his commissioner duties, is President of attitude development consultants, a management training organization based in Roseville.

In the only contested officer race, Marshall county commissioner Kenneth Price was elected 2nd vice president. Commissioner Paul McAlpine of Wright County was elected secretary-treasurer.

WHEN THE SCHOOL DAY is done, the homework begins, and Mom and Dad (Marcie and Tim Kazmierczak) are always available to help. "Homework first and then TV," their dad stresses, *although "it doesn't always work like that," he said. Even though Scott, 15, one of the six Kaz*mierczak children (pictured) looks forward to getting out of school for Thanksgiving, he is thankful that, "we're all here," he said.

ARNOLD KAZMIERCZAK, 16, the oldest of six children, enjoys farming, he said. But right now, homework comes first, and Dad (Tim) is always there to help. Arnold enjoys "everything" about Thanksgiving, he said, and is thankful for the family's "good health." Any type of work (except doing dishes!) interests the children, who have come to accept the fact that in these sometimes difficult times, it is most important to be a 'family'.

Minn. Winter Calendar Is Now Available

Every winter Minnesota makes national news with its record cold temperatures. But without those low thermometer readings and ample snowfall, the winter calendar of events wouldn't be as interesting as it is. Where else can you find the International Eelpout Ice Fishing Tournament or the Ice Box Days 10km Freeze Your Gizzard Blizzard Run?

These Minnesota events and many more are part of the winter calendar distributed free by the Minnesota Tourist Information Center. Annual national events include the All American Championship Sled Dog Races in Ely; the nation's longest cross country ski race, Minnesota-Finlandia Ski Marathon, in Bemidji; and the Cindy Nelson Cup Ski Races in Lutsen where the 1978 Olympic bronze medalist learned to ski at the family's ski resort.

There are several events each week all winter that highlight snowmobiling, cross country skiing, curling, ice fishing, downhill skiing and sled dog racing. Community festivals such as Winter Polka Days in Mounds View, the Sleigh and Cutter parade in Waseca and the 95-year-old St. Paul Winter Carnival add more variety. Crane Lake's Hivernant's Rendevous, a version of French voyageur winter games, and New Ulm's pre-Lenten masked ball and festival called Fasching bring ethnic color to winter celebrations.

Free copies of the winter calendar are available from the Minnesota Tourist Information Center, 480 Cedar St., St. Paul, MN 55101. Twin Cities residents may call 296-5029 Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Minnesota residents out of the Twin Cities may call toll free 1-800-652-9747. Those outside Minnesota in the continental United States may call toll free 1-800-328-1461.

Firewood Piles May Spread Elm Disease

Now that the home heating season is underway, many Minnesotans are stocking up on firewood. While people warm their homes this winter, the state shade tree program asks them to do elms a favor — don't allow the firewood stack to help spread Dutch elm disease.

"Consumers who have elm wood stored with the bark still intact can undo much of the progress that has been achieved so far in controlling Dutch elm disease," said Richard Haskett, director of the shade tree program for the Minnesota department of agriculture.

"Elm wood with the bark intact is a breeding place for the elm bark beetles that carry the Dutch elm disease fungus to healthy trees," said Haskett. "In the spring, the adults and young — up to 1,500 in a single fireplace log — emerge from diseased trees with Dutch elm disease fungus clinging to their bodies. They then fly to healthy elms to feed, thus spreading the disease to previously uninfected trees."

Because of this danger to healthy elms, the shade tree program reminds Minnesotans of the ordinances affecting the storage of elm wood. Many Minnesota municipalities have an ordinance forbidding the storage of bark intact elm wood at any time during the year. Still, other communities permit storage of elm wood with the bark intact but only between September 15, and April 1 (the dormant period for the elm bark beetles.) If your community allows storage of elm wood, be sure to burn it before April 1. That way the wood won't threaten healthy elms. In order to determine which ordinance affects your community, call the tree inspector at city hall.

In addition, there is a state quarantine in effect which restricts transportation of elm wood with the bark intact. The quarantine prohibits movement of elm wood for use as firewood through any home rule charter or statutory city, or any designated disease control area. This year more than 460 Minnesota communities participated in the shade tree program which helps fund sanitation measures that control the spread of Dutch elm disease. Each of these communities has designated a disease control area. (The quarantine does not affect elm wood intended for industrial use as long as its movement continues uninterrupted through the control area.)

While these regulations help protect healthy elms, shade tree program plant health specialist, Lyle Mueller, reminds consumer that elm wood cut this year may not be ready to burn. "Elm wood, just as any firewood, needs to be cured. Green firewood produces a cresote buildup in chimneys when burned. For those of you who want to store elm wood, the best advice is to remove the bark and allow the logs time to cure before burning. Once the wood is debarked, it no longer violates any ordinance or threatens to spread Dutch elm disease. Once the bark has been removed the wood can no longer be a breeding site for elm bark beetles, and thus, poses no threat to healthy elms," said Mueller.

It is easiest to remove the bark from elm wood when the tree is freshly cut. Once the logs have been allowed to site the layer of moisture between the bark and the log begins to dry and harden. When this happens a chisel or similar tool is needed to detach the bark.

When bringing elm wood into your home to burn, remember to burn the wood as soon as possible. If eggs have been laid between the bark and the wood, the process of bringing the wood into a warm environment simulates spring in the insects' breeding cycle. It is possible that within a few weeks thousands of beetles would emerge from the wood into your home. While the beetles present no hazard to your home, they are a nuisance, since up to 1,500 beetles may emerge from any single log.

Klemisch And Thibert Sing In MSU Choir

Over 100 voices along with the sounds of brass instruments and flutes will be featured in "A Feast of Carols," Moorhead state university's annual Christmas concert.

Students performing with the university's choral groups from this area include Loretta Klemisch, junior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Klemisch, Thief River Falls; and Greg Thibert, junior, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger D. Thibert, Red Lake Falls.

One performance is scheduled at 8:15 p.m. December 13, the other at 3 p.m. December 14, both in Weld hall auditorium. They are free and open to the public.

ASCS Election Being Held Through Mail

Farmers in the eight communities in Marshall county's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation service (ASCS) areas are reminded of the current mail election for community committeemen being conducted, says county chairman Alton Nybladh of Stephen.

All producers have been mailed ballots which must be returned to the ASCS office in Warren by December 1. The ballots will be counted in public at the ASCS office in Warren December 5.

County convention will be held December 15 in Warren and elected committeemen from the eight communities in the county will elect the county committee.

Candidates have been nominated for each community with the candidate receiving the highest number of votes to be chairman, the second highest vice chairman, third highest the regular member and then the first alternate and second alternate.

Townships in the eight communities and the farmers nominated on the ballot for these communities follow:

Bigwoods, Bloomer, Boxville, Middle River, Oak Park, Vega and Warrenton — Laverne Boman, Robert Bystrom, Russell Demeyere, Phillip Edman, Duane Ekman and Alex Feltman;

Alma, Comstock, Foldahland Viking, Marsh Grove and McCrea — Rolland Amundson, Roger D. Anderson, Merlin Boe, Stephen Gast, Leonard Gonsorowski, Eugene Jorgenson and Franklin Knoll;

Donnelly, Eagle Point, Fork, Parker, Sinnott and Tamarac — Harry Anderson, Bruce Dahl, Charles Field, Carter Hjelle, James Kowalski and Walter Rud;

Agder, East Valley, Excel, Holt, Newfolden and New Solum — Eldon Augustine, Lester Elseth, Leslie Folden, Clifford Jorde, Harold Lambert, Richard Moen and Garret Reierson;

Augsburg, Lincoln, Nelson Park, Wagner, West Valley and Wright — Phillip Boen, Charles Carlson, Frank Kasprowicz, J. R. Kleinwachter, George A. Kuznia, Vergil Setterholm and Thomas Urbaniak;

Cedar, Como, East Park, Huntly, New Maine and Spruce Valley — Kenneth Beito, Vernon Bentson, Gerald Gillund, Donovan Ruud, Virgil Wagner and Armand Westlund.

Eckvoll, Espelie, Grand Plain, Moylan and Valley — Merlin Drangstveit, LeRoy Johnson, Vernon Rogalla, Orvin Sunsdahl, Rodney Wayne and Lloyd Wiseth;

Linsell, Moose River, Rollis, Thief Lake, Veldt and Whiteford — Ronald Engelstad, Alan Lunsetter, Bruce Lunsetter, Edward Monson, Dwayne Nelson and Grant Satre.

Kazmierczaks Share Meaning Of "Family"

that many people is "fun." "I have a lot of help," she smiled.

Brian's reply to our question, "Are you anxious for Thanksgiving?" brought a puzzled look to his tiny innocent face. "Is Christmas coming to your house too?" he inquired, his eyes growing large and round. "I'm gonna get a choo choo train with batteries."

For Tim and Marcie, there is nothing better than their children — all six of them. "There's always room for more," she exclaimed.

"It's been hard not having the money at times to buy everything they want," she confessed. "But they understand — as long as they're fed and have clothes to wear. When they need money for things they get it."

"When they're closer together (in age) then help each other a lot," Tim said. "We rarely have to punish them. We just tell them if they can't behave, that's it. They understand a lot."

"Once in a while Daddy makes them kneel down to say a couple of Hail Marys when they do something wrong," Marcie smiled.

The Kazmierczaks do many things together — that seems to be the secret lying behind their close-knit family. "I think we've always been close," Tim said.

Perhaps, today, this asset is almost a rarity — at least according to Joseph and Lois Bird in "Power to the Parents." "The price of being a 'family' today is high, and getting higher," they say. "The so-called 'nuclear family' has exploded in all directions like a shattered atom, the members leave the center with ever increasing speed. Families have all but lost their ability to find enjoyment in each other. Many don't even try."

Marcie, along with other neighborhood women, recently started a Sanders township 4-H club. Twenty-seven kids joined — including four of the Kazmierczaks.

Dad and the boys cut wood and hunt together. The family plays and works together. When they travel, they go together. And they always go to church together.

"That's the first thing we do Thanksgiving day," Marcie said.

"They all help out at Thanksgiving," Marcie said. "Arnold likes helping in the kitchen — especially grinding the meat for the dressing. I have all kinds of help with the pie crust," she added, eyeing bright-eyed Brian who had come to join us in the kitchen, blowing bubbles with an oversized piece of yellow chewing gum that he had to take out of his mouth and examine after the creation of each bubble.

Tim and Marcie feel they are fortunate to have such a healthy family.

"It makes you proud when they're in something special in school and you can say, 'those are my kids'!" she said.

They agree that families seem to be more split up now. "TV has changed that a lot," Tim said.

"There used to be more communication between the relatives when they'd get together on Thanksgiving," Marcie said. "Now everyone sits around the TV set."

"If we could have animals, I think the kids would be happier," their mother added. "Then they'd have more chores to do."

"I'm gonna get a horsie and ride through the parade!" Brian cried, hearing the word 'animal' as he sat on the floor among an assortment of tiny cars.

"I guess the hardest thing about being parents of so many children is that there isn't always money to buy those "special" things," Marie said. "It's difficult when one of them comes home from school and says, 'all the kids at school have $30 tennis shoes'. It bothers them that they can't have them too."

Marcie somewhat regrets having had to work those 12 years — years when she would have liked to have been home to help their children get ready for school.

It was 3:15 last Thursday afternoon when Marcie gazed out of the window and began counting the bundled figures nearing the Kazmierczak home. "Here they come... one... two... three... four... five...," she smiled.

Instantly, the door burst open, and in walked seven snowy youngsters (two of whom were spending the week with the Kazmierczaks while their parents were away).

"Why are you so snowy?"

"Because I've been walking in the snow, Mom!" he said, smiling.

And suddenly the questions began, and the once quiet home (except for the periodic interruptions from Brian) became a home filled with bustling, happy children eager to share their day's experiences with Mother and Dad.

"Can I go to the dance tomorrow, Mom?" asked Scott. "It only costs a dollar."

"Mom, I gotta join basketball," Wayne uttered. "They say I'm the best dribbler."

Soon they were surrounding the table, eager to share their ideas of Thanksgiving.

"I'm thankful for us all being together," Connie offered.

"That we're here," added Scott.

"For a warm house and for someone who discovered America," Scott continued. ("Who did?" someone questioned, at which Wayne shrugged his shoulders).

"For our good health and everything," came Arnold'd reply.

"I thank God for everything," Deborah said.

Two large round sparkling eyes were seen at the table as Brian excitedly watched and listened to his brothers and sisters. His assortment of colored cars was close at hand.

And when it came time for the family photo that evening, Brian retrieved his blanket and entered the family living room yawning. It would soon be time for bed. Questions had been answered, the family meal had been eaten and school tales told.

Numerous tiny tracks were evident in the white snow leading to the Kazmierczak home as we left. Another day to be thankful for.

Mother and Father,
Our spirits are kites.
We long to fly even higher into blue beyondness.
But keep a firm hand on our strings, please.
Let them unwind in favorable winds;
Take up the slack when the wind dies down
And never forget to reel us in
When nightfall or stormy weather comes.

BRIAN KAZMIERCZAK, 3, has his parents or five brothers and sisters to go to if he has questions or problems. And all family members are eager to help out. Marcie and Tim, Brian's parents, have come to believe that the key to their happy family is "togetherness." Pictured with Brian is his sister, Connie, 15, who enjoys fashion and fabrics and photography. She is thankful, she said, that the family can be together this Thanksgiving.

"IS CHRISTMAS coming to your house, too?" Brian Kazmierczak, 3, asked when he heard the word casually mentioned. "I'm gonna get a choo choo train with batteries." "It's sometimes hard not being able to buy those 'special' things," Marcie, their mother said. "But they understand. When they need money for things they get it. They have clothes and they're fed, that's what's important."

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Once again the trapping season is upon us. Ask yourself this question: If you were aware of the pain and suffering an animal went through to contribute to a fur coat could you wear it? Would you want it?

Trapping is on the increase. Because "chic" women and men must adorn themselves with "fun furs" and because "hobby trappers" want extra cash (less than one per cent of all trappers in this country relay on trapping as a significant source of income), it is estimated that in this country 15 million wild animals die slow, agonizing deaths in primative and excruciatingly painful steel-jaw leghold traps. . . even though there are far more humane traps available. Thousands of dogs, cats and other non-target naimals also fall victim to this device.

Some people actually believe these animals cannot feel the pain when they are trapped. Others couldn't care less; their only interest is to get the pelt and leave the rest of the animal to rot. I find it difficult to understand why anyone would want to put a living thing through such a grisly ordeal. What a waste of life and beauty for some wealthy person's vanity!

Leghold traps are non-selective, that is, whatever steps in or puts its head in the trap is caught. Most traps are not legally identified so they can't be traced to the owner in case of misuse. Many traps are not checked for days or weeks at a time. Laws concerning these problems are unenforceable and the only way to stop the cruelties is to abolish the leghold trap.

Although money is the main reason trappers do what they do, population control is claimed as a service. Unlike hunting, where there is usually a fairly quick kill, trapping is a crude, slow and tormenting means of taking animals. I know populations have to be controlled. I also know the difference between control and torture.

Another reason given for trapping is that real furs cost less than fake furs in terms of energy content. Not so. More energy is used in producing and maintaining real furs as opposed to synthetic furs.

If all trapping and snaring can't be stopped at least it can be made more humane. Support of humane organizations is needed along with letters to public officials and news media airing views on the subject. Ask for an end to the steel-jaw leghold trap and snares in favor of more humane types. At least death will come swiftly instead of the animal laying for hours or days chewing its leg off or breaking its teeth on steel jaws struggling to regain its freedom. Is a fur coat or stole worth all that misery???

Sincerely
-s-John Wengeler

To The Editor:

In regard to the "Letter to the Editor" from Kenneth Severinson, president of Arctic Enterprises, published in your paper on Monday, November 24th, I feel obligated to respond to one statement.

There was a reason why Mr. Wenstrom did not make a request to visit at the Arctic plant in Thief River Falls during the recent election campaign. In late August, when Gene Wenstrom was in TRF for a meeting, I had a chance to talk to him. Mr. Wenstrom asked me what I knew about the possibility of campaigning at the Arctic plant. I told him that I had been informed that their policy was to allow no campaigning on the company premises by any candidate. Therefore, Mr. Wenstrom did not make a request to visit the Arctic plant. What I was not aware of, before the election, was what a political candidate would be allowed to do on a visit to the plant and not be in violation of the company policy.

I want to thank the Thief River Falls Times for publishing this letter and, since I am not trying to start a debate through the newspaper on this subject, further discussion on this matter will be between representatives of Arctic and the International Woodworkers of America.

Sincerely,
-s-Wayne Bjornrud,

Family Health Care Unit Has Sliding Scale

Agassiz Family Health Care, Inc., a non-profit corporation with clinics in Red Lake Falls and Erskine, utilizes federal funding under the rural health initiative program to provide health care services to all patients, regardless of ability to pay, according to executive director Kirk A. Mahlen.

"If you feel your annual income falls within the guidelines of our sliding fee scale, you may be eligible to receive a substantial discount on your medical and pharmacy bills," Mahlen said. Sliding fee scale applications are available at either the Red Lake Falls or Erskine clinics or by calling 253-4381 in Red Lake Falls or 687-5317 in Erskine.

Under the fee schedule, single farm residents would pay from zero to 80 per cent of the payable charges if income ranged from less than $3,250 to $6,500. A non-farm family of 10 would pay from zero to 80 per cent of charges if income ranged from $14,770 to $29,540, Mahlen said.

Heart Fund Conference Set At Plymouth

American Heart association, Minnesota affiliate, Inc. will be conducting its 1981 state heart fund leadership conference December 4 at the Radisson Inn, Plymouth, according to Peggy Atmore Mason, 1981 state heart fund chairman.

Over 100 Heart association volunteers from throughout the state will attend the day-long conference which will provide information and training in coordinating local heart fund campaigns. Annual campaign will reach its climax in February when over 60,000 Minnesota volunteers call on their neighbors to receive their contributions. Funds are used to finance the Minnesota affiliate's programs in heart research, professional and public education, and community services.

Theme of the conference is "A Heart Trilogy: Problems, Promises and Performances."

"The conference provides an excellent forum for exchanging ideas with other heart fund volunteers from around the state," Mason said.

Simultaneous workshops will be conducted in the afternoon on fund-raising techniques, which will be followed by a photography session. Conference will conclude with a dinner banquet and awards presentation.

American heart association, Minnesota Affiliate, Inc., is a statewide health agency and is part of the American heart association which is represented by 55 affiliates in all states and territories of the U.S. It is the only statewide voluntary health agency dedicated to the reduction of premature death and disability caused by heart and blood vessel diseases.

Voluntary leadership comes from medical, paramedical, and other professional groups, and from business and lay persons throughout the state.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

With Things So Bad, Why Do I Feel Good?

Old habits die hard, but America seems to be changing lately in ways many people would have never dreamed possible. For example, some of the most ferocious radicals during the 60's have now become ardent advocates of private enterprise, and even successful entrepreneurs in their own right. Business schools, once the object of derision on college campuses, are enjoying a tremendous surge in applications.

In sports, the Philadelphia Phillies threw out the script when first they refused to lose the National League pennant, and then they proceeded to win the World Series. And now, to what must be the heavenly delight of old Ben Franklin, the other Philadelphia teams in football, basketball and hockey are all intimidating their opponents and leading their divisions as well. If this keeps up much longer, what was once considered that sleepy City of Brotherly Love will have given way to a tough new town of bruisers, bullies, bluster and brawn.

In politics, Ronald Reagan not only upset and unseated an incumbent opponent, but the Republican party stunned the pollsters by capturing control of the Senate for the first time in 28 years.

But perhaps the experts received their greatest shock when they recently discovered the tiny snail darter fish swimming safely some 80 miles from the site of the Tellico dam in Tennessee. No doubt you're wondering, what's so surprising about that? Well, in case you've forgotten, environmentalists stubbornly delayed construction of the more than $100 million dam, swearing it would surely destroy the snail darters' only breeding grounds. In fact, it took a special act of Congress in 1979 to exempt the dam from the law that protects the little creatures. So now, hallelujah, everything seems to have turned out fine, since we're ending up with the best of both worlds.

You know, when historians look back on this period, it is actually possible they will view Congress' 1979 snail darter decision as one of the momentous turning points in American history. For just consider its significance: Here, finally, was the United States government going on record to acknowledge that, the future needs of the American people deserve a higher priority than the welfare of a one inch fish. Now that's progress!

What's more, once we passed this milestone, the possibilities for new economic progress — and thus, human progress — seemed both breathtaking and endless.

Who knows, the day may even have arrived when billions of dollars worth of vitally needed energy facilities can no longer be blocked by the furbish lousewort — a useless weed — or the black-footed ferret or the kangaroo rat.

Many people, of course, remain skeptical, if not downright cynical, that the country as a whole has changed at all. And after the countless disappointments of recent years, these feelings are certainly understandable. But permit me, for one, to strike an optimistic note, for I sense a maturity, determination and wisdom in America today that were much less apparent in years past.

Ask yourselves, is not our newly-found emphasis on regaining our physical fitness, restoring the importance of work, of family, of community, and of renewing our faith in God, the sign of a people who have finally grown up to seek the best in themselves and in each other? And do you think it purely a coincidence that this concern to do what is right in our own lives has now been accompanied by the most sweeping upheaval in our political system in the last 50 years — one that augurs a fundamental change in the direction of our government, and ultimately, we must hope, in the state of our nation?

I believe major forces are working to change America, and in a very beneficial way. And let me add one final optimistic note. I am not spokesman for the new Administration, but I really like what I hear about its determination to follow through on promises to cut government spending, reduce tax rates, clear away the regulatory jungle, and make the United States number one in the world again by building up our exports and restoring credibility to our foreign policy and national defense.

Admittedly, all of this will not be easy, and it is going to take time. We cannot eliminate more than a decade of sins with just one year of penance. But just as we built the Panama Canal, after others tried and failed, and sent our astronauts to the moon, and then brought them safely home, so too can we have our economy and our country by rebuilding America in the 80's. And the best news of all is, we have now begun. We are finally on our way.

In its September 22 issue, Time magazine devoted its cover story to a problem of increasing concern to the American public — chemical waste dumps. Entitled "The Poisoning of America," the magazine's cover showed the remains of a human being peering from a pool labeled "Those Toxic Chemical Wastes" with the skeletons of fish floating nearby.

One of the nation's largest corporations, the Dow Chemical Company, was quick to cry foul. It noted that while the intent of the article may have been educational, its cover, together with the manner in which the story was written, could only frighten an already nervous public. For example, Dow listed a whole series of scare words it found littered throughout the article. They were, in approximate order of appearance:

"... threat ... menace ... nightmare ... concoction ... ooze ... seep ... brew ... haunt ... fouling (as in 'fouling our own nest') ... alarming ... ominous ... frightening ... festering ... sinister ... Dantesque ... horrific ... dangerous ... environmental nightmare ... environmental emergency ... tip of iceberg ... ticking time bomb."

Get the picture? For its part, Dow concludes: "If there is any 'poisoning' of America going on, it's not chemicals that are the culprit (which is not to deny the problem of orphan dump sites and certain other chemically related problems). It is the media, which all too often seems intent on burying us in piles of purple prose — a sort of verbal poison."

It is certainly true that by sensationalizing a problem about which too little is still known, unquestionable psychological damage has been done. Some of the media's coverage on chemical waste dumps has transformed what was formerly a healthy public concern to higher levels of anxiety, and, at times, to downright panic. Yet in fairness to reporters, who sincerely believe they have an obligation to tell the public the truth, the problem goes much deeper.

The media depends for its source material on studies conducted for and interpreted by such federal agencies as the Environmental Protection Agency and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. Unfortunately, we're now seeing more and more evidence that some of these key studies are scientifically worthless, and that the agencies have used them anyway and misled the public and the media.

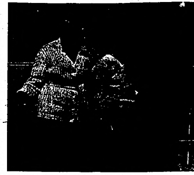
For example, in our September issue of Regulatory Action Network: Washington Watch, the U.S. Chamber presented the findings of a special team of eight scientists appointed by New York Governor Hugh Carey to investigate the EPA "study" on the Love Canal. In case you've forgotten, that EPA-funded study purported to show that Love Canal residents had absorbed abnormally high rates of chromosome damage, apparently due to exposure to chemical wastes, resulting in elevated rates of cancers, miscarriages, birth defects, and other maladies. Understandably, these conclusions generated an outbreak of panic in the community that culminated in the relocation of some 2,500 residents, and in a rash of divorces and psychological disorders among the terrified residents.

After carefully analyzing the EPA report, the scientists concluded that it was not a study at all in scientific terms, had no scientific value and could not be salvaged. Simply stated, the scientists charged that EPA has no evidence that Love Canal residents are running greater risks from their proximity to the waste dump. To cite just one example, EPA's claim of an increase in chromosome breakdowns was based on slides taken by one Dr. Dante Picciano. However, when confronted by the New York Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), Picciano refused to release his medical slides. Photocopies obtained later showed no breakdowns, and an article in Science magazine called his study "botched."

Ernest Hook, a member of HHS, concluded: "I for one will never believe anything the EPA says or releases again unless it has been peer reviewed."

Just recently I was pleased to see that The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post and Time are reporting the new conclusions. It's a good thing too, because EPA itself has done little to publicize the truth. In fact, the EPA official who was responsible for administering the agency's Love Canal activities, Eckhardt C. Beck, the assistant administrator of Water and Waste Management, has just been awarded a $20,000 bonus by President Carter for meritorious service. That's what they call putting your taxes to work.

Cataract is an opacity, or clouding, of the eye's lens which blocks the passage of light needed for vision. The lens is inside the eye, behind the pupil and iris. Cataract is not a "skin" over the outside of the eye — the most common misconception.



THE ROLLINS' attempt to win the Christmas lighting contest goes up in smoke when the fuses blow and leaves them in the dark in "There Arose Such A Clatter". Reacting to the black-out are Mrs. Rollins (Mavis Miller), daughter Joan (Jennifer Davidson), and son, Jimmy (Ricky Rosetta). The play will be presented with two other one-acts December 5, 6 and 7 at the Northland Community College auditorium by the Chameleon Theatre Co., Inc.

Smaller Cars Bigger Danger In Collision

Trend to downsize the cars we drive is causing concern among national traffic safety authorities.

Highway safety research institute at the University of Michigan reports that when a lighter car collides with a heavier car or truck, it stops very abruptly and occupants of the lighter car face a higher probability of being injured — often fatally.

In fact, a recent report by the national highway traffic safety administration states, "an examination of statistics of crashes in which subcompacts collided with full-sized cars found that the occupants of the subcompact vehicles were eight times more likely to be killed than the occupants of the full-sized vehicle."

Another agency, the national highway safety advisory committee, enumerates the following problems associated with the new and smaller vehicles:

+ Reduced car size lowers the driver's eye height. Visibility is thereby reduced at hillcrests, intersections or by roadside sight obstructions.

Concrete barriers designed to guide straying vehicles safely back onto the roadway may cause smaller cars to flip over, increasing the severity of the crash.

+ Sign posts and lamps designed to break away in crashes may not perform as designed when struck by lower, lighter cars.

+ Car and truck bumpers may actually be too high or too low to do any good in crashes between the different size vehicles.

Now, a new perspective has been added by another traffic safety authority — Douglas M. Fergusson, vice-president for traffic for the national safety council.

Fergusson contends: "While the economy and gas saving benefits of downsized cars is an established fact, the added hazards of winter driving — reduced visibility and inadequate traction — create a new dimension to the special problems associated with smaller cars."

The council's tests have also shown that braking distances on flare ice may easily extend to as much as 10 times the normal, dry pavement distance. Even with the help of traction aids on your car — tire chains or studs (where permitted) — far slower than normal speeds, along with far longer gaps between your vehicle and a car ahead, are essential.

Fergusson concluded with the following common-sense suggestions for coping with adverse conditions regardless of the size car you drive:

(1) Get the "feel" of the road by accelerating carefully to see if wheels spin; or brake gently to see if they skid. Reduce speed accordingly.

(2) Increase your following distance. It takes three to nine times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry pavement.

(3) "Pump" your brakes to slow or stop — don't jam them on. An intermittent pumping action keeps the wheels rolling and helps maintain steering control.

(4) Have good tires with good treads. Better yet, use snow tires which provide half again as much pulling power in snow as regular tires. Studded snow tires (where permitted) offer still more help on icy surfaces.

(5) Always carry reinforced tire chains in the trunk of your car for use during severe snow and ice conditions. They provide four to seven times as much traction on snow or ice as regular tires.

(6) Keep your windshield and windows clear at all times. Replace streaking wiper blades gone dead from exposure to sun, wind and oily road film. Be sure that your windshield washer solution contains adequate anti-freeze.

Alfred Eisenstaedt; Top Photographer

by Margery Byers
Smithsonian News Service

For a man who did not walk for a year after suffering shrapnel wounds in both legs during World War I, Alfred Eisenstaedt has had a remarkable career — on the run. He is of small stature, just four inches over five feet, but he has built a towering reputation as a photojournalist for Life magazine.

Born in 1898 to well-to-do German parents, he was given a camera as a teenage birthday present but soon lost interest. His parents' wealth diminished with post-World War I inflation, and Eisenstaedt sold buttons and belts for a Berlin wholesale firm. Again becoming fascinated by photography, he sold his first picture in 1927 and, two years later, became a full-time professional.

He emigrated from Nazi Germany in 1935, became one of Life's original four photographers and has remained with the magazine through more than four decades. Now in his 80s, it would seem appropriate that he be addressed formally. "I feel funny if people call me Mr. Eisenstaedt," he protests. "Most people call me Eisie and a few call me Alfred; it doesn't matter as long as they don't call me Mr. Eisenstaedt."

But when Henry Ford asked to be called by his first name, Eisenstaedt simply could not do that. Ford insisted. "It was the first time in my life I felt uncomfortable," Eisenstaedt recalls, "and I could more easily call President Carter Jimmy."

"Eisie did not invent photojournalism, but it must have been invented for him," says Ralph Graves, editorial director of Time Inc. "The pictures and stories and essays and covers that he has shot for Life over 44 years are so many and so familiar that he would be entitled merely to bask in the afterglow. Instead, he wakes up every morning wondering what pictures he will be able to shoot today. That's why he is still a wonderful photographer, not just a famous name."

Although he has traveled the world on assignment for Life, Eisenstaedt first returned to Germany with his camera in 1979 and again this year. His German was somewhat rusty, but his eye was as discerning as ever. An exhibition of his work contrasting the Germany of the 1930s with that of the present is being shown at the Smithsonian's national museum of American art (formerly the national collection of fine arts) through January 4 under the sponsorship of United Technologies corporation. These 93 black-and-white photographs — historical, poignant and humorous — include as subjects Marlene Dietrich and Joseph Goebbels in the 1930s and Max Schmeling in both 1931 and 1980.

A master of candid photography and portraits, Eisenstaedt has a prodigious memory, an inquiring mind, a quick step and a determination to keep working. In his small windowless office in New York, he is surrounded by the extraordinary creativity of a lifetime. "I'm sitting here like a spider in a web," he says with satisfaction.

On one wall is a black-and-white photograph of John F. Kennedy inscribed in 1961 to "Alfred Eisenstaedt — who makes the hard look easy." This, the official photograph for the inauguration, was the result of typical Eisenstaedt enterprise. Photographing a story on ponds, he found himself near Hyannisport after the election and suggested to his office that he visit the president-elect. "I got that picture because of frogs," he says with a grin.

His 2,500 Life assignments produced 90 covers. "When the old Life was in existence, it was an absolutely fantastic and very glamorous career," he says today. "We photographers really were an elite corps. We had class and we were somebody."

Assigned to do a story on Hollywood stars in 1938, he was given ego-building advice by the Life picture editor. "The gist of it," he recalls, "was that I was not to be in awe of these movie queens and that I was a king in my profession. Because of that, I'm not in awe of anyone, whether a king or a president or a board chairman."

That advice has served him well. His books of autographs, begun in 1934, are a fascinating record of the notables of this century — Haile Selassie and the Shah of Iran, Shirley Temple and Charlie Chaplin, Lauritz Melchoir and Leopold Stowkowski, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Ronald Reagan, Rachel Carson and Jonas Salk, Laurence Olivier and Marlon Brando, Gloria Vanderbilt and Henry Kissinger.

In 1975, Cloris Leachman was exuberant when she was added to Eisenstaedt's gallery. "Oh, Alfred," she wrote, "I've been waiting for you for so long. I'm just happy that you have had the chance to practice on so many people before me."

That he has. In 1932, he "wooed" vegetarian George Bernard Shaw with the best-looking bunch of bananas he could find — and a portfolio of his work. The tactic was so successful that Shaw played the piano for him.

During a long wait for Winston Churchill at his country home, Eisenstaedt was pacified with tea and cookies, but then his subject gave him a stern lecture. "Young man," Churchill thundered, "I'm a photographer myself, and that is my wrong side."

"In my profession," Eisenstaedt explains, "I have to sense in seconds or minutes whether or not to call people by their first names." Ernest Hemingway asked that he be called "Papa," but Eisenstaedt found him a very difficult subject when he photographed him in Cuba in 1952. Bare-chested and boastful of his body, the novelist exploded when it was suggested that he put on a shirt. Then Eisenstaedt, proud of his own lean physique, put on a virtuoso performance which, remarkably, he can repeat today.

Asking for a pocket knife, he flexed his biceps and dropped the open blade onto his rock-hard flesh. It bounced off, producing not even a nick. "Look, a little Papa!" an impressed Hemingway cried.

All was reasonably serene until he noticed Eisenstaedt shifting his feet to avoid the 33 cats and two dogs. With a glass in his hand, he very slowly approached Eisenstaedt until his huge head was only two inches from the photographer's face. "Do you like cats?" he asked ominously. "I lied, naturally," Eisenstaedt says. "I told him, I love cats but, Papa, they move my tripod and change my focus!" The animals were banished.

Although his photographs often reveal a subject's personality and mood, Eisenstaedt does not sneak pictures and, almost always, is welcomed back as a friend. He has photographed Sophia Loren and Carlo Ponti many times, and she remains one of his favorites. The feeling is mutual.

When People magazine wanted a photograph of the Pontis with their children in Paris, the answer was a firm "no" unless Eisenstaedt was assigned. He was greeted with the usual kiss on both cheeks. "Come right in my bedroom," Sophia said. "You've sat on every bed I have."

Always health-conscious, Eisenstaedt does not drink, smoke or take pills. He goes to bed early and usually rises by five in the morning. On Saturdays, all year round, he drives to Long Island's Jones Beach to walk on the sand.

He enjoys music, and horticulture has been a long-time hobby. Years ago, John Hay Whitney was showing him his enormous greenhouses, and Eisenstaedt suggested that several plants would be good for his greenhouse. "Take what you want," Whitney offered. "How big is your greenhouse?" Unabashed, Eisenstaedt said it was 18 inches high and 30 inches long — a fish tank.

"Of all the Life photographers, Eisie is outstanding for his generosity in praise of other photographers — not a prominent commodity among actors, photographers or musicians," Doris O'Neil, curator of vintage prints at Time Inc., says. "He's very generous with new photographers and old colleagues, and part of his secret of staying young is responding to new things."

O'Neil remembers being invited to a luncheon one recent winter day at Eisenstaedt's sister-in-law's and, with New York almost immobilized by a snowstorm, she expected the date to be cancelled. When Eisenstaedt arrived to pick her up, she noticed that his eyes were bloodshot. As if it were the most normal thing in the world on a bitter day, he had been on the roof of a Brooklyn tenement photographing the return of homing pigeons. "Time and the river go by," she says admiringly, "but Eisie flows on."

Although the wiry, agile Eisenstaedt seems immortal, he has given all his negatives to Time Inc. "When I'm dead and in heaven," he says, "I won't have to worry about my negatives because they'll be nicely protected."

Unlike many people, he has no regrets about his choice of a career. "If I could be reborn," he says, "I'd like to be a photographer for the old Life."

milestones in medicine

Early in the 19th century, a French doctor making his hospital rounds, happened to think about some children he had seen making noises at one end of a hollow tree while playmates listened at the other end. Rene Laennec rolled a sheet of paper into a tube, applied it to a patient's chest—and invented the stethoscope!

The good news now for some 30 million Americans is a new medicine that's been successful in the treatment, relief and control of the symptoms of asthma, emphysema and bronchitis. Phyllocontin Tablets, a prescription medicine developed in England, is being introduced here by Purdue Frederick Company, an international drug research firm. Twice-daily dosage can provide around-the-clock breathing relief.

Rules Given For Winter Storm Survival

With another Minnesota winter approaching, public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic advises motorists to review rules for winter storm survival.

"Simple planning ahead before your travel and common sense if you are caught in a winter storm could save your life," Sopsic said.

Here are some suggestions:

—Listen to forecasts, road reports and storm warnings before you leave home. Tell someone where you are going and the route you will be taking. Report your safe arrival.

—Prepare a winter survival kit. Items can be packed in a three-pound coffee can. Contents may include a flashlight, spare batteries, candles, matches, a knife, can opener, spoons, toilet paper, change, aspirin, canned heat and high calorie food.

—If you are stalled, tie a colored banner on your antenna. Stay in your vehicle as it is the best shelter available.

—Avoid overexertion and keep cool. The storm will end and you will be found. Conserve body heat. If you must do some work such as shoveling, be sure to unzip outer clothing to provide ventilation as wet clothing loses its insulation qualities.

—Keep fresh air in your vehicle. It is much better to be chilly or cold and awake than to become comfortably warm as you slip into unconsciousness.

—If you must leave the vehicle, write a note giving name, address, person to contact, time and day you left and which direction you are walking.

A free brochure, "Winter Survival In Your Car," is available at Emergency Services, B-5 Capitol, St. Paul, 55155.

Applicants For State Agencies Are Requested

Applicants for eight vacancies in the following five state agencies are needed. In accordance with the Minnesota Open Appointments Law, application forms may be obtained at the Office of the Secretary of State, 180 State Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155; (612) 296-7876. Application deadline is December 16, 1980.

Child Care and Development Advisory council has two vacancies open immediately. The council advises the commissioner of public welfare on day care policy, development of child care reservices, and coordination of public and private child care agencies and citizens groups. Members are appointed by the commissioner, and receive $35 per diem plus expenses. For specific information, contact Child Care and Development Advisory Council, 4th Floor, Centennial Building, St. Paul 55155; (612) 296-3929.

Council for the Handicapped has two vacancies open immediately for a resident of economic development Region three, and a resident of economic development Region eight. The council advises the governor, legislature, and service providing agencies on the needs and potentials of people with physical, mental, or emotional disabilities. Members are appointed by the governor, and receive $35 per diem plus expenses. For specific information, contact council for the Handicapped, Suite 208, Metro Square Building, St. Paul 55101; (612) 296-6785.

Environmental Education Board has one vacancy open immediately for a public member. The board develops and implements environmental education programs through regional environmental education councils and metro area task forces. Members are appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate, and are reimbursed for expenses. For specific information, contact Environmental Education Board, Box 5, Centennial Building, St. Paul 55155; (612) 296-2368.

Governor's Office of Volunteer Services Advisory Committee has two vacancies open immediately for a resident of economic development Region one, and a resident of economic development Region 6W. The committee coordinates and channels volunteer services, and makes recommendations to the governor on the programs and goals of the office of volunteer services. Members are appointed by the governor, and are compensated for expenses. For specific information, contact Governor's Office of Volunteer Services Advisory Committee, 130 State Capitol, St. Paul 55155; (612) 296-4731.

Investment Advisory Council has an additional vacancy, open January 1981. The council advises the state board of investment on improving the rate of return on the state's invested money. Members are appointed by the board of investment, and receive no compensation. For specific information, contact Investment Advisory Council, Room 105 MEA Building, 55 Sherburne Avenue, St. Paul 55155; (612) 296-3328.

Jamboree Set Saturday

Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) officials are hoping to draw a large crowd Saturday to the TRFAHA-sponsored Section 8 high school hockey jamboree in the sports arena.

The organization will use proceeds to help cover the cost of installing artificial ice in the old arena, a $40,000 project headed by the organization. Volunteer workers will handle all jamboree functions — from ticket sellers to game officials. And teams are paying their own way here, meaning every dollar spent at the event will go to the TRFAHA arena fund.

In addition to supporting the old arena artificial ice project, spectators will have a chance to see 14 of the 17 teams in Section 8 perform during their scheduled two 11-minute periods of action that will match Hallock vs. Red Lake Falls at 2 p.m.; Lake of the Woods vs. Fergus Falls, 3:10; Indus vs. Detroit Lakes, 4:20; Moorhead vs. Bemidji, 6; Warroad vs. Alexandria, 7:10; Roseau vs. Crookston, 8:20, and Thief River Falls vs. East Grand Forks, 9:30.

That evening session provides some interesting hockey. Moorhead is being touted as a bonafide Section 8 title contender for the first time; Warroad boasts one of the top individuals in the area in John Bjorkman, a sophomore; perennial Section 8 power Roseau is matched against a Crookston team who finished first in the regular season Section 8 point standings a year ago; and host Thief River Falls, hit hard by graduation losses, challenges defending Section 8 tournament champion East Grand Forks.

The Green Wave were picked to repeat their 1980 title this year in a preseason coaches poll. East Grand Forks coach Tony Palmiscno says, "We'll be small, but fast."

Only Little Falls, Crosby-Ironton and Brainerd will be missing from the Section 8 jamboree lineup. The Flyers and Rangers won't be missed, but it would have been interesting to see Brainerd goalie Paul Hennen, who carried a 2.3 goals against average last winter.

Miscellaneous

+Roseau products Aaron Broten, Neal Broten and Butsy Erickson rank 1-2-4 in the University of Minnesota hockey scoring charts. Aaron has 11 goals, 18 assists and 29 points while Neal is 4-24-28 and Erickson is 11-10-21 through the Gophers' first 11 games. They skated as a unit until last weekend when Aaron was moved from a wing to center Erickson and Tom Ruthstein of Grand Rapids. Neal stayed at center between Steve Ulseth and Kevin Hartzell. The moves worked, because in a 4-1, 7-0 sweep of Denver Aaron and Erickson each collected five assists and the line came up with 19 points, and Neal's line handled the rest of the scoring. The Gophers will be in Madison to face Wisconsin this weekend. Thief River Falls' Scott Sabo, a freshman at Wisconsin, has had his WCHA start slowed by a series of injuries and illness.

+Vince Parker, who ranks sixth on the all-time Northland community college career basketball scoring charts, is a member of the University of Minnesota-Morris basketball team. The 5-6 junior guard is considered one of the top additions to this year's Morris squad. The Cougars were 3-23 a year ago.

+Gene Klinke of Fosston, a former Northland community college football player, is the starting defensive end on the Valley City (N.D.) team that will play Pacific Lutheran ~~Dec. 6~~ at Tacoma, Wash. in the semifinals of the NAIA college football playoffs.

+Former New York Mills basketball star Janet Karvonen averaged eight points, eight rebounds and three assists per game to start her college basketball career at Old Dominion University. A part time starter for the perennially strong Lady Monarchs. Karvonen led New York Mills to three Class A state tournament titles and ranks as Minnesota's all-time basketball scoring leader.

+Thief River Falls' Marchell Cuppett, junior goaltender on the University of North Dakota women's field hockey team, finished the 1980 season with a 28-7 record and a 1.00 goals-against average, posting a school-record 16 shutouts as she played every minute of every game for the Sioux this fall. UND placed sixth in the recent AIAW Division 11 national tournament at Edwardsville, Ill. North Dakota opened the tournament with a 2-1 victory over Pfeiffer college (Misenheimer, N.C.), lost to Denver 3-2, beat Dayton 3-1 and stopped Eastern Illinois 3-2 before losing to Colgate 2-0 in the consolation finals.

Lincoln Basketball, Hockey Teams Are Both Hit By Graduation Losses

Graduation losses took away most of the scoring punch from both the basketball and hockey teams at Lincoln high school, leaving head coaches Glen Peters and Wendell Grand with major rebuilding chores for the 1980-81 season, which starts for both teams next week.

Peters, whose basketball team will open at home Friday, Dec. 5, against Roseau, is missing six seniors who were either full or part time starters on last year's 13-6 team, including three-year regular Kyle Hams, a WCCO all-stater as a senior when he averaged 16.7 points and 7.3 assists for the Prowlers.

Also gone from the basketball court are Greg Miller, Todd Young and Jim Nyland, all of whom averaged just a shade under 10 points per game last winter, along with Mark Schmitke and Gregg Peterson. Those people logged most of the playing time, did most of the scoring and most of the rebounding for the Prowlers.

Same situation exists for Grand, whose hockey team will begin play Saturday, Dec. 6, in Crookston. No less than 10 seniors skated for the Prowlers as they went 13-8-1 in 1979-80, including three-year regular in goalie Bill Jury and leading scorer Wade Hoppe (23 goals, 34 assists, 57 points), a pair of all-section selections, and defensemen Dave Geatz, a WCCO all-stater.

In the same graduating class were Brian Ranum, Bob Fitzgerald, Tom Bjorkman, Jeff Ulrich, Tony Loeffler, Paul Drees and Jim Thompson — an impressive crew that made the Prowlers top Section 8 challengers last winter. Top seven scorers from a year ago all graduated.

The hockey team will actually be in uniform Saturday when the Prowlers participate in the 14-team Section 8 jamboree in the Thief River Falls sports arena, meeting defending Section 8 champion East Grand Forks at 9:30 p.m.

— Basketball —

Absence of returning veterans leaves the Lincoln high school basketball team line-up a wide-open affair.

"I can't name a starter yet," admitted Thief River Falls coach Glen Peters. "It might be after Christmas before we finally settle on 5-6-7 kids. It'll take some time for us to put it together and find the right combinations."

Six seniors looking for playing time include captain Hal Swanson, Jim Vigness, Dave Kays, Mark Lundin, Paul Koppang and Steve Sletten. They're joined by juniors Tim Swanson, Larry Engelman, Kevin Sanders, Steve Hvidsten, Jon Bolen, Shaw McCabe, Dave Upham, Kent Kainz, Kevin Leach, Rick Trontvet and Eric Bondy, along with sophomore Mark Gere.

At 6-2 Kays and Bondy are the tallest Prowlers, with McCabe, leach and Gere all standing 6-1.

"Rebounding," says Peters as he goes over the team's height, "worries me. Rebounding and ball handling."

Still, the Prowlers expect to compete with Crookston, the early season favorite, Bemidji, Fergus Falls and East Grand Forks in the Northwest Athletic Conference basketball race.

"We'll play good ball," promised Peters, beginning his sixth year as head coach of the Prowlers. "We'll play entertaining ball. This is supposed to be our down year, but I think we'll surprise a few people. The kids have shown a lot of hustle. There is some quickness there, and some of them can shoot the ball well. We'll run if it presents itself."

Defending champion Moorhead is expected to be the favorite in North Half Region 8AA basketball this winter, a title that will be decided March 9-14 at Bemidji State University. The Region 8AA championship game will be played March 20 at Concordia college in Moorhead.

Wendell Grand

— Hockey —

Out of necessity defense will be stressed by the Lincoln high school hockey team this winter. Minus its potent scoring punch from a year ago, the Prowlers will rely on a trio of top-notch defensemen to control things.

And in senior Scott Wiebolt and juniors Steve Olson and Mark Harder the Prowlers have three outstanding defensemen who can take over a game.

"We've definitely got to find someone to put the puck in the net," acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand, "but at the same time I think we'll be strong defensively and in goal. Wiebolt, Olson and Harder are three kids who have the size and skill to play very well for us. Our strength will be moving the puck out of our own end."

Senior Jeff Mongoven is slated to begin his first year as full-time varsity starter in goal. He saw playing time a year ago when Bill Jury was plagued by back problems.

"Mongoven will step in and do a very good job. I have no reservations about him being in goal for us," explained Grand. Senior Greg Harder is scheduled for back-up duty behind Mongoven.

Wiebolt, Olson and Harder have been joined on the blueline in early practice drills by senior Dean Dokkin and juniors Bruce Johnson and Todd Anderson.

The seniors and juniors vying for positions as forwards include seniors Murray Jorde and Todd Bergland, along with juniors Tom Ose, Jeff Imgrund, Jeff Moser, Rob Blankenfeld, Rick Engelstad and Jim Dillon, who has been bothered by a knee injury.

Grand also indicated several sophomores might be gaining ice time as well.

"Of all the years I've been here, this might be the toughest one to get people in the right places," revealed Grand, beginning his fifth season with the Prowlers. "We might be forced to more experimenting this year."

East Grand Forks and Roseau have been rated 1-2 in preseason Section 8 predictions, but Grand expects a very "competitive" race this winter. And the Prowlers, if they can come up with a scoring punch, could be right in it.

TRFAHA Candy Sale Continues Through Nov. 29

Thief River Falls youth hockey players who are involved in the annual TRFAHA candy sale are reminded that Saturday is the deadline for the fund raising effort.

Players with candy money to turn in, or with candy that can't be sold, are asked to please telephone 681-1494, 681-2804 or 681-4598.

Players are urged to continue selling candy through Saturday. "Your help in this fund raiser is greatly appreciated," acknowledged TRFAHA officials.

Northmen Play Alumni Game On Saturday

Annual alumni game will kick off the 1980-81 Northland community college basketball season Saturday. Spectators are welcome free of charge to the 7:30 p.m. game in the Northland gym.

Approximately 10-15 former Northland players are expected to be on hand to challenge the 1980-81 Northmen, figured to be a favorite in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northwest Division.

Chris Kneen, a 6-6 center, and Mike Carriere, a 6-3 forward, both starters on last year's third place MJCAA state tournament team, are among the alumni who have indicated they will participate in Saturday's game.

Plummer Is 55-14 Winner Over Gonvick

Jodi Pahlen, a 5-5 eighth grader, scored 20 points Monday to lead Plummer past Gonvick 55-14 in season-opening girls high school basketball action.

The Cardinals jumped out to a 13-2 first quarter lead and were never challenged, sitting on a 27-4 halftime cushion.

Plummer shot 50 per cent from the field, hitting 26 of 52 shots, with Pahlen connecting on 10 of 16 attempts. Gonvick, meanwhile, made just six of 33 field goal attempts — an 18 per cent shooting figure. From the free throw line Plummer was 3-for-6 while Gonvick went 2-for-9.

Sophomore Bonnie Fisher and senior Mary Westlake joined Pahlen in double figures for the winners with 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Tom Schafer Is New LHS Girls Basketball Coach

Led by new head coach Tom Schafer and staffed by three returning starters, the 1980-81 Lincoln high school girls basketball team will begin play Saturday, Dec. 6, when the Prowlers host Karlstad.

Senior Ann Goodrich, along with juniors LeAnn Paetznick and Tara Nicholson, were starters a year ago when the Prowlers went 6-12 under coach Sylvia Sjoberg. Goodrich will be starting for the third straight year this winter. The captain-elect, Goodrich averaged 11 points per game, shot 40 per cent from the field and hit 60 per cent from the free throw line last winter — all team leading figures. She'll move from the point guard to the wing this season for a closer shot selection and for additional rebounding strength.

Nicholson, who moved into the starting line-up after the start of the 1979-80 season, averaged nine points and 12 rebounds per game.

"Ann, Tara and LeAnn will be our mainstays," confirmed Schafer, who has served the Prowlers as an assistant coach. "But I expect a lot of help from our bench; I think we'll have a strong bench."

TOM SCHAFER

Offense was a problem a year ago for the Prowlers, who shot just 28 per cent from the field, but Schafer hopes that'll change this winter when the inside game will be emphasized, along with a fast break and a press on defense.

"The attitude is very good on the team," mentioned Schafer. "I think we'll be in every game we play."

State Trappers Are Warned Of Tularemia

Department of Natural Resources warned state trappers that tularemia has been found in two muskrats found dead along the Vermillion river in northeastern Minnesota.

"This is a good indication that this serious disease, which is transferable to man, is active in muskrat populations of that area," said Charles Burrows, DNR fish and wildlife director.

Last spring Tularemia was found in some beaver carcasses, and the DNR warned trappers to take precautions when skinning furbearing animals to prevent contracting the disease.

Tularemia can be transmitted from infected animals to man through open wounds, even a small cut on the trapper's hands.

14 Teams Will Participate In TRFAHA-Sponsored Event . . .

TRF Will Host Section 8 Hockey Jamboree Sat.

Fourteen teams will be playing seven two-period games Saturday when the 1980-81 high school hockey season debuts with the Section 8 jamboree in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

Only three of the 17 Section 8 teams will be missing from Saturday's day-long affair — fledgling programs at Crosby-Ironton and Little Falls, along with Brainerd. The 14 schools who will be here will afford fans, players, coaches and scouts an opportunity to see most of the hockey talent in northwestern Minnesota this winter. Each participating team will play one opponent for two 11-minute periods.

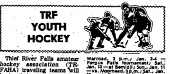
Afternoon session features Hallock vs. Red Lake Falls, 2 p.m.; Lake of the Woods vs. Fergus Falls, 3:10; and Indus vs. Detroit Lakes, 4:20.

In the evening it'll be Moorhead vs. Bemidji, 6 p.m.; Warrood vs. Alexandria, 7:10; Roseau vs. Crookston, 8:20; and East Grand Forks vs. Thief River Falls, 9:30.

Pairings were based upon the final 1979-80 regular season Section 8 point standings, matching No. 1 Crookston vs. No. 2 Roseau, No. 3 Thief River Falls vs. No. 4 East Grand Forks, etc.

This will be the tenth annual Section 8 jamboree, but the first time that all 17 schools were invited to participate. It began as a six-team affair to start the 1970-71 season, then expanded to eight while rotating between sites like Thief River Falls, Roseau, Bemidji, East Grand Forks and Moorhead. At the same time some of the other Section 8 schools were meeting in jamboree sessions at Detroit Lakes.

The expanded format is being sponsored by the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA), with proceeds going to the youth hockey program. Admission price, which includes all seven matches, is $2 for adults and $1 for students.



TRF YOUTH HOCKEY

Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) traveling teams will begin their 1980-81 seasons Sunday against Hallock and Crookston.

Pee-Wee A and Bantam A teams will be in Crookston that afternoon, with the Pee-Wees playing at 1 p.m. and the Bantams on the ice at 3. Pee-Wee B and Bantam B teams will open at home the same day against Hallock in the sports arena, with the Pee-Wees playing at 3 p.m. and the Bantams at 4:30.

Thief River Falls Squirts won't begin their 1980-81 traveling schedule until after Jan. 1, 1981.

Squirts In-House

Four teams make up the Squirts In-House program. Larry Joppru, program coordinator, has announced the schedule for the month of December. Weekly schedule will be posted in this column. Times for the games will vary, so boys and their parents are asked to check the schedule each Wednesday.

Practice for the Squirts In-House teams will be held Friday when equipment and uniforms will be issued. The North stars and Rangers will practice from 7-8:15 a.m., while the Hawks and Bruins practice from 8:30-10:15 a.m.

Squirts Schedule

Sat., Nov. 29 — Rangers vs. North Stars, 9:15 a.m.; Hawks vs. Bruins, 10:15 a.m.

8-Year-Olds Schedule

Sat., Nov. 29 — Ice Mice vs. Rink Rats, 11:15 a.m.; Stickhandlers vs. Puck Hogs, 12 noon.

Tiny Mites

Teams have been selected and schedules have been drawn for the 8-year-old Tiny Mites, but the game times will vary, so players and parents should watch this column for starting times.

Rink Rats — Jeff Novak, Corey Poole, Jamie Loehr, Taylor Trickle, Ryan Haugen, Jamie Harder, Roger Anderson, Bryan Cloutier, Mark Daniels, Renny Johnson, Derek Larson, Darin Tele.

Puck Hogs — Steve Sabo, Paul Kezar, Chad Kleinvachter, Monty Booren, Jared Kolden, Kyle Evanson, David Keisow, Derek Lee, Roger Ness, Mark Tiani, Troy Matson, Jon Olson.

5-6-7-Year-Olds

Saturday morning coaches are still needed for the 5-6-year-olds, and the 7-year-old Tiny Mite programs. Anyone interested in volunteering time should call Ron Novak at 681-3959.

Due to lack of ice time the 5-6-7-year-old Tiny Mites will not practice Saturday. Watch this column for future practice schedules.

The first mass postal workers strike in the 195 year history of the Post Office Department occurred in March 1970, says the Department of Labor publication, "Important Events in American Labor History."

IT TOOK HIM all fall, but Jim Ortloff of Thief River Falls finally bagged his first deer with a bow Friday about 4 p.m. west of St. Hilaire. He hunted nearly every day of the bow hunting season, seeing about seven deer each time out — most out of range, however.

Snowmobile Trails Study Slated Here

Public opinion in regard to Minnesota snowmobile trails is being sought by the Minnesota department of natural resources through a series of regional public forums being held throughout the state. Open forum for Region 1 is to be held Thursday, December 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

Daniel Collins of the DNR trail planning staff, said the department must prepare a statewide trail plan within the next year. This plan must determine the number, kind and location of state trails and the DNR is encouraging public participation to present viewpoints on trails.

"The DNR will be at these forums to listen to you tell us if you want more or fewer trails, what kinds of trails you want and where they should be located in your region," Collins said. "If you are not now a trail user, we want to know why and what we can do to make trails more inviting to you."

Persons who wish to speak at the forums should call toll free 1-800-652-9747 by November 30 and ask for "trail planning". This will permit them to be placed on the schedule and insure that they have an opportunity to speak.

Four Sentenced On DNR Fishing License Charge

Two men and two women have been sentenced to fines totalling $1,000 in Kandiyohi county on fishing license charges, including the backdating of a license by a store employee.

The two men, Timothy Lamb and Eric Beiberbach of Spicer, were unable to produce fishing licenses when checked by a state conservation officer.

The men told the officer they had licenses but had left them at home. The two women became involved when one of them went and purchased a fishing license for one of the men and the other women, an employee of a retail store, backdated the license to make it appear that it had been purchased earlier.

The men were convicted of failure to apply in person for their license, with Lamb being fined $200 ($100 suspended) and Beiberbach fined $300.

Susan E. Stai of Willmar was convicted of backdating a fishing license and given a 60 day jail sentence and-or $200 fine with $100 suspended.

Elizabeth J. Allen of Spicer was convicted of making a false statement in applying for a fishing license and fined $300.

DNR, Refugees Coping With Game Laws

Refugees from Indo China, particularly the Hmong, are finding Minnesota game and fish laws difficult to understand, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

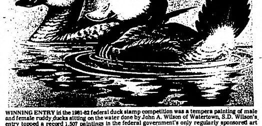
Proficient hunters, the Hmong come from a country which has no game and fish laws. They are accustomed to eating a wide variety of wildlife species, but in America some of these species are classed as "non-game" and are protected.

Conservation officer George Jurgenson is responsible for enforcing state game and fish laws in Anoka county and has been active in "getting the word" to the Hmong and other Indo China refugees concerning Minnesota hunting and fishing regulations.

Jurgenson said he and other conservation officers have received complete cooperation from the Indo Chinese community, Department of Public Welfare officials and various civic organizations.

"At the hunter education meetings we have conducted," said Jurgenson, "we have found the Indo Chinese to be polite, courteous and eager to learn."

He said the basic problem is the language barrier. The Indo Chinese have several languages and it is necessary to have more than one interpreter present to translate.



WINNING ENTRY in the 1981-82 federal duck stamp competition was a tempera painting of male and female ruddy ducks sitting on the water done by John A. Wilson of Watertown, S.D. Wilson's entry topped a record 1,507 paintings in the federal government's only regularly sponsored art contest. The design will be reproduced on next year's migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp which must be purchased by waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or older. Many stamps are also bought by other conservationists interested in habitat preservation and by a growing number of stamp collectors. Revenues from sales of the stamp — which provide over $16.5 million yearly — are used to buy additional wetlands and waterfowl habitat under a program administered by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Researchers Study Memory

by Jeanne Hanson
U News Service

It was like seeing a miracle. The man visiting the psychologist's lab was memorizing numbers. He had once, as a hobby, learned 10,000 digits of the value of pi (3.1416 and so on).

Now, in addition to other "small tasks" — such as memorizing 256 different numbers at a stretch — he was producing, from memory, a diagonal line of digits through part of that block of 10,000 numbers, learned several months before. It took him about a minute.

The man is Rajan Srinivasen Mahadevan, a slight, somewhat shy, India-born 23-year-old with a quick smile — and a quicker memory. He's visiting America and is being studied, for the first time, at the University of Minnesota.

The psychologist investigating his memory — with help from eight colleagues — is Paul W. Fox, University of Minnesota psychology professor and memory expert. "Rajan's memory for numbers is a challenge to existing memory theory and knowledge," Fox said. "It suggests the limits of human memory."

One British man and two Latvians with exceptional memories have been studied, but they had different talents, Fox said. "Rajan is the first person with this particular kind of number-memory skill to be studied carefully," he added.

"If we give Rajan enough time, there is nothing he can't do," Fox said. "And he has shown no signs so far of forgetting anything."

Fox is trying to discover how Rajan's memory works. So far he has discovered some amazing facts but no full explanation.

What Rajan can do seems to depend on the amount of time he is given. To memorize the numbers, he needs one-and-a-half to two seconds per digit. "If we give him this time to 'register them,' as he puts it, he will probably never forget those numbers," Fox said. But if he has less than about one second to learn each digit, he forgets most of them quickly.

In Fox's lab, Rajan has learned, so far, 28 different number sets for a total of 1,700 digits. And he has been quizzed on the 10,000 digits of pi he learned before. During these and other tests, he is allowed a break at any time. He usually pauses about every half hour, so that he doesn't feel "dizzy and overwhelmed by numbers," Fox said.

Under these conditions, Rajan has recalled all of the numbers presented to him with "virtually no errors," Fox said. "When he does make a mistake, he usually corrects himself afterwards."

Fox has given Rajan many different tests. One of the first was a basic test of "immediate memory span" for digits. An experimenter reads a string of random numbers and then asks the subject to repeat them, with no time for study in between. Most people can repeat five to nine digits this way; Rajan can recall 15 or 16. When asked to produce the numbers backward he can recall 15 or 16, compared with five or six for other people.

An even more curious fact: Once Rajan learns a string of digits, he recalls them faster the second time he is asked to do so, even when a long time has elapsed. Most people tend to forget and recall things more slowly and less completely later, Fox said.

Rajan memorizes numbers mainly in rows, Fox has discovered. When he is given a matrix (a block of numbers), he concentrates intensely, staring at each number and each row, one at a time. Then he can recall any line of the matrix almost instantly. And equally quickly, he can finish a row that Fox starts to read.

Rajan's talent for memorizing numbers was discovered in India when he was three. He surprised his parents one day by reporting to them the license plate numbers of several visitors' cars after they had left.

When he was five, he used the trick to get himself out of trouble. Supposed to be upstairs during a party given by his parents, he was caught outside. His alibi: "I was out here learning the license plate numbers." He reeled off 40 of them from memory.

But surprisingly little notice was paid to his talent as he grew up. His teachers weren't especially interested (one principal gave him a brief test) and his classmates considered it curiosity. As Rajan puts it, "Many people in India have special ability, like a mystical ability."

His parents were preactical people too (his father and grandfather were physicians and his monther has an economics degree). And Rajan's talent is not especially useful. His father, he says, has a good memory, but he used it mostly as a hobby, memorizing long passages from Shakespeare.

But, at least, Rjan hasn't "burned out." His parents didn't push him to perform publicly, and he has done only 60 or so public appearances, all unpaid and most very small, since he was a child. He is now trying to find a career in which his talent will be useful.

Rajan gets pleasure from his ability and seems almost boyishly delighted at an observer's amazement. He's intensely curious about it too, said Fox. Until Fox began studying him, Rajan didn't even know he could memorize numbers when given sets of them orally. And he didn't know he could do it when deliberately distracted.

Fox is still eliminating possible explanations of Rajan's talent.

Rajan does not, for example, have a "photographic memory"; he does not see the numbers in his mind's eye. Psychologists have an "unfakable test" for that, Fox said.

Rajan also does not depend on "saying the numbers to himself" as he learns them, Fox said. This was established by having him learn one set of numbers while a tape was playing a different set into his earphones. While learning the first he was required to repeat the second aloud.

Rajan also does not seem to have any kind of associations or patterns to learn the numbers, a common memory technique for many people, Fox said.

And Rajan does not "lose" numbers between his short-term and long-term memory. Some psychologists think that people make a special effort to move a set of numbers (such as a telephone number) from their short-term memory into their long-term memory, or risk forgetting it within about a half minute. Rajan does not seem to have this problem, Fox said.

But his short-term memory by itself is not extraordinary. When numbers are flashed at him on a screen very quickly, he does not remember them especially well. And he is no better than anyone else at recognizing quickly whether he has seen a given number shortly before.

In fact, in many ways Rajan is quite normal. "On many tests of intelligence and general and specific abilities, he scores the way any other intelligent person would," Fox said. When he is asked to memorize random letters, for example, he uses completely different methods from those he uses with numbers. He makes clever associations and tells himself little stories, all efficient memory techniques. After a while he forgets the letters. And he is not especially good at memorizing whole sentences or paragraphs, Fox said.

Rajan, now visiting New York, will return to the university for further study next month.

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls-Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers:

My brother came home from the hospital this summer after a colostomy operation. He obviously does not want to talk about his surgery, although he did tell us that the doctors took a cancer out.

My brother goes out very little now. His wife worries about this change in him. She says that he is supposedly cured, but he wants to stay in the house.

Would colostomy surgery have a physical effect where a person had to rest at home most of the time?

Wondering What To Do

Dear Wondering:

Your brother may be having trouble adjusting to his colostomy. For most patients who undergo this surgery there are many difficult things to face all at once.

First, it takes courage to face the diagnosis of cancer even when a person is told he is cured. Some patients go through a period of depression. For many patients, the passage of time is the only convincing evidence of cure, no matter how much reassurance they receive.

Removal of the colon and rectum — and adapting to a new, "unnatural" method of eliminating stool — also requires considerable emotional adjustment. In addition, the patient has to learn the skills involved in managing elimination through a stoma — the opening in the abdomen through which the stool passes.

Feeling alone and unwanted is not unusual among patients with colostomies, especially in the first weeks after surgery. Your brother might be helped by knowing that thousands of people in this country have stomas, and have gone through the period of adjustment successfully.

You might encourage your brother's wife to find out whether there is an "ostomy" group nearby. In the United States and Canada alone, over 200 ostomy groups meet in small towns and big cities. They consist of people with ostomies who come together as friends to learn and to share experiences.

The Cancer Information Service can tell you how to get in touch with ostomy groups in your area, or, if there are no local groups, how to contact the United Ostomy Association. In Minnesota the Cancer Information Service toll-free number is 1-800-682-5262. In North Dakota and South Dakota the number is 1-800-328-5188.

Dear Cancer Answers:

What does a polyp look like? If your doctor tells you that you have a polyp, should you have it removed?

I had the impression that polyps could turn to cancer. If this is true, how long does it take? Also, where do polyps grow in the body?

Concerned and Confused

Dear Concerned:

A polyp is a small abnormal growth of tissue. The bulb, or body of the polyp, can be smooth and round, or cauliflower, like. The stalk can be extremely long and slender, or short and thick.

Whether of polyp should be removed depends on its location, if it is causing problems, and — most important — if it could become cancerous. In general, polyps should be removed. But a person's doctor may have special reasons for leaving a polyp alone, as in the case of polyps of the vocal cords, which are not really polyps at all.

Polyps that have the potential of turning into cancer take varying lengths of time to undergo this change. It depends upon the kind of polyp and the type of cancer.

Polyps grow in various places in the body, but always on the moist smooth surfaces called mucous membranes. Polyps grow in the nose, stomach, womb, uterine cervix (opening of the womb into the vagina), and colon — among other places.

Polyps in the nose are usually associated with swelling and redness, but sometimes they accompany malignant tumors. Small polyps in the stomach are almost always benign; larger polyps may be malignant.

Since cancer of the womb is often preceded by polyps, these polyps are considered an important warning signal — although seldom cancerous in themselves. Polyps of the uterine cervix are rarely malignant, and are very easily removed.

Colon polyps usually are benign. To be on the safe side, however, physicians usually recommend removal of polyps found in the colon. In special circumstances, a doctor may do repeated examinations to detect any changes taking place in the size or shape of the polyp.

Dear Cancer Answers:

A friend of mine just found out from his doctor that he has bladder cancer. He told me that he knew something was wrong when he saw blood in his urine. Is this the first sign of bladder cancer, or do you think he may have ignored previous warning signals?

James S.

Dear James S.:

No, you friend probably did not ignore anything — the first sign of bladder cancer is usually blood in the urine. The color can range from a smoky shade to a deep red, depending on the amount of blood present. Urine may have blood in it one day and be clear the next. In fact, sometimes weeks may go by and the urine will remain clear. Eventually, though, the bleeding will reappear.

Generally, pain is not associated with the bleeding. Sometimes, though, the patient will feel discomfort. He may also have to urinate more frequently than usual. Occasionally blood clots form, causing painful muscle spasms in the bladder.

Bloody urine can be a warning signal of bladder cancer, but it can also be a sign of other serious conditions, such as benign (not cancerous) tumors, infection, or bladder stones.

Anyone who has blood in the urine should see a doctor immediately. Whatever condition is present should be treated.

Dear Cancer Answers:

We have a friend who recently had surgery for cancer. He said the doctors told him they were confident they got it all, but they want him to have chemotherapy too. We don't understand why he would need chemotherapy if the surgery was successful.

Mr. and Mrs. W.G.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. W.G.:

An excellent explanation of the different ways in which chemotherapy is used to treat cancer appears in a new book, Chemotherapy, A Handbook for the Patient and Family.

"Chemotherapy can be used in three ways:

1. to control
2. to cure
3. to increase the effectiveness of other treatment — radiation or surgery.

"The most common use is to "control" cancer — that is, to try to cause the tumor to shrink or prevent it from spreading more. One reason for trying to control cancer is to make the patient feel better (this is called palliation): if chemotherapy causes the tumor to shrink, it may relieve some of the symptoms from the tumor. For example, the tumor may be causing a blockage in the lungs which makes a person feel short of breath. Shrinking the tumor will reduce the blockage and allow easier breathing. Another example of palliation can be found when a person has pain because the tumor presses on nerves. As the tumor shrinks, the nerves are less affected and the pain is reduced.

"An additional reason for aiming at control of cancer is to prolong useful and meaningful life. In many cases, significant time can be added to people's lives, enabling them to spend more time out of the hospital and at home with family activities.

"Finally, it is possible that if the cancer can be controlled long enough, a new drug may be developed which will successfully combat the disease. Since new drugs are always being developed, the chance for more effective treatment continues to improve.

"Whenever possible, the goal of chemotherapy is to cure cancer. In previous times, the goal had been control alone. However, as the treatments improved, cure has become possible for some kinds of tumors. As research continues, more and more people will be able to enter chemotherapy with a goal of cure.

"Although many people have their tumors removed by surgery (and the surgeons believe they "got it all"), it's still possible that a few cancer cells could remain. Surgeons can't see individual cancer cells as they are operating, nor can laboratory tests detect them. If left untreated, these cells may grow into additional tumors. Chemotherapy is now being used after surgery to destroy these cells and, thereby, prevent recurrences. This type of treatment is called adjuvant therapy because it is an addition (adjunct) to the surgery. Because tumors are generally more responsive to chemotherapy when they are small, there is a greater likelihood of destroying the disease completely if chemotherapy is used before tumors have time to become large.

"At present, adjuvant chemotherapy is available only for patients with certain types of cancer. This is simply because effective drugs haven't been discovered yet for all kinds of cancer that are likely to recur. As drug research continues, it is hoped that an increasing number of effective chemotherapeutic agents will become available so that more tumors can be treated with adjuvant therapy.

"Another use of chemotherapy is to shrink a tumor so that surgical removal is possible.

"Chemotherapy is also used at the same time of radiation therapy. The purpose of the drugs may be to make the tumor more sensitive to the radiation. This use of chemotherapy is called "radiosensitization."

If you are interested in reading more about chemotherapy, you can request an order blank for Chemotherapy, A Handbook for the Patient and Family by calling or writing the Cancer Information Service. The toll-free number in Minnesota is 1-800-682-5262, and in North and South Dakota it is 1-800-328-5188. The mailing address is 2750 Park Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55407.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I am 17-years-old and in good health. Lately, though, I've been having pain that feels like menstrual cramps between periods. Should I see a doctor? I'm worried that I may have cancer of the ovaries.

Mary J.

Dear Mary J.:

It would be extremely rare for someone your age to have ovarian cancer. Generally, people don't develop this kind of cancer until they are between the ages of 40 and 59. In the teenage woman, mid-cycle pain or discomfort is usually due to ovulation. Most of the time the sensation will occur on only one side rather than both sides. However, you should see a doctor to discuss your pain. Your doctor can examine you and determine what the causes may be.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My cousin was told that she may have Hodgkin's disease. The doctor said she has some of the symptoms, but not all of them. He's going to do some kind of surgery, but first she has to have a test called a "lymphangiogram." He says this test will show how serious the cancer is.

What is a lymphangiogram?

Concerned Cousin

Dear Concerned Cousin:

As you may know, Hodgkin's disease is a form of cancer involving the lymph nodes and vessels. Lymph vessels, part of the body's circulatory system, carry lymphatic fluid throughout the body, much like the arteries and veins carry blood. Along the lymph vessels are small bean-shaped structures called lymph nodes. Their function is to help the body fight infection. When a person has Hodgkin's disease, some of the lymph nodes — become filled with cancer cells.

A number of diagnostic tests can be done to determine the presence and extent of Hodgkin's disease. A lymphangiogram is one of these. In this test a special dye is injected into the lymph vessels of the patient's feet. The dye is carried through the lymphatic system to lymph nodes throughout the patient's body. X-rays then are taken. The dye allows the lymphatic system to be clearly visible on the x-rays so that doctors can see which nodes are affected by the cancer.

Doctors use the results of the lymphangiogram to determine the extent of the patient's disease and to decide on the most effective treatment. Because the dye remains in the patient's lymph system for months and sometimes even years after the initial lymphangiogram, additional x-rays can be taken periodically to help doctors monitor the effectiveness of the treatment.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I'm confused about the Pap smear. I've always thought that a woman is supposed to have this test every year. Now I've been hearing that doctors have changed their minds about how often the Pap smear is necessary.

Mrs. R.S.

Dear Mrs. R.S.:

It is true that for many years an annual Pap smear has been recommended as part of a woman's routine physical-examination. Recently some scientists and physicians have questioned whether it was necessary for most women to have the test that often.

In July 1980, the National Cancer Institute (NCI) sponsored a Consensus Development Conference of experts to make recommendations on the use of the Pap smear. The conference panel agreed that the test is safe and effective in detecting cell changes that can progress to cancer of the cervix.

The panel members agreed that most women who are virgins need not have Pap smears. It recommended that all other women should have their first Pap smear soon after they become sexually active. If the first smear is normal, it should be repeated in one year. If the second smear also is normal, the woman's physician should set a schedule of regular testing at intervals of one to three years.

The panel did not agree on how frequently these examinations should be repeated for women at high risk for cervical cancer. There are three factors that might make a woman's risk for cervical cancer higher than normal:

— first sexual intercourse before age 18,

— multiple sexual partners, and

— low socioeconomic status.

A woman's physician considers these factors in recommending how frequently she should have Pap smears.

The consensus panel also suggested that if a woman past age 60 has had two negative Pap smears, she probably does not need any further routine Pap tests.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I live on a farm in Iowa and for several years I have used chewing tobacco. Recently my wife told me I can get some kind of mouth cancer from it. Would it help if I switched to a pipe?

D.B.

Dear D.B.:

No- pipe-smoking is just as bad as chewing tobacco. There are few cancers that have such definite causes as cancer of the mouth. One of those causes is tobacco.

Besides tobacco, however, there are several other possible causes of oral cancer. These include chronic irritation, prolonged heavy use of alcohol, and poor dental care. The first sign of oral cancer is a small painless sore (or ulcer) that doesn't go away. If you notice a persistent sore, see your physician or dentist promptly.

As part of each routine dental examination, your dentist or dental hygienist will examine your mouth for signs of cancer. Regular dental care is particularly important for people who use any form of tobacco.

The Great American Forest

MONEY DOES GROW ON TREES AND VICE VERSA

The great American forest means trees for tomorrow and tomorrow and all the tomorrows after that. This article is part of a series written by the American Forest Institute to help keep people better informed on how important our forests are.

Government programs that help trees grow can help stretch your dollar, too.

The next time you see a forest you might like to consider how wonderfully versatile it is.

It provides all Americans with useful wood and paper products, recreation, natural beauty, protection for watersheds and wildlife.

It goes even farther, making these less obvious, but no less important, contributions to the country's economic well-being:

Jobs—millions of workers in the woods, in the factories that turn wood and fiber into thousands of essential products, and on construction sites all over this growing land.

Taxes—billions of dollars a year, going to support schools, hospitals, public safety, countless other vital public services.

International trade—wood products we export help strengthen the American dollar and improve the nation's balance of payments.

Inflation deterrent—the more productive the forest, the more likely that the nation's supply of wood and paper products will be adequate to meet sharply increasing demands—and will be available at reasonable prices. Thus, a productive commercial forest, growing trees for today and tomorrow, becomes a significant inflation fighter.

Every American has a stake in increasing the productivity of the commercial forests. (Commercial forest, as defined by the U.S. Forest Service, is all forest land—whether owned by individuals, government or the forest industry—that is capable of, and potentially available for, growing repeated crops of trees for harvest. It includes land in National Forests but not in National Parks or Wilderness areas.)

So far, the commercial forest has been able to cope with all the demands made on it. We can't expect it to continue to provide its benefits automatically.

If wood supply is to keep up with the predicted doubling of demand in this nation over the next 50 years, expenditures for replanting and regeneration will have to be substantially increased. The greatest potential for improvement is on publicly held land.

The nation needs to establish policies and take actions to encourage productivity—not only in the National Forests but in other forests as well.

For a free booklet on America's forests, write American Forest Institute, P.O. Box 37430, Washington, D.C. 20013 for "The Great American Forest."

Decisions? Decisions?

Many people refuse to make a decision. You know who they are, they keep on saying the same old thing.

"We should have bought 10 years ago."

Let me show you an ad for a farm that ran in the November 4, 1970 addition of the Thief River Falls times.

600 acres, 520 crop acres. $80 per acre, 15 year Contract for Deed.

You are now thinking the same thing. "We should have bought that 10 years ago. Just think, you could have bought a $48,000 farm with around a $10,000 down payment. The property would have carried itself all that time as the renter would have made the payments. Market value today on a 600 acre farm is right around $450,000-$500,000. That means you could sell the farm today with a gain of near $450,000! Imagine, a real genuine case right here in Thief River Falls where $10,000 approx. made a half million. Instead of saying: "I should have", you could now just retire on the interest dollars for the rest of your life, with no worries about whether or not the Social Security checks are going to keep coming.

Can you make a decision now? Or do you want to wait another 10 years?

We have farms in most areas.

Call and check our current farm inventory at any of our locations.

Unique Christmas Gifts

Area stores have some unusual suggestions for this year's holiday gift giving season. For little girls, 4 and up, there is Darci Cover Girl which was introduced last year. The doll is available in blonde, brunette or redhead, each with posing stand, magazine portfolio and three magazine covers. This year there are twelve new and exciting Fashion Finds outfits, including Fancy Pants, Jean Scene, Garden Gal, Firecracker and Simply Splashing. There are new outfits for every occasion.

Space age children, ages 5 and up, will be thrilled with the STAR WARS: Empire Strikes Back Millennium Falcon, an authentic detailed replica of the speedy space vehicle piloted by Han Solo. This space ship features an exciting "Battle Alert" sound, flip-open canopy, retractable landing skids and fold-up entrance ramp.

For ages 1½ and up, Strawberry Shortcake and Huckleberry Pie Rag Dolls will capture the hearts of children of all ages. These 13" tall rag dolls are scented to smell like their names. They have removable clothing and the dolls are machine washable. Included with each rag doll is a Strawberry-Styled comb and a Strawberry Shortcake "Thank You" card.

Play-Doh, celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, introduces the new Play-Doh Microscope. Children peek through an eye-piece slide and see Play-Doh bugs, slugs, germs, worms, snakes, etc. in bright colors. The Play-Doh Microscope, for ages 3 to 7, includes a microscope extruder, 4 slide-dies, a mold for faces and insects, 2 specimen flasks with corks, flask rack, tweezers, label sheet and three 6 ounce cans of Play-Doh.

Notice of Hearing

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that Adolph Oseid of 1010 Somerset Drive, Thief River Falls, MN has applied to the zoning office for a variance to the sideyard setback requirements in the C-2 Highway Commercial District. The property is located on south Highway 59 between 1st and Sherwood. Legal description of the property is Lot 20A, Auditor's Replat of Block 7 of Park Addition.

Granting the variance would allow him to construct a building with a 5 foot sideyard setback rather than the required 15 feet.

A public hearing will be held on the above request on the 15th day of December, 1980 at which time all persons desiring to be heard on this subject may be heard. Property owners within 350' of the request will be notified by mail and may direct any questions they have to the City Planning Office at 681-6780 or in writing Box 528, Thief River Falls, MN.

The hearing will be held at 5:15 p.m. in the City Council Chambers of the City Auditorium.

Scrap Industry Is Concerned About Use Of Resources

United States scrap metal industry is launching a major drive to spur increased use of scrap iron and steel in the steel-manufacturing process.

"If the nation is serious about recycling and saving energy, then it's time that industry, the consumer and government start working together to make the best possible use of all our resources," said Morton B. Plant, president of the in*stitute of scrap iron and steel.*

Plant said the scrap metal industry will take the lead in a new effort to convince scrap users — steel companies and foundries — that recovered iron and steel is a bargain, with prices dropping recently to approximately 40 per cent of their level of six years ago. The steel composite price went up by 80 per cent during the same period.

"Even if scrap prices return to their 1974 levels or exceed them, scrap is still a real bargain. If you consider inflation, prices today are less than they were 25 years ago," Plant said.

In addition to the industry's efforts to convince steelmakers of price advantages, the scrap institute also plans to demonstrate to consumers the savings in energy and environmental costs.

Plant said the institute's program will try to dramatize such facts as these:

—When 1,000 tons of steel are made with scrap instead of ore, the energy saved is equivalent to 140,000 gallons of gasoline.

—Each ton of scrap used in making new iron and steel also saves one and one-half tons of iron ore and one-third of a ton of coal. During the past 60 years, scrap industry shipments to U.S. steel mills and foundries conserved 2.6 billion tons of iron ore and nearly 600 million tons of coal, both finite resources.

U.S. environmental protection agency has found that use of scrap iron and steel instead of ore in the steelmaking process reduces air pollution effluents by 86 per cent, causes a 40 per cent reduction in water use, and a 76 per cent drop in water pollution.

"So we know that scrap can be the key to achieving an environmental and economic balance for generations to come," Plant said. "Now we must get on with its best use."

Plant said another major aspect of the scrap industry's efforts will be to work against governmental policies that hinder the use of scrap iron and steel.

He singled out, for example, a decision earlier this year by the department of energy that failed to develop a realistic recycling target for the iron and steel industries.

"At a time when we desperately need to recycle and save energy, the government's industrial energy conservation program proposed an iron and steel recycling target one percentage point lower in 1987 than it is today," Plant said.

He noted that the steel industry's current scrap use rate is 42 per cent and that a "one percentage point decrease in recycling over the next seven years is obviously not a goal, but a mockery of the law." Plant said the energy department's action fails to follow Congress' instructions for "maximum feasible increase" in use of recovered material.

Other blocks to better use of scrap iron and steel include discriminatory rail shipment rates, lack of tax incentives for ferrous scrap recovery use and efforts to restrict exports of excess U.S. scrap, Plant said.

Scrap industry leader said it costs an estimated average of three times as much to ship scrap iron by rail as it costs to ship iron ore.

Tax depletion benefits, he said, are available to producers of iron ore, but none exist for those steel mills and foundries that recycle metallic scrap. The tax policy is discriminatory, Plant said, and "encourages mining irreplaceable natural resources while discouraging true conservation efforts."

Plant pointed to a study by Robert R. Nathan associates establishing that the 1980 backlog of discarded ferrous products available for use — but not being recycled — exceeds 700 million tons "and is growing every day."

He said government policies should encourage all use of scrap metal, including expanded markets abroad. If the U.S. steel industry cannot or will not make the most efficient use of scrap, Plant said, "Who is going to buy all this material for recycling? If we can't sell it at home or abroad, it rusts and goes to waste and everyone loses."

MN. Rideshare Plan Offers Money Savings

"It's Going to work," the program's slogan, indicates both its emphasis on getting to work and its effectiveness in providing an economical alternative to single-occupant auto commuter travel. Minnesota Rideshare provides a way to coordinate ridesharing services by making it easier for people who want to share rides and cut their commuting costs.

Minnesota Rideshare — the first totally integrated statewide ride-sharing program in the country — was introduced November 12 by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

For the thousands of Minnesotans who drive to work each day alone, the innovative ridesharing program enables Mn-DOT to provide employers and employees in all regions of Minnesota with car and vanpool services and information about available bus service as commuting alternatives.

Mn-DOT commissioner Richard P. Braun, who chairs the governor's task force on ridesharing, said, "Mn-DOT is providing the leadership through Minnesota Rideshare to persuade and enable Minnesotans to change their transportation habits. By providing ride-matching services and vanpools, Minnesota Rideshare will generate greater vehicle occupancy. This is a chance for individuals, private organizations and government to work together to expand ridesharing and cut fuel consumption in Minnesota."

John Tubbesing, manager of the rideshare program, said if all Minnesotans shared a ride to work — two or more persons in a carpool — Minnesota could reduce yearly gasoline consumption by 30 to 40 per cent. Minnesotans use 2.2 billion gallons of gasoline each year.

In addition to conserving energy, Tubbesing said Minnesotans who now drive alone could save as much as $1,500 in yearly commuting costs for gasoline, maintenance and other expenses by ridesharing. A commuter who can eliminate the need for one car by ridesharing can save about $2,500 a year by eliminating operating expenses plus depreciation, licensing and taxes.

Minnesota Rideshare will be administered through Mn-DOT district offices throughout the state. Office in Bemidji may be reached at (218) 755-3336 and the Detroit Lakes office at (218) 847-4401.

Designed to bridge the gap between programs conducted by large employers and carpools and vanpools formed by individual initiative, the ridesharing program will be conducted in two phases. The first will concentrate on enrolling employees through employer groups during November and December; the second will focus on enrolling others who want to share rides, beginning in January.

Funding for the program totals $1.5 million. Funding sources are $400,000 from the state and $1.1 million from the federal highway administration.

Tubbesing said ridesharing is the only transportation alternative available in most rural areas of the state because of the high cost of expanding existing public transportation systems or creating new ones.

"Vanpools and carpools work," he said, "because they are responsive to the specific needs of individual commuters. Their practicality and flexibility support the purpose of Minnesota Rideshare — an economical, energy-saving way to get to work."

To Be Thankful

It used to be that a picture like this could only mean harvest time — big orange pumpkins, shiny red apples, colorful stalks of Indian corn. And, of course, a turkey in the pantry.

But what about today? You can buy apples almost any time. Pumpkins are available in a can twelve months of the year. And you can buy a frozen turkey as easily in July as in November.

We Americans take for granted what was a real treat in our parent's time. But in the midst of this material plenty, there is a danger of spiritual famine. To keep the proper perspective, to appreciate the gifts of life to the fullest we need the Church and the story it has to tell us.

Maybe you can't be a pioneer — a Pilgrim. But you can follow your forefathers' example at Plymouth that first November. You can utter genuine thanks in the church or synagogue of your choice.

Senior Citizens

Sixteen met for our weekly meeting November 20. Wallace Rud was a lunch guest.

Polly worked on the hot pad Christmas tree, a few ladies laid out blocks for another piece quilt. This one is of woolen pieces. Some ladies were busy again at the fluffing circle having a jolly time, talking and laughing.

We made some plans for a craft sale to be held some time in December. At this time we will also raffle off our afghan, so get your tickets now from the senior citizens.

Four door prizes were given away. Polly received Elsie's, Gust received Ruth's, Ruth Harper received Louie's and Anna Brekke received Wernberg's.

There will be no meeting next week due to Thanksgiving day next Thursday.

Mildred served the lunch which Bertha Fredrickson of Thief River Falls paid for. Table grace was sung before eating.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smeby of Karlstad visited and were supper guests of Irene Larson Sunday.

Letters To The Editor

We really appreciate receiving letters with individual opinion on matters of concern or interest to our area. And we don't mind a bit when they express an opinion opposed to those expressed in our editorials; that's what an open forum is all about.

In the past few weeks we have received a number of letters which we have not printed because of policy which we have established in regard to public opinion letters. Perhaps we should explain part of that policy again.

Prior to the general election November 4 we received a large number of letters in regard to political candidates. Our policy for a number of years has been that we do not accept letters of endorsement nor criticism of candidates for office. Our belief is that candidates may make their appeals to the voters through our advertising columns.

Some of the letters about candidates — in fact most of them — were of the type prepared in bulk for mailing to a number of newspapers. We reject such letters automatically. We feel our readers are entitled to reading matter directed especially to them.

Locally-written, sincere letters on political candidacies are hard to turn down. We receive only a very few of these each election campaign. But to be fair to all and to avoid any type of imagined favoritism, we stand by our general policy.

Two recent letters are more pertinent examples of a perpetual problem we seem to have. One is on a local controversial issue and is totally acceptable for content — except that there is no signature and the writer can not be identified. We have pointed out a number of times that we will not accept unsigned letters. In unique circumstances where the letter writer can understandably not want to be publicly identified, we have withheld the name from publication. In such cases, we do make the name available if someone with a legitimate interest in the source asks for it.

If the writer of the letter written with felt-tip pen on ruled paper and signed "A College Student" would care to stop by the office and sign it, we will be happy to publish it in the next issue. And if you still don't have the courage of your convictions to let the public know it's your stand, we will withhold the name from publication.

The final letter is the kind that is more annoying and aggravating. It takes issue with a recent editorial on the election, bears a Newfolden post mark and has a typewritten name for a signature. Our letter to that name at Newfolden was returned with the addressee unknown.

One of two things is happening here: (1) The letter writer lives somewhere else and had the letter mailed in Newfolden, or (2) a fictitious name has been signed. We would give heavy odds on the latter.

As we said, we welcome letters that take issue with our expressed editorial opinion. But we don't take kindly to people who play games with names on letters to the editor. That shows an even greater lack of courage than not supplying a name at all.

Whenever we have a chance to talk to public opinion letter writers — and we have made it a policy to verify all signatures because of the games noted above — we encourage them to have the name published. We believe it adds credibility to the position the writer takes. To the best of our memory, we have heard of no one who had regrets about deciding to have his or her name used.

So send us your letters on local issues. Tell us and the public what you think. Sign your name and give us a telephone number or address where we can contact you to verify the signature. We want to hear from you and our other readers want to know what you think.

Over-Protection?

Following editorial is from the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News-Free Press:

Can you remember back when the United States was a nation getting along very well without such federal offices as the Environmental Protection Agency, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the Drug Enforcement Agency, the Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the National Transportation Safety Board, the Federal Election Commission, the Council on Wage and Price Stability, the Mine Safety and Health Administration and the Department of Energy?

That year was 1970. Yes, within one decade, these and a number of other major federal regulatory agencies were created. Their budgets come to about $3 billion per year and so far more than that amount in compliance costs.

Our people need some governmental protection, but it's obvious that the major need now is for protection from the protectors.

What Happened To Common Sense?

People critical of government handling of business in this country (and criticizing government seems to be the national pastime) unerringly zero in on the central problem — that action by government bodies, bureaus or agencies fail to exercise common sense in their activities.

One recent case in point is the government's rent subsidy program administered under the department of housing and urban development (HUD). Congress was likely well intentioned when it authorized the rent subsidy program in 1974 and appropriated $42 million. There are obviously needy people who could benefit from adequate housing, particularly elderly on fixed incomes.

In six years, however, that initial $42 million appropriation has ballooned to a $3 billion budget item, and it is possible HUD will sign contracts in fiscal 1981 obligating taxpayers to spend $20 billion in rent subsidies in coming years. From 1974 to 1979, HUD reportedly committed itself to subsidies totaling $130 billion.

But it isn't only the dollars that are frightening, it's the lack of common sense. The House of Representatives has voted to extend rent subsidies to "middle income" families. Formula proposed is that if the median income in an area is $25,000, families with up to $37,500 incomes could get tax money to help pay their rent if they met all other requirements.

"Do you earn $37,500 a year?" asks an editorial in the Chattanooga News-Free Press. "Most of our people don't. But even though you earn much less, the House of Representatives wants to tax you and use your money to subsidize the rent of people who may be earning as much as $37,500. Can you believe it? It's sadly true."

Ridiculous Research

Following item was written by Congressman William Dickinson of Alabama:

A constituent recently asked me for information about some of the ridiculous ways our money is spent. I thought this time of the year (tax time) would be an appropriate time to share a small sample of what my research uncovered:

—"Study of motorists attitudes toward large trucks, $222,000."

—"A two year study to find out that runoff from open stacks of cow manure on Vermont farms causes the pollution of the water in nearby small streams and ponds, $38,174."

—"Funds to develop a 'curriculum package' to teach college students how to watch television, $21,592."

—"A study costing nearly $46,000 to find out how long it takes to cook breakfast; and a proposed additional $160,000 to do a similar study on lunch and dinner."

—"A study to determine why inmates want to escape from prison, $27,000."

—"Funds to produce a dictionary of Tzotzil — an obscure and unwritten Mayan language spoken by 120,000 corn-farming peasants in southern Mexico, $80,000."

—"A grant to Arlington County, Virginia, to study why people are rude, and why they cheat and lie on the local tennis courts, $25,000."

—"Over $3.4 million on an advertising campaign to make Americans write more letters to one another, and an additional $775,000 to test the effects of the campaign."

—"Study of the exercise, boredom and stress of confined pregnant pigs, $5,000."

—"$92,656 per minute (or $133,424,650 per day), to pay INTEREST on the 'national debt' for Fiscal Year 1978."

These are some of the reasons I have introduced a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget. This amendment would force a financially irresponsible federal government to set spending priorities and to eliminate the waste of our hard earned tax dollars on such frivilous things as those above. There is growing sentiment around the nation for such an amendment and hearings will be held in the Judiciary Committee this session. Only time will tell whether or not we have the support to get it passed.

Interesting Opinions:

"I think every nation eventually gets the kind of government it deserves."

ENERGY ASSISTANCE

Energy Assistance funds for low-income residents of Pennington, Red Lake, and East Polk counties will soon be available according to Inter-County Community council. I.C.C.C. staff said over $850,000 in fuel assistance money is expected to help approximately 1700 eligible households with high fuel bills.

The Energy Assistance money will be available to low-income households in the form of a credit toward future energy costs, or as an actual payment for already existing fuel oil, natural gas, electric, coal, wood, or other energy bills. Renters and households which cut their own wood for fuel may also be eligible for the Energy Assistance Program.

Income eligibility for the fuel Assistance Program is based on the total number of individuals in each household and gross income. Persons living alone who earn less than $4,738 are eligible for the energy assistance. The income guideline for a household of four is $12,240 and $16,890 for a household of six. Households with more than six persons should add $2,450 for each additional member when determining income eligibility.

Medical expenses in excess of three per cent of a household's annual income can be deducted when determining income eligibility for the energy assistance. Persons must bring medical expense records, as well as proof of income and fuel bills, when applying for the Energy Assistance Program.

Individuals or any household member receiving Aid to families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Food Stamps, or General Assistance, are categorically eligible for the program.

The actual amount of energy assistance provided to an eligible household is determined by a formula. It takes into account the type of energy which the household uses and the average cost of that same type of energy in the region in relation to household income. Assistance payments will range from $50 to $1,045.

Bells Of Gold For Christmas

For centuries, the ringing of Christmas bells has been a beloved tradition. Nostalgic memories are evoked by the sounds of church bells on Christmas morning, jingle bells on horse-drawn sleighs and decorative bells on festive pine boughs and packages.

According to historians, bells have had many other meanings as well. They were originally worn throughout the world to ward off evil spirits and protect the wearer from bodily harm.

It is stated in Exodus that gold bells were prescribed by God for the hems of priests' garments. The sound of their ringing was thought to ward off demons that frequented the thresholds of sanctuaries.

Today, bells of gold are available as charming pendants, to be threaded onto gold chains—a real bellringer of a gift idea! Their lovely, rich sound is certain to cause smiles of delight this Christmas. And, like any gift of karat gold jewelry, bells of real gold can be treasured for their intrinsic value, their long lasting quality and their beauty.

"Puma head" bell (second from bottom left), 22k gold replica of an ancient Costa Rican bell, from The DVB Collection available in museum gift shops. All other bells, designed by Terrymayer in 14k gold, offered by fine jewelry and department stores.

The wearing of gold bells is a revival of a custom enjoyed by the ancient Colombians, as evidenced by the intriguing "Gold of El Dorado" exhibit of artifacts from Colombia, South America, now touring the United States. The exhibit includes a number of gold bells worn for personal adornment and appreciated for their musical qualities.

In Untraditionally Short Time . . .

Prepare A Traditional Holiday Meal

While the family gathering may still be a holiday tradition, the size of those gatherings, and the American family itself, is getting smaller. In fact, statistics reveal that more than one-half of all U.S. households contain only one or two persons.

Despite the changes, one thing remains constant: Turkey is still a favorite holiday entree. To better meet the needs of smaller households, smaller turkeys are currently available from packers like Swift & Company. These products deliver the taste, juiciness and tenderness previously found only in much larger birds.

As a result, holiday chefs can reap two advantages. First, leftovers can be minimized. Second, preparation time is greatly shortened. In fact, for the chef who wants to spend little time in the kitchen, Swift offers a Butterball® Turkey which is prestuffed with an old-fashioned bread stuffing in sizes from five to sixteen pounds, and goes from freezer to oven without thawing.

Complete roasting instructions come with the turkey, which requires a minimum of four and three-fourths hours to roast and gives a cook total freedom from preparation.

Another variation on the holiday dinner theme is the unstuffed turkey or turkey breast, served with a tasty onion casserole. This easy dish, which can be prepared while the turkey is cooking, is placed in the oven during the last hour of roasting time.

TIME SAVING TURKEY WITH ONION CASSEROLE

Easy Onion Casserole

- 16 ounce package frozen, diced, and formed onion rings
- 2 cups sliced celery
- 10¾ ounce can condensed cream of celery soup
- ½ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon rubbed sage
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Prepare Stuffing: Combine onion rings, celery, soup, milk, and sage in a large mixing bowl. Stir to coat onion rings and celery. Press mixture into a 1¼-quart casserole that has been generously rubbed with butter. Dot mixture with butter and cover. Place in oven with turkey during last hour of roasting time.

PREPARE TURKEY
Li'l Butterball™

Thawing: Thaw in unopened bag in cool water for 3-4 hours. Change water often, or:

Thaw turkey in bag in refrigerator (on tray) for 1½-2 days.

Butterball® Breast

Thaw in cool water for 4-8 hours and change water often, or:

Leave on a tray in refrigerator for 1-2 days.

ROASTING
Li'l Butterball™

Set oven at 375° and remove turkey from bag. Remove packages containing neck and giblets from bird. Rinse turkey and drain well. Place turkey on shallow open pan with no water.

Brush skin with melted butter or margarine before roasting and baste if desired while roasting. When skin becomes golden brown, shield breast with lightweight foil to prevent over-browning.

ROASTING TIMES:
375°F Thawed Only
4-7 pounds 1¼-2 hours
7-10 pounds 2-2½ hours

Butterball® Breast

Place in heated 325° oven, skin-side up in a shallow pan. Brush with melted butter or margarine. If desired, baste turkey during roasting.

ROASTING TIMES:
325°F · Thawed
2-5 pounds 2-2¼ hours
5-8 pounds 2¼-2¾ hours

You and Betty Crocker can
Bake Someone Happy

Blueberry Bakings

Fall is here. Time for things to settle down a bit after a hectic summer. What better way to start a fall morning than over a leisurely breakfast that includes fresh baked blueberry treats.

With Betty Crocker® wild blueberry muffin mix, it's quick and easy to do. Just add milk and an egg to the mix; then stir in the can of blueberries that comes with the mix. You'll spend your time lingering at the table, not in the kitchen.

Here are some ideas for adding that homemade touch.

BLUEBERRY-ORANGE COFFEE CAKE

Heat oven to 400°. Grease square pan, 8x8x2 inches. Prepare 1 package Betty Crocker® wild blueberry muffin mix as directed except—substitute 1/2 cup orange juice for the milk. Pour batter into pan. Bake until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean, 15 to 20 minutes. While warm, drizzle with Orange Glaze (below). Serve warm. 9 servings.

Orange Glaze: Mix 1/2 cup powdered sugar and about 1 tablespoon orange juice until smooth and of desired consistency.

BLUEBERRY PUFFS

- 1 package Betty Crocker® wild blueberry muffin mix
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1 1/4 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 1/2 cup margarine or butter, melted

Bake muffins as directed on package. Mix sugar and cinnamon. Roll hot muffins in margarine then in sugar mixture. 12 muffins.

Mini Blueberry Puffs: Pour batter into 20 to 24 small muffin cups, 1 3/4x1 inch. Bake 12 to 15 minutes. Continue as directed. 20 to 24 muffins.

Home Energy Tips

When building or buying a home, energy-efficient construction should be on the top of your priority list. A little planning can save you a lot of money.

For instance, did you know a square floor plan is more energy efficient than a rectangular plan?

Or did you know improper insultation can add an extra 20 to 30 percent to your fuel bill? Make sure the walls and roof are insulated to the highest specifications recommended for your area of the country. It is also a good idea to insulate floors over crawl spaces, cold basements and garages.

Place your refrigerator location well away from the range and oven. If you place it in the coolest part of the kitchen, it won't have to work as hard to stay cold.

Consider solar heat gain when you plan your window locations. In cool climates install fewer windows in the north because there is little solar heat gain on that side of the house.

If you live in a warm climate, remember that light-colored roofing can help keep your house cooler by reflecting the sun's rays.

Have the water heater installed as close as possible to areas of major use. This will minimize heat loss through the pipes.

When buying a home, ask about the energy efficiency of the heating system and air-conditioning. An improperly maintained heating system can waste costly fuel and drop to below 60 percent efficiency. A home heating technician can do a simple series of tests to tell you how efficient your heating is and what to do to improve it.

When building a home, consider installing a multi-fuel heating system. One progressive manufacturer, Repco Products Corporation, is marketing multi-fuel boilers capable of burning any kind of solid, gas or liquid fuel. The Hoval Variolyt boiler not only saves on the high cost of oil, but it is also 88 percent fuel-efficient.

COOKIE SNOWBALLS: TO SERVE—TO GIVE

It's cookie-baking season. Trays of irresistible Coconut Cookie Snowballs promise delicious eating for holiday company. Think of the satisfaction, too, when you earmark a few dozen for gift giving. These rich butter cookies call for just a few ingredients, among them moist, delicate flaked coconut to be enjoyed throughout the cookie. Confectioners sugar glaze complements the cookie gems which are covered with tinted flaked coconut.

COCONUT COOKIE SNOWBALLS

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons unsifted confectioners sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1-1/3 cups (about) Baker's Angel Flake coconut
- Confectioners Sugar Glaze

Cream butter. Add sugar and vanilla; beat until light and fluffy. Add flour, all at once, and blend well. Mix in 2/3 cup of the coconut. Chill 15 minutes; then shape into 1-inch balls. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake at 350° for 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Cool. Tint remaining coconut with food coloring as directed on package, if desired. Dip cooled cookies in Confectioners Sugar Glaze, then in the tinted coconut. Makes 2-1/2 dozen.

Confectioners Sugar Glaze. Add 1 tablespoon (about) hot milk or water to 1 cup sifted confectioners sugar in bowl. Makes 1/3 cup.

Views On® Dental Health

By Donald R. Goodrich, D.D.S.

GIFT THAT LASTS A LIFETIME

Today it seems that major appliances and cars have built-in obsolescence. Toys given at holiday time seem to be broken by January and clothes have a way of wearing out before they're even broken in. Is there really a gift that can last a lifetime?

What parents do not want for their child — good looks, confidence, better health and a beautiful smile? Some go through their entire lives lacking these because of crooked teeth or an overbite (buck teeth) or an underbite. It's not hard to see children (and adults) go out of their way to hide their smiles so that people won't see their dental defects.

When parents bestow upon their child the gift of straight teeth through orthodontics, then they can be sure that they have given a gift that lasts a lifetime. With straight teeth will come the precious bonuses of a perfect smile, improved self confidence and (because of the corrected bite) lower future dental bills.

A public service to promote better dental health. From the office of, DONALD R. GOODRICH, D.D.S., Professional Bldg., Thief River Falls. Phone: 681-4506.

NATIONAL AWARD for the best merchandising effort in the United States was received by Ace Hardware in Thief River Falls from the Hoover vacuum cleaner company recently. The store was in competition with 4,700 Ace dealers in the nation and received a cash prize, top of the line vacuum cleaner and a special award for display. Store management and personnel were also hosted to an award dinner. Left to right in the photo are Dan Grobarchik, district manager from Fargo, ND; Ron Kalinoski, local store manager; Charles Djubek, company branch manager from Minneapolis; Delores Carlson, household department manager; Jeff Fournier, local Hoover sales representative; and Vic Kalinsoki, store owner.

TROPHY CATCH from the Red Lake river in Thief River Falls was this northern caught by Duane Holland while angling through the ice Saturday morning. Holland was fishing for walleyes near the Eighth street bridge when the northern inhaled his minnow. The fish made several strong runs, Holland said, before he was able to pull it through the six-inch-thick ice. Tipping the scales at 18 pounds, one ounce, the fish is the largest northern known to be taken from the river in half a dozen years. One of the more avid river fishermen in the community, Holland also caught an 11-pound walleye several years ago.

Disaster Loan Assistance Still Available

Paul W. Jansen, Director of the Small Business Administration disaster office in Minneapolis, issued a reminder that a declaration has been made making disaster loan assistance available in Becker, Beltrami, Clay, Clearwater, Hubbard, Kittson, Koochiching, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Mahnomen, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake, Roseau and adjacent counties within the State of Minnesota due to the severe drought that has occurred since April 1980.

In addition, Pennington is eligible for assistance for damage caused by a hail storm on June 13, and Red Lake for the same hail storm and a tornado which occurred on July 11.

According to Jansen, "The declaration was amended in Minnesota on September 5, but apparently some confusion exists regarding the details". Homeowners and businesses suffering physical loss and agricultural enterprises suffering crop loss as a result of the disasters have until March 5, 1981, to apply for assistance. Those businesses suffering economic injury have until June 5, 1981 to apply.

Loan application forms and information may be obtained by contacting the Small Business Administration disaster office at Room 530, Plymouth Bldg, 12 So. 6th St., Minneapolis, MN 55402. The telephone number is 612-725-2045.

Felton Man Is President Of Wheat Growers

Fred Kreps, a farmer and businessman from Felton, was elected president of the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers at their annual meeting conducted in Moorhead recently. He replaces Jorgen Knutson, Red Lake Falls, who has been president for the past two years. Other officers elected at the meeting include first vice president, Don Loeslie of Warren, and second vice president Harry Howard, also of Warren.

Kreps was born and raised in the Red River Valley, and has been farming in the Felton area since 1957. He has been active in the Wheat Growers since it was formed in 1976, and has most recently served as the first vice president. He has also been instrumental in organizing and hosting the many foreign delegations that visit Minnesota, sponsored by the Minnesota Wheat Research and Promotion Council.

Loeslie served as the Minnesota Wheat Growers legislative coordinator prior to being elected first vice president. He is currently chairman of the National Association of Wheat Growers econometric research committee, and has served as the vice-chairman of the NAWG's international and domestic marketing committee.

Howard is a member of the Minnesota Crop Improvement Association, and the National Association of Wheat Growers, in addition to being the second vice president of the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers. He has been Minnesota's representative in discussions between U.S. and Canadian wheat producers.

More 10-Ton Emergency Routes Listed

Additional emergency 10-ton highway routes have been announced by the Bemidji district of the Minnesota department of transportation effective December 1.

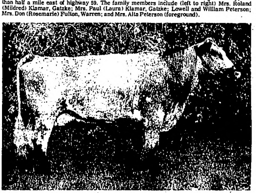
Added to the emergency route system will be highway 32 from Thief River Falls to the intersection with highway 2 at Marcoux corner, highways 92 and 222 from Oklee to Bagley and highway 9 from Borup to the south Norman county line where it connects with Clay county highway 9, previously designated an emergency 10-ton route.

Truckers who do not have permits for emergency route use and wish to haul heavier loads on the routes mentioned may contact the state highway department office in Bemidji.

Transportation department officials said that cold weather has resulted in road base stabilization sufficient to permit the increased load limits.

Alta Peterson Family Is Building Dairy Reputation

MRS. ALTA PETERSON of Plummer and her family have an extensive background in farming. The Peterson farm is located just north of the Red Lake county line in Pennington county, less than half a mile east of highway 59. The family members include (left to right) Mrs. Roland (Mildred) Klamar, Gatzke; Mrs. Paul (Laura) Klamar, Gatzke; Lowell and William Peterson; Mrs. Don (Rosemarie) Fulton, Warren; and Mrs. Alta Peterson (foreground).



HIGHEST SELLING COW at the state Milking Shorthorn sale held recently at the Otter Tail county fairgrounds in Fergus Falls was Twin Elms Raggs, consigned by the Twin Elms farm of Mrs. Alta Peterson at Plummer. The cow produced 13,196 pounds of milk and 440 pounds of butterfat in 302 days of her first lactation and has a projected mature equivalent of 17,403 pounds of milk and 561 pounds of butterfat. She sold for $1,950, closely following two bred heifers which topped the sale at $2,175 and $2,000.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

It might be a bit of an understatement to call the family of Mrs. Richard (Alta) Peterson of Plummer a farm family. All five children are actively engaged in farming, and with their mother have combined for nearly a century of 4-H club activity or service.

The Peterson farm is located just east of highway 59 and just north of the Pennington-Red Lake county line. In the Peterson family for more than 40 years, the farm has always had dairy cattle on it, and it is just recently coming into its own as a producer of high quality Milking Shorthorn cattle.

With Mrs. Peterson on the farm at the present time are her sons Bill and Lowell. Her three daughters, Mrs. Roland (Mildred) Klamar and Mrs. Paul (Laura) Klamar of Gatzke and Mrs. Donald (Rosemarie) Fulton of Warren are all fulltime participants in farming operations.

As long as there have been cattle on the farm, purebred bulls have been used to improve herd quality. "We go after the best bulls available anywhere," Lowell said. He is the herdsman for the farm and can quote pedigrees and production records on many of the animals in the herd. "It doesn't make any difference if it's 150 miles or 2,000 miles, we'll go the distance to get the bull we want."

One of those bulls, Nadolski's Bettina's Promise, was purchased from a herd in Illinois. It was used extensively in the Peterson herd and has proved to be such a good animal it was purchased by the Minnesota Valley Breeders association in New Prague for its artificial breeding service. The seven-year-old bull classified Very Good 86 and has 24 daughters with an average of 12,788 pounds of milk and 449 pounds of butterfat in their first lactation. In addition, eight of those daughters classified Very Good for type and 10 more were classified desirable.

The bull was purchased from a herd at Ashley, Ill., and its dam was originally from Lake Park. The dam, Milky Way Bettina, in her second lactation had 17,680 pounds of milk, 4.3 test, and 767 pounds of butterfat in 305 days.

"We were lucky to get him," Lowell explained. "We had arranged to get a bull calf with the breeding we wanted and there were three cows bred to that sire at the Illinois farm. One aborted, one was struck and killed by lightning and the other, fortunately, provided us with a bull calf." The bull ranks 14th among proven sires in the national Milking Shorthorn association.

Lowell points out that the bull's grand dam on the sire's side was Sunny View Little Princess, a cow which had 13 records in its lifetime. Her top producing year was 29,385 pounds of milk and 1,225 pounds of butterfat and her lifetime total production was 281,632 pounds of milk and 11,801 pounds of butterfat.

At the Minnesota state Milking Shorthorn sale held recently at the Otter Tail county fairgrounds at Fergus Falls, a three-year old cow from the Peterson herd was the highest selling cow of the sale at $1,950. It was purchased by the Harold Krause farm at Eagle Bend, which consigned the two highest selling females at the show, bred heifers which brought $2,175 and $2,000. In its first lactation the cow produced 13,196 pounds of milk and 440 pounds of fat in 302 days and has a mature equivalent production of 17,403 pounds of milk and 561 pounds of butterfat.

Since the Peterson farm is only 480 acres in size, most of the farm effort goes into the dairy operation. The herd numbers around 60 animals with the milking herd ranging from 15 to 27 but usually averaging around 18 to 20 year around. Emphasis is being placed on selling bred heifers when there is an excess of replacement animals for the milking herd.

Although purebred bulls have been used with the herd for many years, it is only recently that the Petersons have moved toward the record keeping necessary for a registered herd. All registered animals are being used for

Ridesharing Can Help Save Fuel And Money

Over the past decade, ridesharing programs have become vital countermeasures to rising fuel costs, air pollution, traffic congestion and parking needs, as well as personal transportation convenience.

This observation prompted Ross G. Wilcox, executive secretary of the safe winter driving league, to compile a round-up of ridesharing ideas that are underway or can be put into action in major areas throughout the country.

"We were basically interested in how adverse winter weather and road conditions affected car pool operations," Wilcox pointed out, "and even though the league is headquartered in Chicago, we took a close look at a uniquely comprehensive program involving both public and private agencies in a neighboring state — Michigan."

The program, Wilcox explains, is coordinated by the Michigan Department of Transportation and represents a unique four-pronged attack on ridesharing problems:

(1) Vanpooling — Michigan's ridesharing program for state employees. Starting with three vans and 31 state employees in 1977, the program currently involves 118 vanpools and approximately 1,350 state employees — making it among the largest in the country for public employees.

(2) MichiVan — Originated after the state legislature directed the transportation department to develop ridesharing program assistance to private companies, public agencies and other qualified groups. Transportation director John P. Woodford predicts, "Within a year or two, we expect to have several hundred vanpools operating in the MichiVan program.

(3) Ridesharing offices — These are operating in major population areas to coordinate vanpool and carpool programs and local bus systems.

(4) Roadside parking areas — This is designed to provide safe, off-the-road parking areas where carpoolers can leave their cars in outlying areas; 130 carpool parking lots are currently provided.

The state's department of transportation estimates that each van each year eliminates more than five tons of air pollution, saves 5,000 gallons of gas and saves individual motorists $1,000.

However, as Wilcox points out, ridesharing creates a need for multi-passenger vehicles such as vans, whether a private carpool or a group program is involved.

"Extra passengers mean the driver must be more responsible for all those riding with him. In addition, the driver must adjust to the extra weight of the passengers and the driving characteristics of a different type of vehicle than he or she is accustomed to — problems that can be aggravated by ice or snow-covered pavements.

John Connelly, supervisor of Michigan's state fleet safety program, agrees. According to Connelly:

"A van's center of gravity is higher and located toward its front axle. In an abrupt stop, the van's weight is thrown forward. The rear wheels tend to lock, causing the vehicle to skid. Passenger load distribution in both stops and turns on slick roads is important."

Both Connelly and Wilcox recommend the following National safety council winter driving tips for drivers of ridesharing vehicles:

(1) With all your passengers aboard, and before you get out in traffic, get the "feel" of the road by accelerating carefully to see if wheels spin; or brake gently to see if they skid. Reduce speed accordingly.

(2) "Pump" your brakes for controlled stops, don't jam them on.

(3) Increase following distances on ice or snow. It takes three to nine times as far to stop on snow or ice as on dry pavement.

(4) Keep your windshield and windows clear at all times.

(5) Equip your vehicle with good tires and the proper treads for the conditions under which you operate. Carry reinforced tire chains in your vehicle for use during severe snow and ice conditions. They provide four to seven times as much traction on snow or ice as regular tires.

"When you're a share-the-ride driver," Wilcox concluded, "your very best is vital — your passengers are depending on you!"

Do You Know How To Survive A Hotel Fire?

If you can curb your panic and have done some preliminary research on escape routes, your chances are greatly improved for surviving a hotel fire such as the one that claimed more than 80 lives in Las Vegas recently.

Frank Oberg, associate director of the University of Minnesota's fire information research and education center, says that gas, smoke and panic are more dangerous killers than flames themselves.

"When you check into any hotel room, immediately check your escape route," Oberg advises. "You should never use an elevator in a fire, so locate an exit sign leading to an enclosed stairwell as soon as you check into your room. Make a mental note on whether the exit is on your right or your left. Will you have to turn a corner? Will you need to go through one door or two to reach the stairs?"

As you return to your room, count the doors between the exit and your room. This information could be crucial if the hall fills with smoke. Note, too, how your windows open. Is there a balcony outside? Does the room face the street or an interior court?

Oberg says some cautious people refuse to stay in a hotel that doesn't have sprinklers and room smoke alarms. Smoke alarms are mandatory in Minnesota. He also says that most fire department ladders will not reach beyond the ninth floor, so some wary persons request rooms below that level.

If you do awaken to smell smoke or hear an alarm, take it seriously, Oberg advises. Begin emergency procedures immediately.

—Soak towels or sheets and hold them over your nose and mouth.

—Crawl to the door. The air five feet from the floor could already contain odorless carbon monoxide. Feel the door for heat. If the door or knob is hot, don't open it.

—If the hallway is passable, follow your escape route, closing the door behind you. Take your key in case you have to return to the room.

—If the stairs below are impassable, attempt to go to the roof instead.

—If both hallway and stairwell are impassable, return to your room and close the door. If the room is free of smoke, keep the window closed and try to alert outsiders to your predicament.

—Flip on the bathroom vent if smoke is coming in. Wet towels or sheets pressed against the door cracks will keep smoke out. Open or break a window only if the room becomes quite smokey. Smoke and gases may be even thicker outside.

—If the walls become hot, use an ice bucket to drench the door and walls.

Oberg stresses that if you are above the third floor, the chances of surviving or of escaping serious injury in a jump are small. He adds, "Panic causes people to jump. In a Brazil fire a few years ago, 40 people jumped from windows and all of them died. Ironically, 36 of the 40 jumped after the fire was out."

Healthy Holiday Fun Food

During the holidays when the whole family gets together for some fast-paced UNO play, serve these two new spicy fruit nut bars. Wholesome whole wheat flour, oatmeal and carrots add to their goodness and the cookies are fast and easy to stir together. Tasty, nutritious Apple Orange Punch, served hot or cold, makes this delectable combination just right for the entire group.

Apple Orange Punch

1½ quarts

- 1 quart (4 cups) apple juice
- 2 cups orange juice
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 lemon, sliced
- 6 cloves
- 1 stick cinnamon

Place all ingredients in saucepan. Bring to boil. Serve hot or chilled over ice.

Whole Wheat Carrot Bars

30 Bars

- 1 cup vegetable oil
- 1 cup cooked, mashed carrots
- 3/4 cup dark brown sugar, packed
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Beat together oil, carrots, sugar, egg, vanilla and orange peel. Stir in raisins and nuts. Stir together flour, salt, baking soda and nutmeg; add to carrot mixture and stir until just blended. Pour into greased 9x13-inch baking pan. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven 25 minutes. Cool completely. Serve dusted with confectioners sugar. Cut into 1½ x 2½-inch bars, approximately.

Fresh Orange Squares

Approx. 3 dozen

- 1 orange, unpeeled
- 3 eggs
- 1 box (1 lb.) dark brown sugar (about 2 1/3 cups sugar, packed)
- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 3/4 cup quick oatmeal (not instant)
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Slice unpeeled orange thinly. Chop finely; set aside. Beat eggs. Add sugar and beat until light in color and thickened. Stir in flour, oatmeal, nuts, vanilla and nutmeg. Add chopped orange. Spread in well greased 10½ x 15½ x 3/4 inch jelly roll pan. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven 25 minutes. Cool before cutting.

Deck The Halls...With Christmas Plates

Pine wreath makes a handsome frame for 1980 plate, "Christmas in the Woods."

Here's some cheerful holiday advice from Denmark to America's millions of plate collectors: take your precious Christmas plates out of the china cabinet and use them to create a sparkling holiday mood the way the Danes do.

The Danes are masters at using their famous blue porcelain Christmas plates for decorating. Perhaps it's because the world's first Christmas plate was created by a Dane.

In 1895, Harald Bing, President of Bing & Grondahl, introduced the blue porcelain Christmas plate called "Behind the Frozen Window," and started a holiday tradition that has become as familiar as the Christmas tree and Santa himself. More recently, his great-grandson, Ebbe Simonsen, the fifth generation of his family to head the company, offered some suggestions for using the handsome plates this Christmas—the way the Danes do:

1. Hang this year's Christmas plate in the center of a wreath, perhaps over the fireplace mantle or the dining room sideboard.

2. Use the plates as candle-reflectors. Place them on ordinary plate easels behind votive or other short candles for an especially warm and dramatic effect.

3. Set the holiday table with them. The 7" diameter of the porcelain plates makes them just right for an appetizer, salad or dessert plates. (They're also great for starting conversation, as everyone looks to see what year their neighbor has.) Underglaze porcelain is completely dishwasher safe.

4. Make a Christmas "tree" by cutting a sturdy piece of styrofoam into a triangle and covering it with Christmas plates hung on pegs. The size of your collection determines the size of the "tree."

This year, Bing & Grondhal's Christmas Plate is matched by a hand-decorated porcelain bell also called "Christmas in the Woods." The bell is the first edition of a new annual series. If you're short of plates, Mr. Simonsen suggests ringing in the holidays with Christmas bells.

Teleconference Courses To Be Given At NCC

Students at nine northern Minnesota locations will have the opportunity to enroll in three university-level courses this winter via a unique teaching method entitled teleconference.

Delivery system, which combines and techniques of telephone and radio, will be utilized in the instruction of curriculum development and modification for vocational special needs, guidance in the elementary school, and teaching students with behavior problems. All classes will be offered at Northland community college, B-37, and a number of other community colleges.

Sessions will be broadcast from Bemidji and transmitted to the sites simultaneously.

Descriptions of the winter quarter courses are as follows:

IE 457-557 Curriculum Development and Modification for Vocational Special Needs — three credits. The objectives, materials and methods of developing and modifying curriculum in the various vocational fields for students with special needs. Mondays, December 15, 1980 through February 23, 1981, 4-6:50 p.m. Tuition and materials for this class will be $42.10 for undergraduates and $52.30 for graduates. Dave Kingsbury, instructor.

ED 652 Guidance in the Elementary School — three credits. Guidance techniques adapted to the work of the elementary teacher and principal, including the social, personal, emotional, physical and intellectual growth and development of children. Wednesdays, December 3, 1980 through February 18, 1981, 4-6:50 p.m. Tuition and materials for the class will be $72.25 for graduates. John Halcrow, instructor.

ED 475-575 Teaching Students with Behavior Problems — three credits. A study of the major approaches in the field of the socially maladjusted and behavior disorders and their application in the public schools. Mondays, December 8, 1980 through February 23, 1981, 7-10 p.m. Tuition and materials for this class will be $62.30 for undergraduates and $72.50 for graduates. Johannas Asmussen, instructor.

Pre-registration is required for BSU's three teleconference classes. For details on exact locations, fees, etc., contact: Area Services, Sanford Hall, Bemidji State University, Bemidji, MN 56601.

Mn/DOT Looks At Reduced Chemical Use

Reduced chemical use on state highways could result from an experiment to be conducted in two Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) districts, according to Commissioner Richard P. Braun.

"The aim is to cut down on the amount of chemicals applied to the roadway when removing ice-glaze, while still providing a safe driving surface," he said.

A solution of liquid calcium chloride will be experimented with to remove ice from the road surface more quickly with less chemical. The liquid solution is sprayed over a truckload of sand and salt, thoroughly coating the sand throughout the load, Braun said.

Usual practice has been to mix calcium chloride pellets with sand. But when winds come and vehicles pass, sand, salt and pellets blow off the roadway. When the new method is used, more of the mixture sticks to the roadway to provide greater melting action because all of the material is a source of heating or melting action. With the old method, only the pure calcium chloride pellets and salt provide melting action.

The new method should reduce the need for recurrent chemical application. This will mean less chemicals on the roadway and roadside vegetation, he said.

The liquid calcium chloride method will be tried in Mn-DOT's Rochester and Virginia maintenance areas. Both experiment areas had tried the method last year with promising but inconclusive results due to the mild winter and infrequent severe snow conditions. By repeating the experiment this year, Mn-DOT engineers hope to have sufficient evidence to reach valid conclusions as to the merits of the liquid calcium chloride method.

"We will have to wait for test results to see if we can actually accomplish our goal of cutting down on chemical use on our roadways and still continue to provide a safe driving surface," he said.

Salt usage on Minnesota's state highways is already on the decline. Mn-DOT has been training its maintenance crews to calibrate and use equipment that spreads the salt at a known rate, reducing the possibility of dumping excessive salt where it is not needed.

Mn-DOT engineers are in a bind, Braun said. They want to replace rock salt because it corrodes automobiles, damages bridge decks and concrete pavements and harms roadside vegetation. But, he said, ample evidence shows that not using salt increases the potential for accidents and greatly inhibits the mobility of travelers.

Mn-DOT maintenance crews conducted a study in the winter of 1978-79 to determine the minimum amount of salt that is needed to remove the ice and snow from the highways. The results were inconclusive, however, Braun said, because some of the test sections iced over and parts of the test had to be cancelled for safety reasons.

Most attempts to replace salt have been disappointing. A study done in Illinois last winter found that using plain sand did not reduce the need for salt. And alternate chemicals such as urea, ethylene glycol and propylene glycol have proven to be less effective than salt and are much more expensive. Other chemicals which have been proposed are either not commercially available or also have adverse side effects, the study found.

Other studies indicate that mechanical methods such as power brooms, low-slung underbody snowplows and rubber plow-blades can be effective, but they have limited usage.

Deadline Set For Air Force Scholarships

High school seniors who are interested in beginning their college careers with air force reserve officers' training corps four-year college scholarships should apply this fall, according to Co. Hugh D. McCracken Jr., air force ROTC registrar.

Applications for four-year scholarships starting in the 1981-82 academic year must be submitted to air force ROTC headquarters at Maxwell air force base, Ala., by Jan. 15, 1981.

About 1,560 college freshmen will start their college classes tuition-free this fall as members of air force ROTC. A four-year scholarship provides for payment of full tuition, books and most fees, plus a $100 monthly stipend during the academic year.

According to Colonel McCracken, students interested in air force ROTC scholarships should contact their high school guidance counselors or the professor of aerospace studies at a local college or university hosting air force ROTC, or they can write to the Office of Public Affairs, Air Force ROTC, Maxwell AFB, Ala., 36112.

There is a wide spectrum of academic degrees for which air force ROTC scholarships can be awarded, said Colonel McCracken, but 90 per cent of the recent scholarship winners are planning to pursue engineering, scientific or technical careers.

Students competing for air force ROTC scholarships are required to take either the scholastic aptitude test (SAT) or the American college test (ACT) as part of the application process. When taking the tests this fall, students should request that their scores be sent directly to the four-year scholarship branch, office of the registrar, air force ROTC, Maxwell AFB, Ala., 36112.

Minimum SAT scores required for a scholarship application are 500 in mathematics and a composite score, mathematics and verbal together, of 1000. For the ACT, the minimum score in mathematics is 19 and the composite score is 22.

Along with aptitude test scores, other factors such as high school academic records and extracurricular activities are considered by a board of senior air force ROTC officers who choose the scholarship designees from the applicants.

Even without a four-year scholarship, a student can gain much by electing air force ROTC as part of an academic plan. Air force ROTC also offers scholarships in increments of three and one-half, three, two and one-half, and two years. To be eligible for these scholarships, students must be members of the air force ROTC program, according to Colonel McCracken. College freshmen can register for the four-year program the same way as they do for any other college class.

Genetics Make 80's Age Of Biologists

by George E. Jordan
'U' M News Service

The journey into the world of genetic engineering — the altering of heredity by transplanting genes from one organism to another — has turned the second half of the 20th century into the age of the biologist.

Test-tube babies, the development of oil-eating bacteria and methods of screening for genetic defects, talk of human cloning and "plant people," and the actual creation of organisms in the laboratory are products of a new technology that promises startling breakthroughs in the future.

Experiments with basic recombinant DNA technology, or gene splicing, are being conducted in laboratories across the nation. Scientists' dreams of curing hereditary diseases through "gene therapy" and development of better biochemical products are on the verge of becoming a reality.

"Restrictions with regard to the future of recombinant DNA are limited only by the human imagination," said Anthony Faras, a professor of microbiology engaged in recombinant DNA cancer research at the University of Minnesota.

"Any gene of interest, whether for scientific or industrial reasons, can be isolated, characterized and its gene products reproduced by recombinant DNA technology," Faras said.

Although the science of genetic manipulation is in its infancy, it has already raised a multitude of issues that society must face, issues that will force mankind to rephrase questions about the meaning of its existence.

Suppose that scientists could alter the properties of any living thing. Imagine a society rid of illnesses like Huntington's chorea, albinism, sickle cell anemia and cancer. In a sense, science and technology might be in a position to control the genetic destiny of mankind.

But is it wise to attempt control over destiny? Do the benefits of curing hereditary diseases outweigh the risks of encountering some unknown evil?

"I don't think man will ever be wise enough to know what to breed for to protect the survival of mankind," said Irwin Rubenstein, a University of Minnesota professor of genetics and cell biology who is engaged in recombinant DNA research with agricultural plants, such as corn.

Moreover, assuming science cannot overcome social and economic realities, who will benefit from or be able to afford the new cures? "To divorce the discovery of recombinant DNA from the society surrounding that discovery is foolish," says Val Woodward, university professor of genetics and cell biology.

Advocates of genetic manipulation say public clamor over recombinant DNA experiments overlooks the enormous potential for good. Genetic engineering companies, such as Genetech in California, they argue, have developed such products as human insulin (a blessing for diabetics), human growth hormones, and interferon, a type of natural virus fighter.

Before the turn of the century scientists hope to develop bacteria that will turn pollutants into fuel and enrich foodstuffs. And it is likely genetic engineers will find vaccines effective against some forms of cancer.

While moral and ethical arguments on both sides of the genetic engineering controversy can leave the average person confused, the actual process of gene splicing is simple to understand.

The term "recombinant" refers to the splitting and recombining of genes, the substances that govern the machinery of the living cell. DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, is the agent that carries information of heredity in discrete units called genes.

Genes are microscopic, but play an enormous role in determining how every cell in every living thing develops and matures, from the frog in the mud puddle to the next Albert Einstein. The human chromosome, composed of thousands of genes, carries the "information" that directs the body's physiology from the womb to death.

Human beings have roughly 50,000 active genes, and each is programmed to perform a different function. So far scientists in the United States and abroad have identified the functions of only several dozen genes.

Genes are strung together into threadlike bodies called chromosomes. Think of a chromosome as a string of genes similar to a necklace of pearls.

In the 1970s, researchers developed "restrictive enzymes" that could dismantle chromosomes neatly into individual genes. In effect, restrictive enzymes act like scissors, cutting the string of pearls, and breaking a chromosome into individual genes that can be isolated and studied.

Once a chromosome is chopped into its individual genes, scientists can introduce these genes into a bacteria host where the genes turn out countless copies of themselves. The copies, called clones because they are identical in every respect to the original gene, can be tested for their specific functions.

Developed in the last several years, the technique has already revolutionized the field of medicine. In theory, the technique allows scientists to alter organisms to manufacture agents, such as proteins, they do not normally produce in nature.

Moreover, in theory, the technique could allow scientists to accomplish the genetic blend of two altogether different creatures incapable of mating by inserting the genes from one into the chromosomes of the other.

Scientists nationwide now hope to determine the role genes play in the development of some cancers. If certain "bad" genes are identified, recombinant DNA technology could be used to replace a defective gene with a normal one. Scientists say the day when such "gene therapy" is performed in the nation's hospitals is not far off.

SWEET POTATO BREAD

With such a variety of breads available at today's supermarket, there's no need for monotony at any meal. But if you want to impress the family or guests with something distinctively your own, the accompanying recipe for Sweet Potato Bread is a good candidate. It looks and tastes different, with a hint of sweet potato flavor that goes well with ham, turkey or pork. Toasted sesame seeds add a slight crunchiness and a fragrance that is apparent after toasting. This is a substantial bread, a very economical way to add important nutrients at relatively low cost.

SWEET POTATO BREAD

Makes 2 loaves

- 7-7-1/2 cups unsifted white flour
- 1-1/2 cups unsifted whole wheat flour
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1-1/2 teaspoons salt
- 2 packages Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast
- 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast
- 2 cups very warm water (120°F.-130°F.)
- 1-1/2 cups mashed cooked sweet potatoes
- 1/4 cup toasted sesame seed
- 1 egg white
- 1 tablespoon water

Combine 5-1/2 cups white flour and whole wheat flour.

In a large bowl thoroughly mix 2-1/3 cups flour mixture, sugar, salt and Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast. Add Fleischmann's Margarine. Gradually add very warm water to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add sweet potatoes and 1/2 cup flour mixture; beat at high speed 2 minutes scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in remaining flour mixture and enough additional white flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in a greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch down dough; turn out on lightly floured board and knead in 3 tablespoons toasted sesame seed. Divide dough in half. Roll each half into a 14 x 9-inch rectangle. Shape into loaves. Place in 2 greased 9 x 5 x 3-inch loaf pans. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Mix egg white and 1 tablespoon water and brush over tops of loaves. Sprinkle with remaining toasted sesame seed. Bake at 375°F. for 35 to 40 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and place on wire racks to cool.

Dates Set For Fuel Assistance Applications

Applications for fuel assistance will be taken at the following places during December:

December 8, 15 — Nazareth church in Holt from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; December 9, 16 — Gatzke senior citizen center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; December 10, 17 — Grygla community center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; December 11, 18 — Strandquist senior citizen center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and December 12, 19 — Middle River community center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Applicants must bring proof of income to be attached to their applications, paid medical bills for the last 12 months, paid fuel bills from October 15, 1980 to date of application and any other unpaid fuel bills.

For further information, contact Karen Skadsem, Northwest community action outreach aide at 218-222-3309.

Program Helps Pregnant Teens In All Areas

by Alice Tibbetts
'U' M News Service

About 7,000 girls between the ages of 12 and 19 get pregnant each year in Minnesota, and the physical, social and emotional needs of a pregnant teenager are very different from those of an adult.

The Optimum Plus program, which began in 1978, is sponsored by the Childbearing-Childrearing center, an outreach program of the University of Minnesota hospitals. According to program directors Sandy Lindell and Mary Meyer, it is the only program in the metropolitan area that provides for all the needs of a pregnant teenager, including education, health care and emotional support. Program offers educational and medical services on a sliding fee scale.

"Teenagers are forced to grow up and take responsibility for something they are usually not mature enough to handle," Lindell said. The program teaches the girls very basic things, such as how to shop for groceries, how to budget and how to enjoy their babies. "We also try to teach them how to establish priorities on such things as good nutrition," Meyer said. "The teenager is still growing and developing herself and having a growing fetus to take care of makes good nutrition essential."

In addition to medical care and education, the program offers emotional support through group meetings and individual counseling. "A lack of social acceptance from the girl's family and friends can make a pregnancy very difficult," Lindell said, "so we try to involve the people closest to the girl in all phases of the program." Most of the older girls — those between 17 and 20 — go through the counseling, classes and delivery with their boyfriends, Lindell said. Younger girls usually bring their mothers along.

"Rate of teenage pregnancy is expected to decline because of better education in the use of birth control and the increasing use of abortions," Meyer said, "but this doesn't mean sexual activity is decreasing. The problem of teenage pregnancies will probably always be with us.

"It is very difficult for girls to resist the pressure for sexual activity both from their peers and from society," Meyer said. "Even with better education, the use of birth control is low and much misinformation still exists."

"Girls are still hesitant to use birth control because it is evidence of sexual activity," Lindell said. "Some girls will not accept birth control information even after they deliver a child. They claim they will no longer be sexually active."

Contrary to popular belief, teenagers make pretty good mothers, Meyer added. Number of girls who keep their babies has dropped drastically. Two or three years ago, 95 per cent of teenage mothers kept their babies. Today, most give them up for adoption, Meyer said.

Zion Cub Pack Has Meet On Indian Lore

Zion Lutheran church Cub scout pack 59 met Monday evening in the church basement with Cubmaster Jim Giles presiding. Theme for the event was Indian lore.

Boys were dressed in costume and all participated in an Indian dance. Each den described the projects they worked on during the month of November.

Following awards were presented: Den one — Shane Degreece, Troy Cameron and Mike Jorde, bobcat badge;

Den two — Jay Bergland, one red bead under the bear;

Den six — Brian Sandahl, two silver arrows under the wolf; Jeremy Sisler, one yellow bead under the wolf; and Spencer Manke, one red bead under the bear;

Webelos den one — Lance Bugge, Andy Melby and Erik Okland, citizenship; and Eric Groslie, aquanaut;

Webelos Den two — Darin Robson, aquanaut; and Chad Thorstenson, engineer.

Monday, December 15, boys are asked to meet at the Riverview Terrace highrise apartments for caroling. Parents are asked to meet the boys at the church after caroling for hot chocolate. Pinewood derby kits will be distributed at that time.

Republic To Introduce Two Discount Fares

Republic Airlines (December 1) will introduce two discount fares to encourage individual and family travel on Republic's domestic routes.

The "Saturday Special" offers a 40 per cent fare discount, provided travel originates on a Saturday, and the return trip takes place the following Monday or Tuesday, or any Saturday within 30 days.

"Family Plan" applies when one adult pays full coach or (reduced) night coach fare; the rest of the family rides for 50 per cent of that fare. The fare is available for one-way or round-trip travel, and may be used any day of the week.

Neither plan requires advance ticketing or advance reservation. (The Saturday special is not available to or from Denver.)

Republic (effective December 15) will offer a 35 per cent discounted "Super Saver" fare for night travel or travel on flights exceeding 1,500 miles. A 25 per cent discount will be available for day travel on flights less than 1,500 miles. The airline requires seven day advance purchase and reservation for "Super Saver" excursion-fare travel. There are minimum and maximum length-of-stay requirements.

The airline will continue to offer other, local discount fares in select markets within its 200-city system.

Wind Erosion Getting To Be Area Problem

"More farmers throughout our area are recognizing that we have a wind erosion problem. This is particularly true where we have the lighter soils and there are long distances that have been cleared," states Ralph Rundell, soil conservation technician with the Marshall-Beltrami SWCD at Grygla.

"The drop in livestock numbers also has a definite effect on wind erosion because there are many fewer acres of pastures or hayland. When areas have intermingled cropland, hayland and other uses, the wind does not get any long sweeps to gather and move soil.

"In our area, we have seen many acres cleared and converted to crop production. Some of these acres should probably be better used for grass seed production, hayland or other uses that do not leave this soil unprotected over winter," Rundell said. "If these fields are to be used for crop production, they should be treated accordingly. The crop residue should be used to protect the soil over winter. There should be 25 per cent ground cover after planting the next year's crop. If you cannot keep the residue on the surface, then consider planting field windbreaks to protect the soil.

"Another way to protect the soil from erosion," Rundell said, "is to do the last cultivation northeast to southwest to be across the wind direction. Leaving the soil surface in a ridged condition at right angles with the prevailing winds can reduce the soil movement by wind. I saw many fields this fall that were tilled the last time in a northwest to southeast direction, and on the sandy loam soils there has already been a lot of wind erosion.

"If you have sandy soils or light textured loam soils, stop in and talk about what you can do to reduce soil erosion. In the Red River valley last spring there was an 80-acre field that eroded enough to fill the road ditch with soil. The soil that blew off and stopped in the ditch contained enough plant nutrients to provide every acre of the 80 with 82 pounds per acre of phosphate and over 600 pounds per acre of potash. This is like throwing money away!"

Arsenic Poison Disposal Is State Problem

Problem of what to do with leftover arsenic poison used to combat depression-era grasshopper plagues in Minnesota is being addressed by a joint Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) and Minnesota department of agriculture task force, the two agencies have announced.

Arsenic-laced grasshopper bait and uncut arsenic compounds have turned up at over 45 locations in the state during the past few months. If not properly stored, the material could pose a health danger to people or livestock, although state officials stressed that there is no immediate danger so far and no cause for panic.

"Arsenic is a poison and is considered hazardous," said Marvin Hora, MPCA, "but none of the cases reported so far show an imminent health threat. We are concerned, though, about potential groundwater pollution from the buried arsenic."

The arsenic was distributed free to farmers throughout the state by the U.S. department of agriculture to fight serious grasshopper infestations during the 1930s and early '40s. As the plagues subsided and new insecticides were developed, farmers either buried the leftover arsenic mix or gradually forgot about it, state officials said.

In 1972, employees at a Perham firm were poisoned after drinking water from a new well drilled through an arsenic cache buried some 40 years earlier. Two men still suffer nervous disorders from the incident.

The Perham case appeared to be an isolated episode until last April, when 12 head of cattle on a Two Harbors farm died after eating from an innocent-looking sawdust pile, which turned out to be the grasshopper poison. That incident jogged the memories of persons around the state who recalled seeing or using the poison, and new reports came in.

MPCA officials estimate that six to eight tons of arsenic compounds may be located at the sites reported so far, in both the uncut arsenic form and the sawdust-molasses-arsenic bait mixture. Reports have come from Aitken, Anoka, Carlton, Lake, Norman, Olmsted, Otter Tail, Pine, Polk, Ramsey, St. Louis, Stevens and Wadena counties, in quantities ranging from one pound to 2,000 pounds.

About one-third of the material is stored aboveground in rotting burlap bags or wooden barrels, and the rest is buried. The buried arsenic is the most potentially troublesome because it is harder to find and excavate, and its chances of getting into the ground water are greater, state officials said.

The arsenic task force was formed to determine the scope of the problem and to recommend possible solutions. The group will examine safety, collection, transportation and cost factors. Whatever is decided, it probably will be expensive, Hora said.

"We expect this problem to be with us for a while," he said, "and that more sites will be reported."

The task force will recommend a course of action to agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin and MPCA director Terry Hoffman by September 1.

In the meantime, Hora said, citizens who know of any arsenic storage sites should isolate the material from possible human or animal disturbance, put it in a secure container, and notify the MPCA central office (612-296-7396). Persons also can notify the MPCA or agriculture department regional offices around the state.

465 U Students Get Refunds For 'Daily' Fee

About 1 per cent of the students enrolled at the Twin Cities campus of the University of Minnesota requested refunds of their Minnesota Daily fees in the first half of a two-week refund period.

The newspaper's $2 portion of the $68.40 quarterly student services fee was changed from mandatory to refundable for the 1980-81 academic year after a vote by the Board of Regents last May. So far this year, 465 students have asked for refunds. The fee represents about 14 per cent of the Daily's revenue.

The Daily has been the center of controversy since it published a humor issue in June 1979, that some criticized as obscene, antireligious and racist. There were two legislative inquiries into the Daily fee and a bill was introduced that, if passed, would have severed the Daily's financial ties to the University. The regents' action came after faculty and student government groups voted to support the mandatory fee.

Daily editor-in-chief Jeff Goldberg and former editor Kate Stanley are suing the Board of Regents, claiming its action violated First Amendment guarantees of press freedoms, the 14th Amendment due process guarantees and Minnesota's press freedom laws.

Two students gave money back to the Daily last week. One student gave a $4 check to the Bursar's office to cover the refunds of two of the leaders of last spring's drive to make the Daily refundable. Another student handed a Daily editor a $2 bill, saying he felt guilty about getting a refund.

The refund process, which ends for this quarter October 11, will cost the University more than $5,000 this year. Another $5,000 will be spent printing official notices that contain information for which students are responsible. The notices had appeared only in the Daily.

133 Units Of Blood Donated At AVTI, NCC

Staff of United Blood services of the Upper Midwest, on behalf of the many patients who will benefit, has expressed appreciation to the people who participated in the area vocational-technical institute and Northland community college recent blood drives.

The AVTI had 76 people signed up to donate and 72 were able to give, including 58 for their first time. Northland had 66 people volunteer to donate and 61 pints of blood were drawn. Forty-seven of the volunteers were first-time donors.

At the vocational-technical institute Kay Anderson and the student senate sponsored and organized the drive and Dr. Orley Gunderson and Dr. Bill Corliss assisted in providing space to hold the drive.

Sponsors of the Northland community college blood drive were Julie Easton and the student association which she chairs. Ken Wiebolt arranged for space to hold the drive.

Blood donations will help to meet the needs of many area patients in the 46 hospitals served by United Blood services. "Without the support of sponsors like Thief River Falls area vocational technical institute and Northland community college, our job of providing this precious fluid would be next to impossible," stated Daryl Stensgaard of United.

Art And Craft Show And Sale Set At Roseau

"An Old-Fashioned Holiday", a traditional crafts demonstration and sale, will be held Saturday from 12 noon to 8 p.m. at the Roseau County Museum in Roseau.

Stained glass, woodworking with a foot operated lathe, spinning, pottery, tole painting, basket weaving, rosemaling, blacksmithing, quilting, wheat weaving, watercolor painting, caligraphy and china painting are some of the works to be demonstrated. Artists will be present from throughout northwestern Minnesota.

A free blood pressure clinic will be conducted December 9 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Grygla civic center. Clinic is sponsored by the Marshall-Kittson county nursing service.

Viola L. Rud, nursing director, stated that Marshall county has a death rate from heart disease and stroke which is higher than the state wide average. Many people with hypertension are unaware they have it. "By finding these people and getting them under treatment we can save lives," she said.

Offer Drivers Tips To Prevent Hwy. Hypnosis

Falling asleep at the wheel can happen to even the well-rested driver because of a phenomenon known as "highway hypnosis," says the Automotive Information council (AIC).

Highway hypnosis usually is caused by a combination of monotonous scenery and driver boredom. Common culprits include flat stretches of road, the humming of tires on the pavement, the drone of the engine and the flow of the wind. Sun glare, a warm car interior and a too-full stomach can easily make any driver drowsy and less alert.

This type of fatigue is dangerous because it can affect judgment and the ability to make quick decisions. As a consequence, the driver may ignore or fail to recognize emergency situations, such as the distance needed to stop safely.

There are a few precautions drivers can take to prevent or fend-off an attack of highway hypnosis.

Make sure the car is properly ventilated. Open a window or set air conditioning controls to keep a comfortably cool interior.

In sunny weather, sunglasses should be worn because glare from the sun can cause drowsiness.

On monotonous stretches of road, drivers should occasionally move their eyes, scanning the road ahead and to the sides. They should also make frequent checks of both the side view and rear view mirrors.

Chewing gum, eating candy or drinking a cup of coffee may help keep the driver alert, but drivers should avoid heavy meals and alcoholic beverages.

Stopping periodically on long trips can offset fatigue. A stop of a few minutes every two hours, along with regular stops for food and fuel, will help keep drivers alert and get them safely to their destination, says AIC.

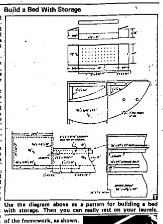
Build a Bed With Storage



Use the diagram above as a pattern for building a bed with storage. Then you can really rest on your laurels.

Have you ever noticed how many things can accumulate under a bed? And have you ever wondered how to put an end to this clutter and get organized at the same time?

Here's how: build a platform bed, complete with storage. It's easy to build, nice to look at . . . and puts the wasted space in your home to work.

First of all, here are the materials you'll need: two panels 3/4" x 4' x 8' interior grade plywood (good one side); one panel 1/4" x 3' x 3' plywood (good one side); three 2" x 4" x 6' lumber; two 2" x 2" x 6' lumber; one 5/8" x 3' x 6' particleboard; three 2" x 2" x 6' lumber; two 2" x 2" x 10' lumber; two 3/4" x 37-1/2" piano hinges with screws; eight 1/4" x 3-1/2" carriage bolts with nuts; thirty-six #12 flathead wood screws; glue, wood filler, 8d finishing nails, fine sandpaper and clear sealer or interior semi-gloss enamel paint.

Before beginning, check the measure of the mattress to be used and adjust length and width dimensions to fit.

Start by constructing your pre-cut 2" x 4" and 2" x 2" base, notching the larger 2" x 4" to assure a tight fit with the 2" x 2" supports. Then, construct the end panels, drilling where necessary as shown in the diagram.

Once the end panels are in place, attach the remainder of the framework, as shown. Glue and screw ledgers in place.

Next, cut and attach the storage doors, finally laying the mattress platform in place. Sand, fill where necessary, then paint or stain to finish.

Now, take a break and try it out.

For more easy home project ideas and plans, send $1 to "Woodworks" Dept. NAPS, Georgia-Pacific Corp., 900 S.W. Fifth Ave., Portland, Ore 97204.

Here's the finished product: a platform bed, complete with storage space.

Income Forms For VA Use Are Due January 1

More than 15,000 Minnesotans were to receive Veterans administration annual income questionnaires the first part of November and VA officials emphasized the importance of returning the completed form before the first of the new year.

Morris Nooner Jr., director of the VA regional office and insurance center at Fort Snelling, said it was important to complete the questionnaire "promptly and accurately to prevent possible benefit overpayment or payment delay and to ensure that all benefits due are received."

He said benefits would stop January 1, 1981, for those who do not complete the questionnaire which was simplified this year.

Most beneficiaries receiving VA pension or parent dependency and indemnity compensation (DIC) benefits are required to complete a questionnaire. However, certain pensioners over age 72 will not receive one, but should still report any changes in income, (other than the 14.3 per cent Social Security cost-of-living increase), dependency status or net worth which occurred during 1980.

He advised that if the questionnaire was lost, damaged or destroyed, an appropriate substitute form can be obtained from the VA regional office or local county Veterans service office. Completed questionnaire should be returned to the Philadelphia address on the return envelope before the deadline to prevent discontinuance of benefits. However, substitute forms should be returned to the regional office where the beneficiary's file is located.

Clara LeBlanc Dies Thursday At Fertile

Mrs. Philip (Clara Elizabeth) LeBlanc, 75, of Fertile and formerly of the Red Lake Falls area, died unexpectedly on Thursday at her home in Fertile.

Mass of the Resurrection for Mrs. Philip LeBlanc was offered Saturday at 1:00 p.m., at St. Joseph's Catholic church in Fertile with Rev. Gerald Noesen as celebrant. Liturgical reader was Mark LeBlanc. Special music was provided by Dirk Nohre, John LeBlanc and Pam Brunell. Interment was in St. Joseph's Catholic cemetery at Brooks with the Petterson Funeral home, Red Lake Falls, in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Greg, Philip, Mike, Joe and Allen LeBlanc, Bruce and Randy Pfeffer and Robert Mayer.

Mrs. LeBlanc, the former Clara Elizabeth Huot, was born Sept. 27, 1905 in Red Lake County to Regis and Amiee Boutain Huot. She attended school in Red Lake Falls, graduating from Lafayette high school in 1923. Following a course in nurses training, she worked at Gillette hospital in St. Paul.

In 1925, she was married in Red Lake Falls to Philip LeBlanc. The couple lived in Wisconsin for a short time before moving to a farm near Erskine. In 1960, they moved to St. Paul where she was employed by the E. M. Lohman Liturgical supply company. Since 1971, she had lived in Fertile. She was active in the Fertile Senior Citizens club and had served as secretary of the organization.

Surviving are eight sons: Loren, Darrel and George of Minneapolis; Ralph of Fertile; Larry and Stephen of St. Paul; Vernon of Fargo, N.D., and James of Canon City, Colo.; a daughter, Mrs. Paul (Janet) Struve of Minneapolis; 45 grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Helen Draeger of Red Lake Falls.

She was preceded in death by her husband, who died in 1972; two daughters, two brothers and three grandchildren.

Ida Julin, 90, Of Newfolden Dies Saturday

Ida Julin, 90, of Newfolden, died Saturday evening at the Riverview hospital in Crookston.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ida Julin will be held Wednesday at 2:00 p.m., at the Westaker Lutheran church in Newfolden with Rev. Merle Knutson officiating. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

The body will repose at the Green Funeral home, beginning Tuesday noon, and at the church for one hour prior to the time of services.

A complete obituary will be published in Wednesday's edition of the Times.

Chester Hagen Dies Sunday; Rites Pending

Chester Hagen, a resident of Crestview Nursing home, Thief River Falls, died Sunday at the Home.

Funeral services for Chester Hagen are pending. The Green Funeral home is in charge of arrangements.

A complete obituary will be published in a later edition of the Times.

Minnie Grover Dies Tuesday At Crookston

Mrs. John (Minnie May) Grover, 89, of rural Mentor died at Riverview hospital, Crookston on Tuesday, November 25.

Funeral services were held Friday, November 28 in the Petterson Funeral chapel, Red Lake Falls. Officiant was Rev. Roger Raebel, organist Karen Moser and soloist Mrs. Donald Vatthauer. Interment was in Rose Hill cemetery, Mentor.

Maurice Anderson, Earl Abbott, Art Desrosier, Louis Desrosier, George Abbott and Russell Olson served as casketbearers. Petterson Funeral home, Red Lake Falls, handled the arrangements.

Minnie May Booze was born Dec. 13, 1960 in McPhearson County, NB to Andrew and Elizabeth Booze. She married John "Will" Grover on June 13, 1909 at Mullen, NB. They farmed near Tryon, NB until moving to the Mentor area in 1923. After residing in Minneapolis for five years they returned to Mentor. John Grover died in 1964 and Minnie lived in Mentor for the remainder of her life, spending the last two years with her daughter, Mabel Peters.

Survivors include five daughters, Mrs. Elmer (Mabel) Peters of Mentor, Mrs. Carl (Vergie) Wahl of Denver CO; Mrs. Billie Turner of Minneapolis, Mrs. Leo (Crystal) Desrosier of Silver Bay and Mrs. Richard (Frexa) Stanley of Spokane, WA; one brother, William Booze of Grants Pass, OR; one sister, Mrs. Maude Wade of Mitchell, NB; 14 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her parents, husband, one son, two brothers and four sisters.

Services Held In Baudette For Wilma Miethke

A former resident of Thief River Falls, Wilma May Miethke, 77, died Sunday at the Baudette Pioneer Home.

Funeral services were held Wednesday, November 26 at the First Lutheran church, Baudette. Rev. John Martinson and intern pastor Gary Goodson officiated. Interment was in Elm Park cemetery, Baudette. Helgeson Funeral chapel was in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Terry Ebeltoft, Don Barron, Jack Barron, Wayne Ebeltoft, Kenton Ebeltoft and Darby Barron.

Wilma Ebeltoft was born May 15, 1903 at Lake Park to Anton and Hannah Ebeltoft. While still a child she moved to Glyndon and grew to womanhood in that area. She also lived in Thief River Falls and Las Vegas, NV prior to her move to Baudette in 1978. In October of 1944 she was united in marriage to George Miethke at Baudette.

Survivors include one sister, Mrs. Harry "Maxine" Sanders, Albuquerque, NM, and six brothers, Clifford and Stanley, Las Vegas, NV; Norman and Morton, Baudette; Fritz, Rimrock, AZ; and Bud (Ralph), Weyanwega, WI.

Her parents, husband and one son preceded her in death.

Torger Dalager, Greenbush, Dies At 73

Torger Isak Dalager, 73, died at Fargo, N.D. Sunday, November 23, after a three-year illness.

Funeral services for Torger Dalager were held on Wednesday, November 26 at the Bethlehem Lutheran church near Greenbush with Rev. Raynard Huglen officiating. Mrs. Keith Kapphahn sang "Beyond the Sunset", and "Precious Lord", with Mrs. Rhett Haugen accompanying her at the piano. The congregation sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and "The Old Rugged Cross."

Casketbearers were Norman Svegdahl, Ernest Hamp, Merlyn Almo, Leslie Almo, Kenneth Langaas and Marlo Gustafson. Interment was in the Bethlehem church cemetery with the Collins Funeral home of Greenbush in charge of arrangements.

The son of the late Christopher and Emma Danager, Torger was born on July 9, 1907 at Leland, IA. In early childhood he moved with his family to a farm near Lake Park and later to Erhard and Pelican Rapids where he attended school and grew to manhood. Dalager was baptized and confirmed into the Lutheran faith.

In 1930 he moved to Greenbush and on Oct. 22, 1932, he married Selma Alme there. The couple lived and farmed in Lind township, Roseau county, near Greenbush. Dalager was an active member of the Bethlehem Lutheran church for many years, serving as president of the church board. He was also a Lind town board member. After Mrs. Dalager's death in 1960, he continued to make his home on the farm during the summer, traveling extensively during the winter. Dalager had been a resident of a Fargo, N.D. nursing home since July.

Dalager is survived by one son, Arlan of Greenbush; five daughters, Mrs. Ole (Eunice) Everson of Petaluma, CA, Mrs. Eugene (Ione) Jacoby and Mrs. Ted (Shirley Nella of Fresno, CA; Mrs. Warren (Verjean) Sundean of Ethridge, TN and Mrs. David (LaVonne) Rogers of San Jose, CA; two brothers, Alvin Dalager of Pelican Rapids and Clarence of Alamo, TX; one sister, Mrs. Cora Newell of Columbus, OH; 16 grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his wife, parents, two sons in infancy and two sisters.

Dear friends,

In the belief that death is a passing to a higher, spiritual state of life, we feel the public prefers a spacious, airy quality in a funeral home; the setting for this 'graduation' ritual. We have tried to provide such heartening facilities at Belmont Funeral Home.

Respectfully,

Belmont Funeral Home

Cub Pack 199 Meeting Held Monday Night

Cub Scout Pack 199 of St. John Lutheran church held its November meeting Monday night, November 24. Opening flag ceremony and pledge of allegiance were led by the host, den 1.

Prior to the meeting, all the dens participated in a "magazine scavenger hunt".

Dens number 1, 3 and 5 each presented skits based on the theme for this month, which was Indian Lore and Living and Sharing.

A special award ceremony was held for the Webelos. Boys receiving their citizenship and Webelos badges were: Carl Bruzak, Jared Garner, Keith Olson, Matthew Simons, David Swenson, Darrin Weigel, Ricky Nelson, Mark Olson, Terry Peterson, Jimmy Sletten, Eric Stromberg, Scooter Wilson, Scott Wold, Lynn Baker, Bradley Hanson, David Hanson, Matthew Holte and James Poole. Those receiving aquanaut badges were Jared Garner, Keith Olson, Darrin Weigel, Bradley Hanson and Scott Vedbraaten. Carl Bruzek, Scott Wold, Bradley Hanson, David Hanson and James Poole received sportsman badges. Bradley Hanson received an outdoors badge and one scholarship badge was received by Scott Vedbraaten.

All the dens participated in making card holders which will be distributed to the nursing homes.

Boys in den 1 receiving their second red bead were: Chad Harris, Brad Jorstad, Eric Thompson, Jon Vacura, Aaron Wedul and Scott Skogerboe. Mike Fisher and Craig Lia received their third red bead. Eric Thompson and Mick Fisher served as denner and assistant denner for the month.

Receiving their progress toward ranks patch and one yellow bead in den 2 were Gregory Gengler, Paul Sjurseth and Greg Smidt. Tommy Brouse received his progress toward ranks patch and two yellow beads. Milan Chepko received his third yellow bead. Denner and assistant denner were Milan Chepko and Tommy Brouse.

Den 3 had Jeff Geske and James Troy as denner and assistant denner.

Receiving awards in den 4 were Karl Heinrichs and Matthew Dupree with one yellow bead; Troy Lerner and Darrin Bakke with two yellow beads; and Danny Prekker and Trevor Swanson with three yellow beads. Darrin Bakke and Karl Heinrichs served as denner and assistant denner.

Aaron Bruzak, den 5, received his second red bead. Denner and assistant denner were Aaron Bruzak and Jeremy Grandstrand.

Gary Engstrom and Bobby Olson, den 6, received one yellow bead. Denner and assistant denner were Jeff Brouse and Travis Janson.

There will not be a pack meeting in December. The next pack meeting will be held January 26 with den 3 as the host. A rain gutter regatta will be held, using boats the boys will be working on over the holiday vacation.

Planetarium Show At MSU December 3-30

"The Star of Christmas," a planetarium show that explores the clear winter night sky and peers into the mysteries of the heralded Christmas star, is scheduled December 3-30 at Moorhead state university.

Show will be replayed 42 times during the month, 14 during the week of Christmas. For a weekly schedule, contact the planetarium at 236-3982.

Holiday program examines the celestial events of the first Christmas by retelling the Christmas story and looking at some of the theories propounded by astronomy, religion and legend. Slides of Fargo-Moorhead at Christmas, contributed by the F-M camera club, are included in the show along with historical pictures of the region in winter from the Clay county historical society.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children under 12 and senior citizens.

Showtimes are:

December 3, 4, 5, and 6 at 7:30 p.m., December 7, 3 p.m., December 10, 11, 7:30 p.m.; December 12, 13, 7:30, 8:45 p.m.; December 14, 3 and 7:30 p.m.; December 17, 18, 7:30 p.m.; December 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 3 p.m., and 7:30 and 8:45 p.m.; December 24, 3 p.m.; December 25, no shows; December 26, 3 p.m., and 7:30 and 8:45 p.m.; December 27, 7:30 and 8:45 p.m.; December 28, 29, 30, 3 and 7:30 p.m.

HUD Publishes Home Buyer's Guidebook

Department of housing and urban development (HUD) has published a comprehensive but practical guide to buying and maintaining a home.

Entitled the "Homebuyer's Information Package — A Guidebook for Buying and Owning a Home", the 97-page publication was prepared by the HUD office of policy development and research.

"The processes of purchasing and operating a home have become costly and often complex," said Donna Shalala, assistant secretary for policy development and research. "At a time of high interest rates and rising operating expenses, it is important that the prospective homebuyer have the best possible information available on how to buy wisely and how to make sound decisions in maintaining the home."

The information package, a loose-leaf note book with section tabs, covers eight areas of information: to buy or not to buy, the search for a house, purchase contracts, financing the house, the closing process, money management, maintaining your home and definition of terms used in homebuying.

Shalala noted that, if studied carefully, the package will be found to be the equivalent of an academic course in homebuying and management. Emphasis is placed upon the need for a careful, unemotional scrutiny of the house offered for sale and the financing options available to the buyer.

The publication points out that many purchases are based on emotional reactions to appearance — fancy wallpaper or carpeting, a paneled recreation room, and appliances — rather than on insulation, wiring, quality of construction and having enough space.

Worksheets and a checklist are added to help prospective buyers make an intelligent appraisal of the homes they examine.

The section on money management tells the new owner how to deal with initial problems and defects, set up a homeownership budget and manage it, resolve money problems and get counseling help if it is needed. Budget worksheets are included.

The section on maintenance, a subject often overlooked in homebuying treatises, offers practical tips for caring for the home, making simple repairs and improvements.

The information package, complete with work forms, checklists and samples of pertinent legal documents, can be ordered from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Dept. 32H, Washington, D.C. 20402, for $4.95. Send check or money order, or give your VISA or MasterCard credit card account number and expiration date, and specify GPO Stock No. 023-000-00508-5.

A free leaflet containing pointers taken from the package also is available. Write Package Pointers, HUD USER, P.O. Box 280, Germantown, Md. 20767.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

Reliance of so many Americans upon non-rescribed vitamins, laxatives, aspirins and sleeping pills has caused some observers to comment that we are a nation of self-styled healers. Often this practice can be a mistake, comments the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA).

Self-medication and the use and abuse of over the counter drugs has become a major problem in the United States. All too frequently patients who finally go to the doctor's office arrive there only after having tried a variety of self-medications purchased over the counter. This has often resulted in the postponement of proper medical treatment for a health problem which might have been treated more simply and effectively at an earlier date.

Sometimes these medications will produce unpleasant side effects when used improperly or over an extended period of time.

The over the counter laxative is a classic example of this type of medication because the use of a laxative in general is seldom ever necessary.

Before taking a laxative or any other form of self-medication it might be well to ask "Why am I taking this medicine?"

The MMA suggests that medical advice should be sought for any real or imaginary bowel problems which cannot be attributed to some temporary inappropriate eating or the interruptions of regularity brought about by travel or excitement. Normally people don't get "hooked" on laxatives in the sense of narcotic addiction. However, it is possible to become psychologically "hooked" on laxatives using them constantly to promote a daily bowel movement. A daily bowel movement is not necessary for all persons because everyone has their own rhythymicity of bowel habits and what is true for one individual may not be true for another.

The excessive use of aspirin over a long period of time has the potential for producing harmful effects when not under a physician's supervision. Indiscriminent and prolonged use of aspirin may have the potential for causing stomach and intestinal hemorrhage.

A number of non-prescribed sleeping pills still available contain bromides which can be very toxic to the bone because they are stored in the body. If they are not eliminated, they can cause severe neurological disease. Other non-prescription sleeping pills in the over the counter market are from the same family of drugs as the antihistamines used in alergy medications. They have a mild sedative effect but they can become habit forming with prolonged use.

Overuse of some vitamins can provide harmful effects. Equally critical is the false sense of security which unsupervised vitamin therapy can produce. Frequently a chronically ill patient will overdose with vitamins believing that if enough vitamins are consumed, a feeling of well being will be restored. Consequently, important medical care is often needlessly delayed.

Suffocation is the most serious killer of infants and very young children, advises the Minnesota medical association (MMA).

More than half of all suffocations occur in children under the age of four years. Most suffocations result in death. Seldom do victims recover.

Generally, suffocations are of two types; those which result from some foreign substance taken into the body and those which are mechanical in nature.

Most of the suffocation deaths are of the ingestion type and include death from ingestion or inhalation of food or some other small object which obstructs breathing. Because the majority of these deaths occur among the very young, MMA urges parents, babysitters, and others who care for the very young to use every precaution to keep small toys, beads and other items that can become lodged in the air passages out of the reach of the very young. This also includes peanuts and small candies.

When feeding time rolls around, baby's food should be examined for lumps and other foreign objects. Solid chunks, particularly meat, can be hazardous.

Smothering by bed clothing, plastic materials, confinement in enclosed spaces, mechanical strangulation, lock-ins involving abandoned refrigerators, and cave-ins are classic examples of mechanical suffocation.

MMA urges parents to begin teaching children about the hazards of suffocation at an early age. Parents, in turn, are urged to take the necessary steps to prevent suffocation tragedy including the removal of hinges and latches from abandoned refrigerators. Additional precautions are urged when selecting the infant's crib, which should be designed to prevent strangulation. Mattress should not be too soft. This could minimize the danger of the infant's mouth and nose becoming imbedded in the soft mounds of blanket and mattress material.

Remember that most home accidents are predictable and most always preventable. This includes suffocation accidents. Key to avoiding a suffocation accident is to anticipate it before it happens and take necessary preventative measures.

Each year during the fall and winter months needless deaths occur from carbon monoxide poisoning. Caution is the word, warns the Minnesota Medical Association.

The danger of carbon monoxide poisoning increases as we prepare to put another log on the fire or turn up the thermostat on a cool fall evening to take the chill off of a room. When fuel such as coal, wood, or gas is burned under combustion, it is reduced to carbon and the normal by-products are carbon dioxide and water. Sometimes the combustion is incomplete and carbon monoxide forms which may be given off in larger quantities in a cool area.

Carbon monoxide is so dangerous because in addition to being poisonous this gas is colorless, odorless, and tasteless. It is very rapidly taken into the body's circulation and attaches itself to the red blood cells which are the oxygen carriers to the body. When this occurs, it interferes with the body's ability to absorb proper amounts of oxygen so vital to life.

A feeling of tiredness or a slight headache may be the only symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning.

If a case of carbon monoxide poisoning is suspected, the victim should be taken into fresh air immediately. The patient should be removed from the car or room, and windows and doors should be opened to permit a maximum flow of fresh air. Prevention is the best protection against carbon monoxide poisoning. There should be a keen awareness of conditions that can produce carbon monoxide poisonings and every effort should be made to keep them from occurring.

Minnesota Medical Association offers the following suggestions for prevention of carbon monoxide poisoning:

+ Make certain that furnaces, fireplaces, and other heating plants are in proper working condition. This is particularly important for units which have not been in use during warm weather months.

+ Allow only qualified and authorized service personnel to maintain these units.

+ Make certain that there is proper ventilation for the heating unit.

+ See that there is adequate ventilation and that pipes, stacks, and chimneys are clean. This is particularly important for winter fishermen, hunters, and skiers who are headed for fish houses, hunting shacks, tents and ski lodges.

+ Never drive or sit in a car with the windows rolled up, the motor running and the heater turned on.

+ Have the car checked to see that exhaust systems are in good repair to prevent the carbon monoxide fumes from filtering into the passenger area.

+ Do not use charcoal grills or habbachis in window or door areas where carbon monoxide fumes are likely to back up into living areas.

Check Before Constructing Near Highways

Commissioner Richard Braun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT), advises that anyone in this area planning private construction along a trunk highway should contact Mn-DOT's Bemidji district headquarters office to determine the limits of the highway right of way.

In the past, illegal driveways have been constructed and illegal fences, buildings, signs, etc. have been erected on highway right of way. This causes inconvenience and added expense to the offender since illegal structures must be removed at the owner's expense, Braun said.

Illegal structures on highway right of way often cause road construction problems, particularly when federal funds are involved. Project delays and cancellations often occur because the federal highway administration requires that the right of way be clear of obstructions before authorizing highway improvements, he added.

Many cities, counties and townships have adopted zoning regulations which control land use along highways. Braun said that permits are required before entrances may be constructed to the highway. Mn-DOT determines where entrances may be constructed.

For further information, contact the right of way engineer or the surveys engineer at Washington and 4th Street So., Bemidji, MN 56601, phone 218-755-3809 or 218-755-3818.

Last Exchange Improved By Garden Valley

Following the upgrading of the McIntosh exchange last week, all 12,000 subscribers in 24 exchanges served by the Garden Valley Telephone company now have one-party telephone service with weather-protected buried cable, according to Lawrence Ware, the company's general manager.

The 550 McIntosh subscribers cut over to the new system November 24 are served by solid state digital equipment in the computer-controlled central office located at the cooperative's headquarters.

Total investment in plant facilities by Garden Valley — the state's largest telephone cooperative — has grown from less than $5 million in 1967, when the one-party service program began, to over $19 million today.

State Jobless Rate Pegged At 5.4 Per Cent

Minnesota's unemployment rate in October was 5.4 per cent, which compares to 5.6 per cent in September and 3.3 per cent in October 1979, Commissioner Rolf Middleton of the Minnesota department of economic security reports.

Comparable national unemployment rate for October was 7.1 per cent.

Compared to October a year ago, the size of the Minnesota civilian labor force increased .8 of one per cent; the number employed decreased 1.3 per cent; and the number of unemployed increased 63.5 per cent.

Minnesota's labor force in October was 2,107,500 persons, down 10,200 from September and up 17,300 from October of last year.

Number of persons employed in October was 1,993,900, down 4,800 from September and down 26,800 from October a year ago.

Number of persons unemployed in Minnesota in October was 113,600, down 5,400 from September and up 44,100 from October a year ago.

Production workers in manufacturing were paid average weekly earnings of $307.33 in October for working an average of 39.2 hours at $7.84 per hour.

In October 1979, production workers were paid average weekly earnings of $285.82 for working an average of 40.2 hours at $7.11 per hour.

Fingerprint Network Aids In Enforcement

An evaluation of the Minnesota automated fingerprint identification network (MAFIN), an automated latent fingerprint identification system, completed by the crime control planning board (CCPB) shows the system to be highly successful, particularly in solving burglary cases, but not being used to its capacity.

MAFIN was put into operation in Minnesota in December of 1978 and funded primarily by federal monies awarded to the St. Paul and Minneapolis police departments by the CCPB, whose staff has worked closely with the two departments in the design and development of the system.

System was the first of its kind in the world and represents state-of-the-art performance in computer-assisted fingerprint identification.

The central site for MAFIN is the St. Paul police department crime lab but additional terminals are located at the Minneapolis police department and the Minnesota bureau of criminal apprehension (BCA).

The 1980 Minnesota Legislature requested the CCPB to study the future of MAFIN in the state and to make recommendations. Evaluation report is the first step in that study.

CCPB executive director Robert J. Griesgraber said that a high priority for improving the MAFIN system would be for the state to purchase for the BCA MAFIN equipment with the same capabilities as that of St. Paul and Minneapolis and for the state to contribute a larger share of ongoing system expenses.

"What we have learned in the course of our evaluation is that unless the state makes a financial commitment to ensure that MAFIN is a statewide system, it is almost certain that the level of cooperation between the state and local agencies will decline," Griesgraber said.

"If that happens, the system will become a service available only to residents of Ramsey and Hennepin counties through the St. Paul and Minneapolis police departments," he added.

Although the MAFIN system was designed foremost to identify latent fingerprints (those found at the scene of a crime), it also can identify persons from their fingerprints taken after arrest to see if they have a prior record and automatically check their prints against latents from unsolved crimes.

However, the MAFIN system, in its current use, has not replaced the traditional identification process for newly arrested persons, but as their fingerprint cards are added to the MAFIN file, a check is made for a prior record, Griesgraber said.

"What MAFIN adds is the potential, not yet completely realized, for a police agency to search the files of another agency to see if a person has a record in that jurisdiction," he explained, adding that without MAFIN such a cross-agency identification of persons is not routinely practical.

Greisgraber said that, in the interest of economy in doing the evaluation report, the CCPB focused on the work of the St. Paul police dept., with Minneapolis and the BCA considered in less detail. Together these three agencies provide MAFIN services to all law enforcement agencies in the state.

In the first year of MAFIN operation, the St. Paul police crime lab was able to identify approximately 90 criminal suspects from latent prints, representing a 40 per cent increase in productivity over the number of latents identified by the conventional manual procedures, and solve a corresponding number of crimes.

Majority of the crimes solved were burglaries, which traditionally have been the most difficult of the serious crimes to solve because of the lack of known suspect, Griesgraber said, and often the only evidence is a fingerprint.

Taking into account the cost of the equipment and operating expenses, the cost per MAFIN identification and case clearance in St. Paul was about $500, while the cost to local taxpayers for operating expenses was only about $100 per identification.

However, Griesgraber pointed out that the report shows the value of goods stolen in crimes cleared through a MAFIN-aided identification exceeded $30,000, with a significant portion of these goods returned to the owners and other amounts recovered through restitution by the criminal.

Other significant cost savings also were identified in the report and information on them may be obtained by contacting CCPB research analyst Stephen Coleman at (612) 296-7819.

Stangeland To Help Develop Farm Exports

Congressman Arlan Stangeland has joined with a bi-partisan delegation of members of the U.S. House and Senate to form the "Congressional Farm Export Project."

"Our purpose is to develop a unified national plan to build a stronger U.S. economy through increased farm exports in the 1980's," Stangeland explained. "Expansion of farm exports isn't just good for farmers and agribusiness, it benefits every U.S. citizen.

This new Congressional group will work closely with the "U.S. Farm Export Education Project" to bring together leading members of the farm and export community with top decision-makers in Washington for a comprehensive effort with two basic objectives: (1) Identify specific ways that maximum expansion for farm exports can be achieved over the next five to 10-year period; and (2) communicate to the American people the critical role farm exports play in creating jobs, reducing inflation and strengthening the dollar.

"We believe we can conclusively demonstrate that this nation's economic well-being is directly and substantially linked to the growth and expansion of farm exports," Stangeland said.

He pointed out that U.S. farm exports, projected to reach $40 billion for fiscal 1980, are by far the leading positive factor in the nation's balance of trade. A preliminary U.S. farm export education project study shows that farm exports could more than double by 1985, and triple by 1990.

"Farm exports are one of this country's greatest national assets," Stangeland continued. "For example, every time we increase farm exports by one billion dollars, we create 31,700 new jobs for U.S. workers."

The Seventh district congressman said he will be naming several Seventh district constituents to serve on a national task force on farm export expansion. Each person named will review a draft "Blueprint for Export Expansion" that includes specific recommendations for maximum feasible expansion of U.S. farm exports between now and 1990.

These responses to the draft plan will be considered by a blue ribbon committee on export expansion made up of approximately 35 leaders from throughout agriculture, industry and government serving as authors of the completed report. A second draft will be presented at a national conference on farm export expansion scheduled for February 9-11, 1981 in Washington, D.C.

"We hope the project will attract significant interest from non-farm leaders — the people who ultimately must be convinced that increasing farm exports is a matter of national, not just agricultural interest," commented Stangland.

The American Dream

Following comments were made by John Foster Dulles in regard to the hope many Americans continue to hold in this great country:

Beneath the American Faith in the future lie two main concepts, one material, the other at least potentially spiritual. The first is what James Truslow Adams called the American Dream. It is the hope of a better life than older lands and ages ever afforded: more security, more comfort, more money, wider horizons. No one should sneer at this concept just because it is necessarily material, for seekers of the American Dream performed prodigies of courage. Often they performed them unselfishly, thinking of their children rather than themselves.

Willa Cather, looking at Nebraska, concluded that the earliest generation was truly heroic. "The generation that subdued the wild land and broke up the virgin prairies," she wrote, was an army of rugged men and women who "inspire respect and compel admiration." Their resourcefulness matched their courage. Beginning in the utter poverty of sod houses, they could look out at the end of their days on broad stretches of fertility and say, "We made this, with our backs and hands."

Social Security Facts

It is a well publicized fact that the U.S. social security system is in deep trouble and is facing some monumental decisions in the very near future.

Consider these somewhat startling facts: More than half of the families in the United States which pay social security taxes now pay more for social security than they do in income taxes. For every million workers unemployed for one month last year, the social security system lost $100 million.

There are three workers now paying social security taxes for every person drawing benefits from the program. By the year 2025 the ratio is projected to be reduced to two to one. Some 114 million U.S. workers and their employers paid $99 billion into the social security fund in 1979. During the same year, some 35 million people collected $101 billion in benefits.

Social security taxes provide an estimated 30 per cent of all federal revenues. And the rates will continue to climb on a schedule that has already been approved. Even with the higher taxes scheduled for January 1, the fund for old age and survivor's insurance will be in the red by $3 billion in 1983 and could reach a $27 billion deficit by 1985.

These facts should bring out one more fact — that it is essential the program benefits be brought into line with contributions or the entire system will collapse. Hopefully a new administration will bring forth some reason and restraint in battling the problem.

Working Together

One would assume that a governmental bureau or department would have some consistency in goals and purpose and that all divisions in that department should share a common objective. Apparently that has not been the case within the Minnesota department of natural resources, and actions have now been taken to rectify at least one part of that condition.

An editorial in the Grand Rapids Herald-Review summarizes what is taking places as follows:

Commissioner Joe Alexander of the Department of Natural Resources has signed a new policy which requires that wildlife and forestry administered lands be managed for both forest and wildlife benefits.

It is long overdue.

We can recall attending meetings for at least 25 years where emphasis was placed on the need for managing for both aspects. Much has been accomplished through cooperative efforts in that direction, but the new policy puts the responsibility where it belongs. Divisions of forestry and fish and wildlife are directed to follow planning and management guidelines to insure that, wherever possible, wildlife management objectives will be met through forest management practices.

If cases develop where there are conflicts in long-term management objectives, transfer of custodial control may be made from one division to another. Leasing or acquisition are other alternatives to handle this type of management conflict. Alexander stresses, however, that such steps will be considered only where critical habitat needs cannot be met through cooperative planning.

It is not surprising that foresters and wildlife managers have tended to concentrate on measures designed to provide the maximum benefit for their particular resource. Both are specialists, highly trained and with special interests and skills. But foresters and wildlife managers in general have been among the first to recognize the need for managing the public lands for the benefit of all the public. That is the basis for the multiple use management principle applied by government agencies to most lands under their jurisdiction.

"Our divisions will be more closely involved in each other's decision-making processes for the betterment of the resources we manage," agreed director Ray Hitchcock of the Division of Forestry and Director Chuck Burrows of the Division of Fish and Wildlife. "We have made that commitment."

Management actions in the field are to be jointly reviewed. Disagreements will move upward through area and regional officers to go to the central office in St. Paul until they are resolved.

"It is my belief that the policy will result in an improvement in both forest and wildlife management programs," Commissioner Alexander declares.

It should work that way. Certainly there is no reason for divisions to be jealous of each other when cooperative efforts will bring greater benefits to all.

Adages For Bureaucrats

Anyone who has had anything to do with filling out or even just reading a government form knows that the language is often hard to understand. It seems that the bureaucracy has a way of making the simple difficult in any way that it becomes involved.

Making the rounds recently in area papers is a list of 10 common adages, written as if they have been prepared by government writers. See how many you can decipher before you have to check the answers at the end of the list:

(1) A single unit of predecimal currency, parsimoniously hoarded, is the equivalent of a similar pecuniary token received as wages.

(2) A quantity of useless material is invariably created whenever a project is performed with undue alacrity.

(3) A joyful feeling of contentment is not a commodity which can be obtained through the normal channels of currency exchange.

(4) If the extremities of a person are of low temperature, it is an indication that he or she is possessed of a loving nature.

(5) It is generally unwise to awaken a slumbering member of the canine family.

(6) If your initial efforts are unsuccessful, perserverance will eventually lead to a satisfactory conclusion.

(7) Given advance knowledge of impending actions, one may take whatever course is necessary to ensure a satisfactory outcome.

(8) A basic writing implement, used judiciously, has the potential for greater impact than an ancient, double-edged weapon.

(9) The introduction of a large number of assistants to a task force reduces the individual effort required for its completion.

(10) Those members of the avian family having similar plumage are often predisposed to seek common domocile.

ANSWERS:

(1) A penny saved is a penny earned.

(2) Haste makes waste.

(3) Money can't buy happiness.

(4) Cold hands, warm heart.

(5) Let sleeping dogs lie.

(6) If at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

(7) Forewarned is forearmed.

(8) The pen is mightier than the sword.

(9) Many hands make light work.

(10) Birds of a feather flock together.

Interesting Opinions:

Our industrial plant and techniques came into being when raw materials were abundant and cheap. For a century, the universal goal was to use more capital and save labor. Labor saving was the highest virtue. Emphasis on labor saving was appropriate then. It is not so appropriate now. It is time to economize on capital goods and think about putting people to work instead of saving still more labor — Harold F. Breimyer, University of Missouri extension economist.

Gene Technology May Help Plants Boost Food Supply

by George E. Jordan
'U' M News Service

Since Biblical times plant breeders have been altering the heredity of seedlings to adapt them to new climates and make them better sources of food.

Many common fruit trees and farm crops have been bred from plants that sometimes only slightly resemble their modern-day counterparts.

Through the use of recombinant DNA technology, or gene splicing, in plant research, scientists hope to expand upon the work of plant breeding.

Recombinant DNA technology, developed in the last several years, involves the transfer of individual genes — units that govern the machinery of living cells — from one organism to another.

Already the manipulation of microorganisms, like bacteria and viruses, is almost routine. In the case of these simple organisms, scientists usually alter only one, or at most a few, genes to induce useful change. But in plants, some of the more complex organisms in nature, entire "blocks" of genes must be altered.

Plant breeders alter the heredity of plants through cross-breeding — the transfer of pollen from the male portion of the plant to the female flower. The resulting plant is a genetic combination of traits from both parent plants.

One of man's most remarkable plant breeding achievements is credited to the American Indian. Indian peoples bred 10 major types of corn that exist today before European explorers had reached the continent.

Popular theory proposes that today's corn was bred from the wild teosinte plant, which grows in Mexico, Guatemala and Honduras. Indians are thought to have brought the plant from South America and bred it to withstand climates in the north.

Modern corn usually has only one stalk, where the teosinte had many tillers growing from its base. Moreover, where the corn plant bears only one ear, or a few at most, the teosinte typically produces several dozen slender spikes.

In the last several years, the word "clone" has become associated with nightmarish scenarios of assembly-line reproduction of human beings. However, almost all fruit trees and wine grapes are grown from clones.

"Plant breeders have been cloning plants for thousands of years," said Irwin Rubenstein, professor of genetics and cell biology engaged in recombinant DNA research of corn at the University of Minnesota. "Plant breeders are the most powerful (effective) genetic engineers."

If a grapevine is found to be good for making wine, for instance, the wine grower can graft the branches of the good wine onto another rootstock. The resulting grapes will be clones, or identical copies, of the grapes on the good vine.

Recombinant DNA experiments with microorganisms began 10 to 15 years ago, but such experimentation with plants is a new phenomenon. "Today's research is laying the groundwork for the future possibility of engineering economic plants," Rubenstein said.

Unlike the routine genetic manipulation of microorganisms, scientists are yet to successfully alter the heredity of plants with modern gene splicing techniques.

Burle Gengenbach, University of Minnesota professor of agronomy and plant genetics, said, "There have been some attempts, but nothing. . . suggests a successful gene transfer has been made with recombinant DNA technology."

Researchers at the University of Minnesota are studying the genes of corn plants. In theory, once a gene that tells a plant to perform a specific function is identified, it can then be extracted and implanted into the genetic information of another plant.

If gene splicing techniques are perfected with plants, altering their heredity would be a more refined and less laborious process than controlled pollination.

"There are a lot of little steps that have to be worked out before gene transfers involving plants can be useful, or even demonstrated," Gengenbach said.

Rubenstein and other researchers at the university say that once recombinant DNA technology is applied to plants they anticipate a so-called "greener revolution" in which genetically engineered crops will require fewer nutrients and produce higher yields.

Consider corn plants, for example. More than 200 million metric tons of corn are produced each year in the United States. That's only slightly less than the combined harvest of rice and wheat in the United States.

Corn requires massive amounts of chemical fertilizers to supply nitrogen for the soil. If corn plants could be genetically engineered to use the nitrogen already present in the soil more effectively, the costs of producing corn crops would be cut and the long-time practice of crop rotation to restore nitrogen to the soil would become almost unnecessary.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I would like to say a few words on so-called good neighbors or friends that I had in the Thief River Falls area, when I lived there for over 20 years, people I did favors for, organizations I worked with — fair board, D.H.I.A., A.D.A., 4-H leader, 4-H council, chamber of commerce, to name a few. I took a lot of time and money from my job and farm to be on these committees and I have always been in hope the community appreciated the work I had done.

Now that I have been away from Thief River Falls for nine years and now that I have sold my property, I am trying to get my business in the area settled. I wish these so-called friends or neighbors would keep their nose out of my business and look out for their own affairs.

If the shoe fits, wear it.

Wood Haulers Careless In Securing Loads

Minnesotans hauling wood for the winter are not being very careful how they pile the loads and are causing hazards to other drivers, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

A number of complaints, many from northern Minnesota, have been received on improperly loaded wood resulting in loads being spilled on highways, causing additional perils for motorists.

The wood pieces are particularly dangerous for motorcyclists who would probably lose control of their cycle if they struck such an object, Sopsic said.

One solution, the commissioner suggested, is to secure loads with a canvas or wire mesh from front to back.

Minnesota law requires motorists to carry a load which is "securely covered as to prevent any of its load from dropping, sifting, leaking or otherwise escaping . . ." Exceptions are made for sand being dropped for the purpose of getting traction or water being sprinkled on a road for cleaning or maintenance purposes.

Violators are subject to fines.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

Do you own or operate a mechanical snow thrower? Minnesota Medical association has the following advice for you if you are among the growing ranks of upper midwest residents who are exchanging the muscle power required to shovel snow for the engine power of a snow thrower.

A variety of injuries ranging from nicks and cuts to missing fingers and mangled hands occur every winter because the operator was attempting to remove heavy, wet snow which was clogging the snow thrower mechanism.

Generally those injuries occur despite the fact that the operator had turned off the snow thrower before attempting to remove the snow from the clogged mechanism.

To prevent the possibility of an accident the spark plug should also be disconnected. Unless this is done, it is possible for the snow thrower engine to build up sufficient combustion to start again while the operator is removing snow with his hands.

In addition, the Minnesota Medical association suggests the following:

+ Don't operate the snow thrower before carefully reading the directions. Get acquainted with all of your snow throwers features, know how to stop the engine quickly.

+ Never leave the machine running and unattended. Keep children and pets away from the snow thrower.

+ Shut off the engine before refueling. Don't spill fuel on or near a hot engine.

+Don't start or run the snow thrower engine indoors.

+ Store the gasoline can away from any source of heat or fire.

+ Exercise additional caution to avoid slips or falls when operating the snow thrower on slopes or hills.

How's your snow shoveling fitness?

If you are in good health — and you take it easy — snow shoveling can actually be a good form of physical exercise, advises the Minnesota Medical Association.

The Association is quick to note, however, that snow shoveling requires lots of energy and muscle. Even more demanding is the automobile stalled in a snowdrift that requires a "push" to get started.

All too frequently snow shoveling can be a health risk as well as a challenge. This is particularly true for those who are overweight and live otherwise sedentary lives.

If you are planning to tackle the next snowfall with your trusty snow shovel the Minnesota Medical Association has the following suggestions for you:

+ Get up a half an hour or an hour earlier in the morning following a fresh snowfall to allow ample time for shoveling and frequent rest periods. Avoid a hurried hassle to clean the sidewalks and driveway in an effort to get to work on time.

+Don't be an unnecessary candidate for a heart attack. Chances are, if you know that you are in good health and your heart is sound, a strenuous go round with the snow shovel shouldn't hurt you.

+ If you are in doubt about your snow shovel fitness, it might be well to take it easy until you have a medical checkup to make certain that you are in shape for the rigors of snow shoveling.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The 1980 elections are now history and what history they have made! Ronald Reagan's stunning victory and the changes voted in the makeup of the new Congress may well go down as the most dramatic upheaval since the political realignment that followed the Great Depression. Here in Washington, where the experts always seem one step behind the rest of the public, the news has been greeted with stunned disbelief. How, they are asking, did it all happen? Why were our predictions so wrong?

Regular readers of this column will remember that I began predicting five years ago that the end of the period of economic liberalism was at hand. In fact, just last March, I testified before the House Budget Committee and issued this very specific warning to those distinguished legislators:

"If physicians went on strike and refused to heal the sick, allowing thousands to die from simple illness, there would be massive rebellion. Well, members of the Committee, I respectfully suggest to you that a massive rebellion is already underway and growing daily — a rebellion against runaway bureaucracy, spending, inflation and taxes. Millions of Americans are appalled that Washington will not provide the leadership and the medicine that is needed, in spite of the fact that many of the answers are so obvious."

They listened politely. They even nodded their heads. But they did nothing. Now, many of them are sitting home, licking their wounds and wondering why their constituents threw them out of office.

People know America is a great country — the greatest on earth. But they're fed up with a government that offers them only excuses, scapegoating, press releases and empty rhetoric, even as it continues to spend and tax them into the poorhouse. Except for liberal members of Congress — and now, many ex-members as well — just about everyone in America hungers for a real change. They want to see this country return to the principles of private enterprise where human progress is a natural product of the economic progress that flows from a strong private economy.

There's no magic about it really. It's just that the public is much smarter than people in Washington are willing to believe. Today, there is a broad consensus that we must rebuild our economy, and restore our proud growth of productivity that we enjoyed for many years, by getting government spending under control, by stimulating after-tax rewards for work, savings and investment, and by killing off the ridiculous regulations we have written about so often in this column.

What's more, everywhere in the country there is a great faith that all of these things can be done, and that we can regain our position of preeminence in the world. And even before the big journey begins in January, we will see a lot of evidence around the world that people once again have confidence and faith in the American system.

The biggest danger we face is that too many people might expect too much too soon. We must recognize that these problems were not all created in the last four years and that they will not disappear in the first six months of the new Administration. We must be committed and dedicated to pursuing these tough decisions throughout the rest of this century.

If we are, then future generations will look back on this election as the threshold of a new age of economic progress — which, itself, is the key to all human progress.

Health Facility Complaints On Increase

The state Health department's office of health facility complaints (OHFC) reports an increase of nearly 16 per cent in the number of cases it handled during the first six months of 1980, as compared with the first half of last year.

OHFC investigated 485 complaints about Minnesota health care facilities during the period, according to OHFC executive director Jean Donaldson. Nearly a fourth of the complaints concerned nursing care received by patients. Other complaints involved allegations of inadequate staffing at Nursing homes, patient abuse, dietary problems, or violations or rights guaranteed to patients under Minnesota law.

OHFC has also experienced a significant increase in the number of health facilities requesting hearings on actions taken by the agency, Donaldson said, and the dollar amount of "Penalty assessments" issued by OHFC has also risen dramatically. Both the amount of the assessments and the number of hearings more than doubled between 1978 and 1979.

OHFC, which was first set up in 1977, handles complaints about hospitals, nursing homes, "boarding care" homes and "supervised living" facilities. It also handles complaints about health care professionals who serve the residents of these facilities, and other government agencies whose actions affect health care facilities.

OHFC accepts complaints from any source, including anonymous complaints. Under state law, the identity of persons making complaints must be protected. OHFC investigators can enter a facility at any time, and obtain access to patients and records, without prior authorization. The agency can issue "correction orders" to facilities found to be in violation of state laws, and facilities which fail to observe correction orders can be fined.

The seven member OHFC staff includes persons with professional experience in nursing, education, sociology, dietetics, psychology, nursing home administration and finance, and some types of criminal investigation, Donaldson said.

"Merry Christmas?"
not if you have a hearing problem

For the person with a hearing loss, Christmas can be the saddest time of the year instead of the merriest. You feel lonely, "left out" — even with those you love.

But you may be able to hear again all the precious sounds of Christmas — carols, church bells, a whispered "Thank You." Because today, most hearing problems can be helped.

Why not find out if you really do have a hearing loss . . . and how you, too, may hear again? Just come in for a free electronic hearing test.

Gene Splicing Has Optimistic Future

by George E. Jordan
'U' M News Service

Gene splicing, developed in the last several years, is a young science, but already the technique is revolutionizing the field of medicine.

Genetic engineering, popularly known as recombinant DNA technology, is the altering of heredity by transferring genes from one organism to another.

Preliminary gene splicing research has fired scientists' hopes of finding cures for many diseases. In fact, scientists are optimistic that the new technology could lead to breakthroughs in the treatment of cancer and other syndromes.

At the University of Minnesota, gene splicing techniques are being applied in 24 research projects. The scope of the work is broad. Researchers are using the new technology to study gene structure, to search for viral cancer agents, and to compare blood disorders in animals to those in humans. Other projects include work on improving the fermentation of yeast and increasing the yield of farm crops.

The bulk of the University of Minnesota cancer research using recombinant DNA technology is focused on the way normal cells become cancerous and the role genes might play in cancer.

"Cancer is a very complicated disease," says Anthony Faras, professor of microbiology engaged in cancer research at the university. "At present, we have a better basic understanding of the nature of cancer-causing genes than we did a few years ago."

Genes carry DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid), the information of heredity that governs the machinery of the living cell. In a sense, genes carry the blueprint for life that determines how every cell grows and matures.

Faras' research group is studying two aspects of cancer: how normal genes "turn on" to cause cancer, and why certain benign (noncancerous) tumors, such as warts, progress into cancer tumors.

The progress of warts from benign to cancerous is rare, occurring only in certain types of warts, such as anogenital warts and reddish skin warts called epidermodysplasia verruciformis.

Faras' group has found that such warts are caused by a specific virus, called the papilloma virus. Researchers speculate that the virus activates a gene, or combination of genes, that usually lie dormant in normal wart tissue.

Infectious and viral diseases are commonly fought through the use of vaccines. The virus responsible for polio, for example, is grown in large amounts in the laboratory where it is killed and purified.

The killed-virus is then injected into the body where the immune system reacts against the intruder by manufacturing antibodies that attack the foreign virus.

The problem with the papilloma virus is that it cannot be grown in the laboratory. How, then, can a vaccine be produced?

The papilloma virus looks like a series of sphere-shaped particles, each surrounded by a protein shell. The shell is foreign to the human body and, therefore, signals the immune system to attack.

Faras' research group at the University is using recombinant DNA technology to identify the gene, or combination of genes, in the papilloma virus that direct its particles to produce the protein shell.

If such genes are identified, through basic gene splicing techniques, they can be extracted from the virus's genetic information and studied. The genes can then be recombined with a plasmid vector, or host, and introduced into bacteria, inducing the bacteria to manufacture the protein.

"We can inject the bacteria-produced virus protein into the body," where it will trigger the immune system to manufacture antibodies against the live, infectious virus, Faras said.

If the papilloma virus is shown to play a role in cancer, and researchers are successful in developing a vaccine, it is possible that such a vaccine might help reduce the incidence of cancer.

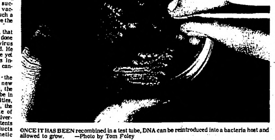
Faras warns, however, that much work must be done before a papilloma virus vaccine can be developed. He said that experiments are yet to prove that a virus is involved in wart-derived cancers.

If researchers at the University develop new vaccines or other agents, the material would logically be in demand. Several universities, including Harvard, Yale, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of California, hold patents on biomedical products developed through genetic manipulation.

Potentially lucrative patents on agents developed in genetic engineering laboratories have investors on Wall Street proclaiming the age of gene splicing as "The New Industrial Revolution."

Sprouting up in industrial parks across the nation are small businesses seeking ways to mass-produce biomedical products, like vaccines, human growth hormones and industrial chemicals, genetically engineered in the laboratory.

One company, Molecular Genetics, Inc., recently opened offices in Edina. Moreover, at least seven pharmaceutical companies and nine major corporations throughout the country have said they are or will soon be conducting recombinant DNA research.



ONCE IT HAS BEEN recombined in a test tube, DNA can be reintroduced into a bacteria host and allowed to grow. —Photo by Tom Foley

Electric Van Used In DOT Experiment

How would you like a vehicle that gets zero miles to the gallon?

Minnesota department of transportation Mn-DOT is trying out a van that does just that. It does not use gas or liquid fuel of any kind. This vehicle is powered by electricity supplied by a set of 17 six-volt batteries.

Purchased from Jet Industries, Austin, Texas, on a low bid of $12,000, the small, white van will be used on an interagency mail run in downtown St. Paul, according to Jim Wright, energy planner, Mn-DOT. Eventually, the van may travel throughout the state to give Minnesotans a look at vehicle powered by electricity.

"We haven't had much exposure to electric vehicles in Minnesota," Wright said. "The future may demand alternative energy sources for transportation. Here's a chance to begin testing and demonstrating one power source for transportation — electricity."

Wright said that urban areas will be the place for electric vehicles. "Both economic and environmental factors may encourage use of electric powered cars and vans. Mn-DOT wants to provide a leadership role," he said.

"We hope to find other uses for electric vehicles. The success we have with this van will influence our decision to replace more gas-powered vehicles with electric."

For one year the new van will be under close examination, he said. Maintenance requirements, battery condition, charging times, durability and response to changing weather conditions will all be checked.

A 20-horsepower motor powers the 2,700 pound vehicle. The 17 six-volt batteries provide the 102 volts needed to power the van. Acceleration is from 0-30 miles per hour in 11 seconds. The wheelbase is 71.7 inches and four passengers can sit in the 55-inch wide, 64-inch high, 135-inch long vehicle.

If you're putting your recreational vehicle in mothballs during winter the Tire Industry Safety Council recommends taking the weight off the tires. Put the vehicle up on blocks. If possible, remove the wheel assemblies and store in a cool, dry place away from sunlight, reducing the air pressure to ten pounds.

Rise In Wheat Prices Would Aid Economy

Increasing wheat prices to $6 per bushel through stimulated exports would have a positive net effect on the nation's economy, according to a Chase Econometrics study commissioned by the Minnesota Wheat Growers association for the National Association of Wheat Growers.

The NAWG-Chase study is the first to analyze the impact of substantially increased wheat prices on the farmer, the consumer and the entire U.S. economy. It presents policy alternatives for achieving and holding prices in the $5.60-$6.00 per bushel range during the 1981 and 1982 seasons.

Aggressive export stimulation and higher exports coupled with the accumulation of domestic wheat reserves were the two alternatives studied.

"Chase Econometrics concludes that a 40 per cent increase in wheat prices would cause an increase of only two-tenths per cent (0.2 per cent) in the Consumer Price Index," stated Don Loeslie, a Warren wheat farmer who heads the NAWG's econometric research committee.

"If this price increase is brought about only by higher wheat exports, then the benefits of a lower balance of trade deficit, 20,000 more jobs, and higher farm incomes which stimulates farmer purchases would more than offset the negative impact of slightly higher inflation in the U.S. economy."

According to Loeslie, the combination of moderately higher wheat exports and stock accumulation through the farmer-owned reserve program, the second alternative studied, indicated no significant negative impact of $6.00 per bushel wheat on the U.S. economy, since improved trade balances and stronger farm income offset nominal increases in food costs.

A separate wheat grower study by Chase Econometrics projects that the average cost of production for U.S. wheat farmers will reach $6.00 per bushel by 1982, or a 42 per cent increase over 1979 levels. Chase concludes that a combined policy of maintaining both strong exports and adequate foodgrain reserves would appear to be a very viable alternative which would protect farmers against higher energy and other costs and guard consumers against food shortages.

'U'M President Asks State For $594 Million

University of Minnesota president C. Peter Magrath asked Gov. Al Quie to provide a $140 million increase in the university's 1981-83 budget over its current biennial budget.

That increase is the largest dollar amount the university has ever requested, bringing the total biennial request to approximately $594 million. Magrath pointed out at the governor's budget hearing that the request is a 31 per cent increase over the 1979-81 budget, consistent with percentage increases of 28 to 60 per cent in the past 12 years.

Unlike requests in past years, this one does not include any new funds for additional faculty positions. The only new program in the operations and maintenance budget is $40,000 a year for developing scholarly exchanges with China. The emphasis of this biennium is on raising faculty pay and maintaining programs damaged by inflation, Magrath said.

The biennial request calls for $69 million for faculty salaries, a 31 per cent increase over the previous biennium. "Faculty have lost purchasing power more rapidly than almost any other occupation," Magrath said. "The 31 per cent increase should return about 85 per cent of the purchasing power they lost in the 1970s."

"The situation is getting to the point where many starting engineers are making more than the professors who taught them," said Dave Berg, the university's director of management planning and information services.

The governor will announce his 1981-83 state budget, including his recommendation for the university, before the legislative session begins in January.

Gatzke

Mrs. Clifford Klamar, Gatzke
294-2468

Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Gene Peterson visited at the Eddie Engelstad home at Grygla.

On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Art Johnson and Myrtle Naeseth attended the wedding of Valarie Naeseth and Kelan Bruggeman at the Methodist church in Thief River Falls. Others attending were Ethel and Marvel Lian of Minneapolis and Viola Bonde of Goodridge.

Bill Bernstein and Tom were supper guests on Sunday at the Howard Lunsetter home.

Sunday afternoon Mrs. Wayne Larson and boys, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Lund brought birthday wishes to Jeremy and Melissa at the Jerome Lund home near Thief River Falls.

A week ago Mr. and Mrs. Gene Miller of Crookston spent the weekend at the Delmar Hagen home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Peterson visited Sunday afternoon at the Clifford McDonagh home.

Visitors on Sunday at the Larry Dahl home were Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Brekkestran and Jenny of Labarge, Wym., Jean Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Wendall Brekkestran, Kari and Rick of Thief River Falls, Mrs. Harlan Garfve and family, Pammy Westman, Jeremy and Stacy of Newfolden.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike McQuillian, Chad, John and Mark of Fargo spent the weekend at the Walter Lunsetter home.

The Gatzke senior citizens met November 19, a business meeting was held with a secretary and treasurer reporting. Mrs. Rosali Mozinski, coordinator for Northwest Federation from Thief River Falls visited the center. She brought a list of the places giving discounts to senior citizens on Dec. 2, 9 and 16. Karen Skadesem will be at the center taking applications for fuel assistance from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Their Christmas party will be Dec. 3 with their donations going to the Children's Home at Roseau. Mable Lunsetter won the door prize. Olga Engevik served lunch. The next regular meeting will be December 17 which will be their birthday party. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Mozinski and Vivian Ruud of Thief River Falls, Pastor and Mrs. Robert Amundson and Samuel and recent visitors have been Mr. and Mrs. Mylan Ruud and Johan Engevik.

Spending the weekend at the Glenn Larson home were Kenneth Grondahl of Palm City, Fla., Lowell Larson of Blaine, Randy Larson of Alexandria, Master Sargeant and Mrs. Ron Kanaar and family of Grand Forks. They were here to attend funeral services for Henry Grondahl on Saturday at Grygla. Others attending from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Wendall Swan of Madison Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Grondahl and Loren of Buffalo and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Grondahl of Holt.

Saturday visitors at the Gene Peterson home were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Burrell, Mrs. Auget Wagner of Thief River Falls, Gary Peterson and Jamie of Middle River, Dwight Peterson and Tracy of Warren.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Sparby have been recent visitors at the Alfred Sparby home.

Alan Lunsetter and Tom Bernstein visited Friday evening with Kristi Lunsetter at Grand Forks.

Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Edward Monson visited at the Wayne Larson home.

Bruce Jelle of Grygla was a supper guest on Monday at the Cheslie Ruud home and visited with Terry who is spending a week at home during quarter break from Moorhead state college.

Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmer Nelson of Alverado were overnight guests on Sunday at the Rueben Engevik home.

On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Ray Eastby attended funeral services for Adolph Erickson at Thief River Falls.

Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Hagen visited at the Eddie Engelstad home at Grygla.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Brekkestran and Jenny of Labarge, Wym. spent Sunday until Tuesday at the Larry Dahl home.

Supper guests on Saturday at the Walter Lunsetter home were Mr. and Mrs. Mike McQuillian, Chad, John and Mark of Fargo, Mr. and Mrs. Rick Larson, Cindy, Jackie and Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Lunsetter, Jerrod, Justin, Jamie and Jesse, Marvin and Noble Olufson.

Mrs. Donald McMillian, Mrs. Randy King and Dawn of Roseau were brief callers at the Glenn Larson home on Tuesday and took Kenneth Grondahl to the airport at Thief River Falls so he could return to his home at Palm City, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Hagen, Brian and Melissa of Crookston spent the weekend at the Ralph Hagen home.

On Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Peter Aune and Mr. and Mrs. Cheslie Ruud were supper guests at the Wayne Ruud home at Karlstad and brought birthday wishes to Monica on her sixth birthday.

Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Gene Engen, Coleen and Jason visited at the John Toren home at Middle River and brought birthday wishes to Matthew on his first birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheslie Ruud were supper guests a week ago Sunday at the Robert Prestebak home near Goodridge.

Randy Larson visited on Saturday at the Howard Lunsetter home.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Lunsetter and Kenny and Albert Peterson are spending a week at the Rodney Peterson home at Whitcha, Kan. and visiting relatives in Minneapolis.

Saturday Vivian Ruud of Thief River Falls and Mrs. Edwin Lund brought birthday wishes to Elena Skoglund of Crookston on her 88th birthday at the Olga Engevik home at Thief River Falls.

Phil Young of Bemidji visited on Sunday at the Ralph Hagen home.

Arden Beachy of Staples and Johan Engevik visited on Sunday with their grandparents, the Rueben Engeviks.

Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lian and Agnes Engelstad visited at the Ray Eastby home.

Monday Kenneth Grondahl of Palm City, Fla. and Mrs. Glenn Larson attended the memorial services at Oakland Park home for Henry Grondahl at which Pastor Amundson officiated and Mrs. Amundson was the organist.

Visitors on Saturday at the Cheslie Ruud home were Mary Gentry of Middle River, Lowell Larson of Blaine, Orvis Mugaas of Roseau, Tom Bernstein, Gene Lunsetter and Randy Larson.

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Aune of Grygla visited Sunday evening at the Walter Lunsetter home.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dahl and girls, Mrs. Esther Dahl, Mrs. Edwin Lund, Mr. and Mrs. Cheslie Ruud, also Mr. and Mrs. George Severts of Middle River and Vivian Ruud of Thief River Falls were among those who attended the silver wedding anniversary at Plummer on Sunday afternoon for Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Sorenson.

Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Semedsmo and Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Helstad of Roseau visited at the Ray Eastby home.

4-H News

The Gatzke Busy Beavers 4-H club met November 19 in the church basement. The meeting was conducted by president Paul Polansky. There were 38 members present. The secretary and treasurer reports were read and approved. The following members received junior leadership awards: first year participants were, Paul Polansky, Kelly Englund, Jackie Larson and Rodney Hagen. Second year, John Orpen, Sara Amundson, Dan Curtis and Glenn Orpen. Third year were: Sina Amundson and Dawn Nelson. Derel Engelstad received an award from the Simplicity pattern company. Rodney Hagen received an electricity and energy award. Paul Polansky, Reed Engelstad and John Orpen gave demonstrations and project talks. Lon Englund and Tammy Severts were in charge of recreation. Lunch was served by Bonnie Nelson and Linda Engen. Their next regular meeting will be December 3 in the church basement. Lon Englund, reporter.

Mrs. Orlando Chervestad
Oklee, Minn.

Olaf Stolaas celebrated his 75th birthday Friday evening. The following came over for the special occassion and they were his daughter and family, Lester and Bealuh Vad, Gary Vad and Lori Bakken, his son and his family, Orlan and Clarice and Joel, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Arveson and Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Lundeen. They all enjoyed the birthday luncheon. Happy birthday Olaf.

Opal and Malcolm Stucy attended a birthday party for Ed Stucy Sr. who is 80 years young. The party was held Thursday afternoon at his son Eddie's home. Many relatives and friends came over for the special occasion. Happy birthday Ed.

Little Quinten Knute, age 2 years, celebrated his birthday Sunday. His parents Brad and Lana Nelson entertained the following at a birthday luncheon. Great grandmothers Signe Evenson and Sena Chervestad, grandmother Helen Chervestad, cousins Aaron and Abegale Chervestad, Kevin Hinden, Duwayne and Danny Nelson, Dale Sorenson. Happy birthday, Quinten.

Elaine and Richard Patrus and Steven and Debby of Nashwauk and Jim and Bonnie Halvorson and Cindy from Killdeer, N.D. visited their dad Persy Halvorson at the Northwestern hospital and were Monday evening dinner guests at the Malcolm Stucy home.

Mrs. Lester Vad was honored Thursday evening when the following came over for her birthday, grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Stolaas and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Vad of Highlanding, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Vad and children, Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Matheson, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Nelson and family, Mrs. Betty Hanson and family, Jody Stolaas and Galen Peters of Newfolden, Mr. and Mrs. Orlan Stolaas and Joel, Gary Vad and Lori Bakken, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Arveson and Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Lundeen. Happy birthday, Beaulah.

Company at the Olaf Stolaas home Sunday were Mrs. Peter Hendrickson and Mrs. Tilda Burstad of Thief River Falls.

Mark Nesland and Anita Dommer of Legher, Mont. were married Saturday at the Ebenezer Lutheran church north of Oklee with Pastor Randall officiating the ceremony. Anita's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Dommer and Erick were overnight guests Friday at the Omer Nesland home along with the bridesmaids and maid of honor, Susan Bragge, Linda Tan, and Donna Pope. Mrs. Myra Nesland and daughter, Myrna made the wedding cake in shape of a church and also made the wedding bouquet and corsages for her son Mark's wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Nesland went on their wedding trip to Colorado. They will make their home at 2404 South 10th Street, Apartment 1, Moorhead. Mark is employed with the Echos Bridge construction company of Moorhead and Anita is manager of the Holiday Apartments in Moorhead and a student at Moorhead state where she will receive her Master Degree in Educational Handicapped work.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Swanson and Trisha, nee Debbi from Park Rapids came up for her brother's wedding. Larry is assistant manager of the new Red Owl store in Thief River Falls and Debbi is working for the Social Services as an aid. They will be moving back to Thief River Falls soon.

Mable Hofstad visited the Hofstad brothers Sunday. Glen and Arlan Hofstad visited there Saturday evening.

Those who came over to visit Birdie Gunderson last week were Rev. Gunderson, Mrs. Juell Chervestad, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Manderud of Goodridge. Birdie's doctor from Fargo St. Lukes hospital lost his life in the hotel fire at Las Vegas last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Gunderson and mother Birdie visited with Shirley's mother Clara Espland at the CNC unit in Thief River Falls hospital Sunday. Birdie also visited with Gunhild Syrtvedt who broke her hip and with Minnie Walhaug. At the hospital Birdie visited with Mrs. Sena Engstrom who is not feeling too well and Mrs. Douglas Olson. Agnes had surgery and is doing just fine. Palmer Johnson has also had surgery and is recuperating.

Northern Division Rivals

Northland community college figures to rank among the favorites in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) basketball race this winter, but the Northmen can expect a strong challenge from both Fergus Falls and Brainerd, with Crookston playing the role of spoiler.

Brainerd, 6-5 in the Northwest Division a year ago and 7-12 overall, landed a top prospect in freshman Dave Nord, an all-state high school player in Brainerd last winter. The 6-4 Nord averaged 25 points and 13.9 rebounds per game for the Warriors. Another top recruit for Brainerd coach Mike Nelson is Fred Adkins, an all-conference and league-leading rebounder at East high school in Kansas City, Mo.

"We have more quality from top to bottom," said Nelson of this year's squad. "We have some good potential. I think we can run with most teams; shoot with most teams; and handle the ball with most teams."

Crookston, meanwhile, has four returning starters from last year's 11-10 team, including 5-11 Keith Strickland of Grand Forks, an MJCAA all-state selection last year when he averaged 21.6 points, 4.1 assists and seven rebounds per game.

But to become a Northwest Division contender Crookston coach Jim Sutherland will have to come up with a center to replace all-conference performer Tim Rolf. The heir-apparent is muscular 6-7 Steve Espeland of Madison.

Strickland, 6-5 Pat Devine (Wakonda, S.D.), who averaged 16 points per game last winter, and 5-11 Dave Ekman (Argyle) are 1980-81 Crookston tri-captains.

But Northland still expects to win the divisional title, a feat accomplished by the Northmen five times over the past seven years. The Northmen were Northwest Division champions in 1973-74, 1974-75 and 1975-76, then earned co-titles with Fergus Falls in 1978-79 and again in 1979-80.

Northland won't begin Northwest Division-counting MJCAA play until a Jan. 16 game against Mesabi of the Northeast Division. The Northmen have 10 nonconference starts to ready themselves for the MJCAA schedule.

Fergus Falls Girls Eye NWAC Title

Fergus Falls high school girls basketball coach Dennis Hanson expects the Otters to have an outstanding 1980-81 season, making them the favorite in the first year of Northwest Athletic Conference girls basketball competition.

Eight letter winners return off a 14-7 Fergus Falls team that challenged heavily favored Detroit Lakes 51-47 in the 1980 North Half Region 8AA tournament.

His team has the ability to run and has depth, reported Hanson. "This year we can count on 10 players to do the job — there isn't a whole lot of difference between our fifth player and the tenth player," said Hanson. "With the depth and being able to run, we have the tools to be a strong contender in Region 8AA this season."

Crookston, Bemidji, East Grand Forks and Thief River Falls will challenge Fergus Falls for the first-ever NWAC girls basketball trophy.

Hanson says Moorhead and Detroit Lakes will present the Otters with their toughest competition in North Half Region 8AA play this winter, with defending Class AA state tournament champion Little Falls and St. Cloud Apollo the favorites in the South Half.

"We saw Little Falls at the New York Mills jamboree and they were good," noted Hanson. "They beat a strong New York Mills club and looked like they were already at their peak."

Thief River Falls, which opens its 1980-81 season Saturday by hosting Tri-County high school of Karlstad, will wait until a Jan. 12 meeting with Bemidji to begin its Northwest Athletic Conference schedule. The Prowlers won't meet Fergus Falls until a season-ending Feb. 23 appearance here.

THIEF RIVER FALLS goalie Jeff Mongoven stretched to kick out an East Grand Forks shot during Saturday's action in the Section 8 high school hockey jamboree played in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Defenseman Mark Harder covered East Grand Forks' Ben Corbid on the play, with Mark Parker (17) of the Green Wave also keeping an eye on things. The Prowlers out-scored the Green Wave 3-2 in a pair of 11-minute periods to complete the day-long, 14-team event.

Prowlers Out-Score Green Wave 3-2 . . .

Jamboree Held Here Saturday

Bemidji and Thief River Falls, coached by brothers Bryan and Wendell Grand, provided the major surprises Saturday during the 14-team Section 8 high school hockey jamboree played in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

The youthful Lumberjacks and Prowlers, skating just 11 seniors between them, "upset" Moorhead and East Grand Forks — both ranked high in a preseason poll among coaches — during their two 11-minute period scrimmage sessions. Bemidji out-scored Moorhead 2-1, while Thief River Falls completed the day-long affair with a 3-2 decision over defending Section 8 champion East Grand Forks.

Rest of the results saw Hallock beat Red Lake Falls 4-1, Fergus Falls got by Lake of the Woods 3-1, Indus and Detroit Lakes skated to a 2-2 tie, Warroad edged Alexandria 2-1 and Roseau gained a 2-2 tie against Crookston.

Only Brainerd, second-year member Crosby-Ironton and first-year Little Falls were absent from the first expanded jamboree program that was sponsored by the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA).

Hallock — RLF

Hallock scored three times in the second period to break a 1-1 tie and open the jamboree with a 4-1 conquest of Red Lake Falls.

Scott Norland's unassisted goal in the first minute of the second period was the winner, with Kevin Beito adding a shorthanded goal three minutes later and Henry Mingo getting the final goal at 7:09.

Fergus Falls — LOW

Indus — Detroit Lakes

Indus came back from a pair of one-goal deficits to tie Detroit Lakes 2-2.

A shorthanded Detroit Lakes goal by Casey Brenk in the first period was matched just 15 seconds later by a Brad Morrison power play goal. Jim Hepola made it 2-1 for the Lakers at 3:26 of the second period before Mark Pennington of Indus tied it at 9:03.

Bemidji — Moorhead

Junior center Jim Toninato, one of 14 underclassmen on the 19-man Bemidji roster, scored two second period goals as the Lumberjacks overcame a 1-0 Moorhead lead.

Toninato tied it just 14 seconds into the second period, then provided the winner with a nifty move in front of the Moorhead net as he went to the backhand at 8:36.

Warroad — Alexandria

John Bjorkman, just a sophomore but already one of the top performers in Section 8, scored twice as Warroad got by Alexandria 2-1.

Bjorkman snapped a wrist shot just inside the pipe at 4:46 of the first period, then broke a 1-1 tie by finishing off a 2-on-1 rush at 7:49 of the second period. Mike Vipond scored for Alexandria.

Crookston — Roseau

Most of the scoring was done in the second period as Crookston and Roseau skated to a 2-2 draw.

A rising slap shot by Tony Sprague provided Crookston with a 1-0 first period lead. An excellent effort by Perry Espe, who shoved the puck under the goalie while being pulled down in front, tied it at 3:30 and began a scoring outburst that saw teammate Mike Vacura make it 2-1 just 1:23 later, only by having the Rams' Mike Ecklund tie it again on a 2-on-1 rush a quick 23 seconds later.

TRF — EGF

Thief River Falls, using five players off last year's Bantam team, scored three times in the second period to topple 1980-81 Section 8 preseason favorite East Grand Forks 3-2.

Alone in front of Thief River Falls goalie Jeff Mongoven, East Grand Forks' Kary Strandell made it 1-0 at 1:59 of the first period.

Sophomore Tom Kenville kept digging away at the puck before he finally put it in the net at 1:50 of the second period, with Tim Bergland and Jeff Imgrund collecting assists on the play.

Brad Buck finished off a partial breakaway by throwing the puck under Thief River Falls back-up goalie Greg Harder at 5:31, but the Prowlers tied it when Imgrund put in Bergland's centering pass from behind the net at 6:27 and then won it with a fourth line goal when Rick Engelstad set up Jeff Moser for a close-in backhand at 8:21.

State DNR Explains Ice Fishing Rules

Department of Natural Resources this week reminded anglers of some ice fishing regulations.

Ice fishermen are allowed to use two lines while open water anglers are restricted to only one line. The use of "tip ups" became legal two years ago and ice fishermen were allowed to use a tip up on each line.

Officials pointed out that anglers must be within 80 feet of their lines at all times to avoid violating the law against fishing with an "unattended" line. They explained that placing the lines more than 80 feet apart would not allow an angler to check one of his lines and still remain within the required distance of the other.

Tip ups are devices with small flags or metal plates which tip to signal the angler that a fish is biting. No tip up may be used which is designed to automatically hook the fish.

Fishing shelters must have the name and address of the owners plainly and legibly painted on the outside in letters and figures at least three inches in height.

A metal tag, furnished with the shelter license, must be attached to the exterior as described in the fishing regulations.

Shelters must be designed so the door can be opened from the outside at any and all times. It is unlawful to have a spear inside a shelter when it is being used for angling.

Officials urged ice fishermen, especially those new to the sport, to read the fishing regulations carefully.

Northmen Beat Alumni 105-68

Sophomore Terry Harris, being groomed for NJCAA All-American honors this winter, scored 44 points and pulled down 16 rebounds Saturday to lead the Northland community college basketball team to a season-opening 105-68 victory over the Northland Alumni.

Harris, a 6-6 forward from Dearborn Heights, Mich., had 30 points by halftime by hitting 13 of his 18 first half field goal attempts and four of six free throws.

Ahead 27-22 with 11:36 remaining in the first half, Northland broke it open by scoring nine straight points — seven by Harris — en route to a 51-33 halftime lead.

"We didn't play too bad defensively, but we made some poor pass selection on offense," mentioned Northland coach Chet Engelman, displeased with the 32 turnovers the Northmen committed. The Alumni lost the ball 29 times in the loosely played affair.

Joining Harris in double figures for the Northmen were Jeff Nolan 15, Joe Kraska 14 and Tony Smith 10. Keith Charbonneau led the Alumni with 16 points, while Doug Engelman had 12 and Mike Carriere 11.

Northland shot 48 per cent from the field, 48-for-100, and went 9-for-12 at the free throw line. The Alumni shot just 29 per cent, 29-for-97, and made 10 of 19 free throws. Northland held a 75-57 rebound advantage, with Eddie Duckworth grabbing 14, Nolan 12 and Smith 12 to go along with Harris' 16.

Fourteen of the 17 Section 8 teams participated in the day-long affair, playing two 11-minute period mini-games. The Prowlers out-scored the defending Section 8 champion Green Wave 3-2.

1981 Fishing Regulations Are Announced By State DNR

Minnesota's inland summer fishing season on walleyes, northern pike and muskellunge will open Saturday, May 16, it was announced recently by Charles Burrows, director of fish and wildlife for the Department of Natural Resources.

Black bass season will open in most of the state on Saturday, May 30, but will open in northeastern Minnesota May 16.

Limits on walleye and bass will be 6, northern pike 3 and muskellunge 1.

Stream trout and splake season in streams tributary to Lake Superior (above the posted boundaries) will open Saturday, April 18. Streams in the counties of Fillmore, Goodhue, Houston, Mower, Olmsted, Wabasha, Winona, Yellow Medicine, Lyon, Redwood and Cottonwood will open March 1.

In all other streams of the state the stream trout season will open April 18.

Otherwise fishing regulations for 1981 will be the same as for 1980, except for two changes affecting anglers on Minnesota-Canada boundary waters:

+ Licensed anglers fishing on Minnesota-Canadian boundary waters are now restricted to one limit of fish while on the water even though they may also have a Canadian license in their possession. Holders of both licenses may possess a limit for each license on shore, however. This change will make current laws and regulations enforceable. The same restriction has applied in Canada and on Minnesota waters of Lake-of-the-Woods for several years.

+ Combined limit of walleye and sauger, each or both in the aggregate, will be six on all Minnesota-Canada boundary waters except Lake-of-the-Woods. On this lake there will be a limit of 14 walleye and sauger combined providing not more than six are walleye.

This change was made because of the lower abundance of sauger in boundary waters east of Lake-of-the-Woods, and the difficulty in distinguishing between the species by many anglers.

1980-81 Sno Pro Racing Season Starts Sunday

Excitement is building for the snowmobilers' world class Sno Pro race to be held Sunday at Winnipeg. With the world's 25 top snowmobile drivers competing on the fastest machines manufacturers can develop, Sunday's race promises to be as thrilling as the Indy 500, predicted race officials.

If this is your first race, you're sure to get caught up in the crowd's enthusiasm, promise officials. And you'll find the race more interesting if you fully understand what is happening down on the oval track.

About the snowmobiles themselves— There are few restrictions on these finely tuned, "experimental" class snow machines. Equipped with carbide-tipped cleats on the sled's drive track for pulling power and a 340-cubic-centimeter, high performance engine for peak potency, these specially designed speed sleds attain velocities close to 100 miles per hour on an ice oval track.

About the racers: Of the 25 drivers, 16 are full-time Sno Pro "annuals" who automatically qualify for every race in the Sno Pro circuit because they scored the highest point totals in last year's races. The other nine racers are independents who have qualified for this race and are trying to amass high enough point totals to knock one of the full-time Sno Pros out of his coveted position.

"The Sno Pro circuit is designed so that the fastest drivers are always racing each other," says Bob Elsner, factory racer for Arctic Enterprises, Inc., and winner of the World Championship at Eagle River in 1979. "But it also gives the up and coming drivers a crack at the top."

Competition begins with a series of five rounds of races designed to pare those 25 racers down to seven finalists. In each round, the 25 drivers are divided into five heats of five drivers each. Drivers earn points in every heat based upon their finish. First place earns five points, second place is worth four points, and so on.

In the first round, then, there are five races — and each driver races once. In the second round, the heats are realigned so that those drivers who raced against each other in the first round will compete against other drivers. The third, fourth, and fifth rounds are also rearranged so that no driver faces the same set of opponents twice.

Each of the 25 drivers races five times in the qualifying rounds. This round robin competition gives them all a sporting chance to show what they can do, and it offers the fans plenty of opportunity to watch their favorite racers.

As the rounds progress, you'll notice that the drivers are taking the banked turns higher and higher — in other words, farther and farther from the inside of the track. The reason is that the inner lanes, which represent the shortest distance around the track, have become cut up by the razor-sharp carbide tips on the bottom of the drive track.

You'll also notice that the spray of ice particles those carbide tips throw up each time a snowmobile rounds a corner pile up in a mound in the middle of the track. This mound of ice debris, which can become several inches thick, is called a berm. It poses a strategical hazard to the speeding snowmobiler.

If a snowmobile inadvertently hits the berm, the driver can easily lose control of his sled — which at 100 miles per hour can be costly. On the other hand, the veteran driver wants to stay as close to this berm as possible, since that is where the ice is freshest and where the carbide tips get the best "bite."

"I try to keep my right ski on the edge of the berm," says Jim Dimmerman, the Arctic Enterprises, Inc., factory racer who won the Heeten Cup in Alexandria last year. "But I always know that the fastest groove around the track is the one closest to disaster."

As the race progresses, the berm is pushed farther and farther to the outside of the track as drivers skim along its inside edge. "Snowmobile racing is particularly challenging because the track changes with every lap," says Dimmerman.

Qualifying rounds mean different things to different drivers. To the independent driver, they are a do or die elimination. He'll be riding his hardest to make the grade. To a well-established driver like Elsner, the qualifying rounds are an opportunity to study an opponent's tactics. Does he take his turns high or low? How well is his machine handling? How quick is he out of the hole (off the starting line)? This information may prove invaluable in the tough feature race that lies ahead.

At the end of the five qualifying rounds, the six drivers who have earned the most points advance to the feature race. The next six drivers, who rank seventh through 12th place in points, compete in a consolation race. The winner of the consolation round also advances to the final race. In the advent of a tie in points for the final race, "tie-breaker" races are held to decide which driver advances.

In the feature race, the winner gets seven points, second place gets six points, and so on. A perfect score for the entire event is 32 points, or seven points for winning the feature race plus 25 points for winning every heat in the qualifying rounds. This tough scoring system produced only two perfect 32s last year in the entire Sno Pro circuit.

In the final race, as the best drivers square off against each other, the first several seconds of the race are critical. Whoever is out front at the first corner gains a distinct advantage over the other drivers.

"Once you're in the lead, everyone behind you has difficulty getting around you," says Dimmerman. Getting out of the hole first demands quick reflexes — and a finely adjusted clutch. Over the entire length of the race, however, it is the machine with the best handling that has the ultimate advantage.

"The smoothest guy going around the corners is generally the winner by the end," notes Dimmerman. "Look for him from the beginning."

The best handling sled is the one that takes the curves the most gracefully. It won't zig-zag, and its left side won't rise off the ground owing to centrifugal force. In a desperate and dangerous gamble to overtake the race leaders, a losing driver may try to "shoot the berm" during a turn. To the outside of the hazardous berm, the driver knows, is fresh ice. If he can get to this fresh ice, he can gain the traction he needs to pass the drivers ahead of him. To reach that fresh ice, he must cross over the berm, a crucial maneuver.

"When you hit that berm at 90 miles an hour, the back end of the snowmobile can't hold onto the ice," explains Dimmerman. "You just have to try to keep control for that split second you pass through the berm and onto the good ice."

Calculated risks with a small margin for error pitting the world's best snowmobiler racers against each other. That's Sno Pro racing.

Team Arctic, the factory racing team of Arctic Enterprises, Inc., is pinning its hopes for Sunday's Sno Pro snowmobile race on two new snowmobiles that are almost entirely hand built.

"We've been working on them since last spring," said Dave Thompson, Team Arctic's crew chief. "For the past two months, the crew and drivers have been working on them 14 hours a day."

Sunday's Winnipeg race, the first of the Sno Pro season, will pit the new snow machines against competition for the first time.

One of Team Arctic's snowmobiles will be driven by Dimmerman, a 25-year-old professional who placed fourth in last year's Sno Pro circuit. Team Arctic's other driver, 38-year-old Elsner, has a string of professional snowmobile racing victories to his name. Elsner finished fifth in the Sno Pro circuit last year.

Thompson is hoping that the hairbreadth precision of the hand-built machines will give the two Team Arctic drivers an edge over the other racers. "A part we used before might have had forty-thousandths of an inch of play," said Thompson. "Now we're down to three-thousands. The closer tolerances result in a lighter and more powerful machine."

Other changes in the Team Arctic racers include a new front end suspension, which the drivers hope will give them better handling around turns; a modified engine that will produce more horsepower than last year's; and a new aerodynamic hood that Thompson says will cut wind resistance.

"We've tested them around our track and we're impressed with what they can do," said Thompson. "Sunday we'll find out how well they'll work under real race conditions."

Wilderness Trip For Adults Is Being Planned

Minnesota Trailbound, a wilderness program for adults, is sponsoring its tenth annual New Year's ski and snowshoe expedition in the Superior national forest near the Canadian border from December 31 to January 4.

Participants in the five-day outing will leave the Twin Cities Wednesday, Dec. 31, and return Sunday evening, Jan. 4. Headquarters for the trip will be several log cabins on a remote lake near the Boundary Waters Canoe Area (BWCA). Winter tents, other equipment and instruction will be available to those who may wish to try winter camping for the first time.

Along with cross-country skiing and snowshoeing, activities will include tree identification, animal track interpretation, dog sledding and Finnish saunas.

The trip fee covers transportation, lodging, snowshoes, sleeping bags and other gear. The cost is less for participants who have their own equipment. Reservations are limited and on a first-come basis. For further information and a brochure of other winter activities and courses call (612) 822-5955, or write Minnesota Trailbound, 3544½ Grand Avenue, Minneapolis, MN 55408.

Duck, Deer Hunting Closed In Most Areas

Except for a special goose hunting zone in southeastern Minnesota, the state's waterfowl hunting season came to a close at sunset Saturday, Nov. 22, the Department of Natural Resource reminded today.

Deer hunting has also ceased for the year except for a special season for muzzleloaders — which started Nov. 29 and ends Dec. 14 — and a bow and arrow hunting season during these same dates in firearms deer zone 3 and that part of zone 1 south of U.S. Highway 2.

Wildlife officials said hunters should check the regulations carefully to insure that they are hunting in the proper area on the correct date.

Although it will be some time before an accurate estimate can be made of the waterfowl bagged, indications are that this was not a very productive season for Minnesota duck hunters.

Many early migrating species, such as blue winged teal and wood duck, had departed the state just prior to the Oct. 4 opener. The hatch of ducks in Canada was down this year because of near drought conditions in some major waterfowl areas so state hunters enjoyed only limited hunting opportunities from these birds.

The DNR said no estimate of the deer harvest can be made until final figures are received from deer registration stations; however, preliminary reports indicated that hunting success may have improved substantially over last year.

'80 Section 3 Swimming Title Won By Alexandria

Alexandria emerged with a slim 3½-point victory margin over defending champion and pre-meet favorite Moorhead Wednesday in the 1980 Section 3 girls swimming and diving championships held at Bemidji State University.

The Cardinals won the two-day, nine-team event with 205½ points, followed by Moorhead 201, Fergus Falls 177, Thief River Falls 165, Brainerd 161½, Bemidji 135, Melrose 44, Park Rapids 39 and Detroit Lakes 31.

Thief River Falls coach John Hustad had hoped to do better, figuring the 19 Prowlers who competed in the state meet-qualifying event would provide enough depth and enough points to rank as a serious title challenger. But Thief River Falls gained just berths in just six of Wednesday's final events through Tuesday's prelims when Alexandria had a 139-138 edge on Moorhead, followed by Fergus Falls 115, Bemidji 97, Brainerd 92, Thief River Falls 76, Melrose 35, Park Rapids 28 and Detroit Lakes 20.

"We had to get people into the finals and we just couldn't do it," explained Hustad. "We just didn't make the big improvements we needed. We swam consistently and in some cases we made improvements. But we didn't make the big improvements we had hoped for. Some of the other teams made some unbelieveable improvements.

"I was very unhappy Tuesday," continued Hustad. "But I wans't Wednesday. They swan well on Wednesday — that's when they made their improvements."

Seniors Betsie Hallstrom and Brenda Lund will represent Thief River Falls in the 1980 Minnesota state swimming meet Friday and Saturday at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota Campus in Minneapolis.

Lund repeated her Section 3 title-winning performance in the diving competition with a meet record 406.4-point total. Hallstrom swam a personal-best 26.17 for a second place finish in the 50-yard freestyle behind Anne Monda of Brainerd, who turned in an impressive 25.88. Top two swimmers in each event; top two relay teams; and top four divers earn state meet spots.

"Betsie really did swim well," acknowledged Hustad. "Brenda started kind of slow, but by her last four or five dives she was really hot."

Thief River Falls' other finalists were Sarah Green in the 100-yard backstroke; Hallstrom in the 100-yard freestyle; divers Lisa Desrocher and Lori Swanson; 200-yard medley relay team of Green, Frankl Kuyath, Shelley McGann and Hallstrom; and the 400-yard freestyle relay team of Kathy Dillon, Lund, McGann and Joan Gaiuque.

Hustad took part of the blame for the Prowlers' lower-than-expected finish.

"I felt I hadn't prepared them properly," offered Hustad. "I think they got too high for some of the dual meets, and as coach that was my doing as much as their's. There's only so many times you can get so emotionally high during the season."

Moorhead won four of the 11 events, including a double record-setting performance by Georgia Corner, who set meet records while winning the 200-yard individual medley in 2:19.41 and the 100-yard backstroke in 1:03.05. The Spuds' Holly Corner took the 100-yard butterfly in 1:04.89 while Moorhead won the 400-yard freestyle relay in 3:48.23.

Barb Hefte of Fergus Falls was the only other double-event winner, taking the 200-yard freestyle in 2:01.89 and winning the 100-yard freestyle in 55:99.

Meet winner Alexandria had individual champions in Barb Lee, with a 5:33.02 in the 500-yard freestyle, and Deena Grenier, with a 1:13.6 in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Bemidji's 1:57.93 in the 200-yard medley relay completed the list of winners.

In addition to the performances by Lund and Georgia Corner, whose accomplishments came in the Wednesday finals, two other meet records were established in Tuesday's prelims when Lee swam 5:30.26 in the 500 and the Lumberjills covered the 200-yard medley relay in 1:57.52.

"This is a different type of region than what it's been," pointed out Hustad, refering to the improved times. "The quality was crazy; just unreal. It's going to be a lot tougher from now on. Those three-month swimmers (instead of year-around AAU performers) won't be quality region swimmers any more."

The Federal Government took control of U.S. Railroads from 1917 until March 1, 1920, under existing federal legislation which provided for government railroad operation in wartime, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

A 1917 strike led by the Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) in the copper mines of Bisbee, Ariz., was ended when the sheriff deported 1,200 strikers, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Evolution Of Distant Star Being Studied

A distant star now dying a violent death may provide astronomers new clues about the last stage of a star's evolution.

For the first time, astronomers have observed the explosion of a star, followed very quickly by clear, intense radio waves. Scientists say the radio waves may signal that the star is about to become a pulsar, the last stage of development for medium-to-large stars.

A pulsar is believed to be formed when a star's remnant — an explosive cloud of hot gases — collapses and begins to spin. It then sends out intense pulses of light and radio waves several times a second, as though it were a kind of lighthouse in space.

This explanation of the birth of a pulsar had been predicted by theory. But until now only two of the 100 known pulsars had been linked directly to the remnants of an exploded star, and this is the first to emit radio waves where none had existed.

First results of this monitoring of the supernova in the galaxy M100 soon will be published in 'Astrophysical Journal Letters'. The radio waves will continue to be monitored at the giant and sensitive Very Large Array radio telescope in New Mexico, recently completed and dedicated.

"It's exciting because it's the first chance to follow a supernova closely as it emits radio waves," said Thijs van der Hulst, astronomy professor at the University of Minnesota, who is studying the dying star with an international team of astronomers: K. W. Weiler of the National science foundation, R. A. Sramek of the National radio astronomy observatory, and N. Panagia of the Institute of Radio Astronomy in Italy. They began with basic information provided by amateur astronomer Gus Johnson of Swanton, Md., who first discovered the supernova last year.

Since its discovery, the object has continued to increase its output of radio waves, van der Hulst said. This is probably because the bright shell of gas left over from the supernova explosion is expanding and thinning, which allows more of the radio waves to escape. The gas cloud is already about a fourth of a trillion miles across (about two "light weeks") and is still, more than a year after the explosion, expanding at a rate of more than 6,000 miles per second.

The radio waves will be monitored periodically to establish more definitely that the object is a new pulsar, van der Hulst said. If the object is a pulsar, the radio waves should begin to show a pulse pattern on other instruments, provided that they are strong enough to be detected on earth, 50 million light years away.

The death throes of stars are now known in broad outline, van der Hulst said. The very largest stars die by expanding like balloons into "red giants," then exploding as supernovas and eventually collapsing into black holes, from whose strong gravity not even light can escape; Medium-large stars like the one being studied also expand as red giants, explode as supernovas and then become pulsars. Medium-to-small stars become red giants, shrink to white dwarfs and eventually cool and dim until they become invisible.

The sun is in this last group, van der Hulst said. It will begin dying in about 5 billion years by expanding out to the orbit of Mars, consuming the earth before the core shrinks again.

It is unlikely that any planets were destroyed in the star death now being monitored, van der Hulst said. But, he said, the planets of a nearby star could have been made uninhabitable by the ultraviolet radiation from the explosion.

Army Reservists Test for Safety

An Army Reserve staff sergeant fires during testing of an indoor range. The Army recently devised an efficient method to improve the air quality of indoor ranges by use of fans and a perforated pegboard partition.

Four men, armed with enough weapons and ammunition to hold out for days and outfitted in brightly colored ear protectors to ward off the sound of their devastation, commenced firing. One after another, bullets of various shapes and sizes ripped into their targets. The ringleader, bent over an apparatus resembling a geiger counter, urged them to continue shooting.

The St. Valentine's Day Massacre it was not. Instead, it was a test by Army Reservists firing rounds from M-16 rifles and .45-caliber pistols at the U.S. Army Reserve Center in Columbia, Mo. The purpose of the test was to determine whether the indoor rifle range there satisfies federal safety requirements.

A year ago, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) questioned whether indoor ranges constituted a safety hazard because of a potential danger of airborne lead contamination. This cast doubt on the air quality of military, police and civilian-run indoor ranges throughout the country.

The U.S. Army acted immediately by voluntarily closing some of its older indoor ranges. Tests showed that the ranges' design did not properly distribute air, causing air to swirl back toward the marksmen.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers went to work on designing a range that would provide proper air movement. A perforated pegboard partition was installed three feet in front of the permanent rear wall, thereby forming an open space or plenum. A powerful fan forced fresh air downward into the plenum and out through the partition, past the firer to an exhaust fan downrange, and to the outside.

Initial results are most favorable. The U.S. Army Environmental Hygiene Agency found that the indoor range here far exceeds all environmental safety requirements. Once final data analysis is concluded, the Army will modify its ranges accordingly. The data and design will be passed on to civilian groups. And, after a year's respite, many Army Reservists will again be able to come in from the cold to sharpen their marksmanship.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS.

Q — What is the maximum amount I can borrow on a Veterans Administration guaranteed home loan? I've been told it is four times the $25,000 guaranty. Is this correct?

A — There is no legal limit on the amount of a loan. The VA will guarantee 60 per cent of a loan not to exceed $25,000. The amount you may borrow is determined by the loan institution's lending policy and your ability to repay the loan.

Q — When the Veterans Administration suspends or terminates an educational award payment on a veteran, must the VA also notify the veteran of this action?

A — Yes. The VA must send a notice of suspended or terminated benefits to the veteran at the same time as the action to suspend or stop an educational award. The notice must also explain the veteran's entitlement to know the reasons for the suspension or termination and the veteran's right to respond.

Q — What is the maximum annual clothing allowance an eligible veteran may receive from the Veterans Administration?

A — The maximum annual clothing allowance is $240. Eligible is any veteran entitled to receive compensation for a service-connected disability for which he or she wears or uses one or more prosthetic or orthopedic appliances, including a wheelchair, which the VA determines to wear out or tear clothing.

Q: If a veteran dies before a home loan guaranteed by the Veterans Administration is repaid, will the VA pay off the balance?

A: No. The surviving spouse or other co-borrower must continue making payments. However, mortgage life insurance, available from private companies, can provide protection against a survivor inheriting large monthly payments.

Q: I was in the Army from February 3, 1956 through February 2, 1958, and was honorably discharged. Recently I have become totally disabled due to an accident which was non-service connected. Am I eligible for any disability payments from the Veterans Administration?

A: No. In order to be eligible for VA pension, a veteran must have had honorable service for 90 days or more, and that service must include at least one day during a wartime period. The period of your service is deemed to be peacetime service under the law.

Q: I am eligible for Vietnam-era GI Bill education assistance but I have not completed high school. Can I use the GI Bill to complete high school?

A: Yes. You can complete high school using the GI Bill. This will not affect your entitlement to benefits for training at the college level.

Q: Is an unmarried minor stepchild serving in the armed forces still considered by the Veterans Administration to be a member of a veteran's household?

A: Yes, provided the relationship of the stepchild is a member of the veteran's household was established prior to entrance into the armed forces.

Q: I have completed both college and specialized training with Veterans Administration educational benefits. Now I wish to go into business for myself. Does the VA make business loans?

A: No. The Veterans Administration does not make business loans. However, loans and business management advice for veterans are available through the Small Business Administration.

Q: I am a 100 per cent service-connected veteran receiving Veterans Administration compensation. I am also attending school full time and receive education benefits. I receive allowances for my dependents (a wife and two children) under both programs. One of my sons, aged 17, will begin college this fall. He will not be 18 until early next year. How long will I receive pay for him as my dependent?

A: He will be included in your compensation and education allowances until he reaches age 18. He will then become eligible for benefits under the VA dependents' education program.

Q: Does the Veterans Administration specially-adapted housing program permit remodeling of a home owned by an eligible veteran?

A: Yes. The specially-adapted housing program is for veterans with permanent and total service-connected disabilities who meet specific eligibility requirements to buy, build or remodel a home to accommodate such disabilities.

Q: I am receiving a non-service-connected Veterans Administration pension. My wife died in June. There have been no other changes in my dependency or income status. Must I report Social Security benefits paid her up to the time of her death?

A: Yes. However, you should show the cost of your wife's illness and burial if you paid for it yourself. These are allowable exclusions which serve to reduce countable income for VA purposes.

Q: May a veteran obtain a Veterans Administration guaranteed loan on a home which appraises lower than the sales price?

A: Yes. But the veteran must pay the difference from his own resources without borrowing. The VA will not guarantee a loan in excess of the appraised value of the property.

Auto Tune-ups Help Stretch Budget Dollars

Automotive tune-ups are a "best buy" for consumers trying to stretch inflation dollars, advises the automotive information council (AIC).

A well-maintained car will perform more reliably and economically, so periodic tune-ups actually can save money and can avoid an untimely "no-start" situation.

AIC has compiled the following findings on how much gas an untuned engine wastes and how much fuel tuned vehicles can save:

Amount of fuel wasted every week by U.S. car owners because of lack of maintenance equals the amount of water that flows over Niagara Falls in one minute.

A major oil company's fuel-economy program found 23 per cent of 120,000 cars studied did not meet energy-efficiency standards. Estimated fuel wastage of these non-efficient cars was as much as 140 gallons per car per year.

A study of New Jersey's vehicle inspection program revealed that untuned vehicles use 58 more gallons yearly than tuned vehicles. As a result of this study, the department of transportation projected that tuned vehicles could save five billion gallons of gasoline a year.

Another oil company study showed one misfiring spark plug can waste up to two gallons per tankfull.

An automotive parts manufacturer's study found an 11.36 per cent improvement average in fuel economy after tune-up.

American automobile association says tune-ups result in an immediate 9 to 15 per cent increase in mileage.

Environmental protection agency says on the average a tuned-up vehicle gets approximately 4 to 12 per cent better gas mileage than one that has not been properly maintained.

Car owners can best determine when to have their car tuned-up by following the recommended maintenance schedule found in the owner's manual, says AIC.

'U' Budget Cuts Force Hog Test Cost On Farmer

by George E. Jordan
University News Service

Budget cuts at the University of Minnesota may force hog producers to pay the major costs of a new statewide effort to combat a form of rabies.

A state regulation that took effect October 6 requires hog herds to be quarantined and tested for pseudorabies, a disease that causes "mad itch," a form of brain damage, and spontaneous abortions in pregnant swine.

The new law applies only to hogs used for breeding and offered for sale. A state or federal veterinarian quarantines herds on an owner's property and takes blood samples from hogs older than six months. The samples are sent to the university's veterinary diagnostic laboratories for tests.

If no disease is found, the quarantine is lifted. But if a single breeding hog has the disease, the entire herd remains quarantined while samples are drawn from each animal. Infected animals are destroyed.

Lab tests, according to a regulation of the state board of animal health, are to be conducted at state expense "if personnel and funds are available." The legislature allocated a special appropriation of $701,000 to the laboratory to supplement operations. But a recent budget cut imposed on the university by Gov. Al Quie resulted in a reduction of $41,637 in the diagnostic laboratories' funding.

Dr. Harold Kurtz of the veterinary laboratories said he expected the unit to receive a large number of samples by mid-November. "We're required to run the tests," he said, "but we haven't been given money to do that many tests."

Dr. J. G. Flint, state veterinarian, said that "if there's no money in the diagnostic laboratory to do the laboratory testing for free, the hog owner will have to pay for it." The lab charges $5 to process the first pseudorabies sample and $2 for each additional sample from the same herd.

Dr. Robert Dunlop, dean of the college of veterinary medicine, said the testing regulation came at a bad time. "Our budget has been cut at a time when we are receiving an exceptional load of samples," he said. He added that the lab would be able to test samples for free for the time being, but that it might be forced eventually to charge for the service.

On October 17 the board of animal health will vote on a similar quarantine and testing program for cattle. If approved, the law will require the diagnostic laboratory to test cattle herds for anaplasmosis.

Proposed rule also provides for free tests if personnel and funds are available.

The addition of such a program could cause a "crunch" in the laboratory, Kurtz said. He said the lab had received more than 2,000 samples from cattle herds in the last two weeks.

Notice Of Additional Time To Intervene In Private Line Telephone Service Rate Case Before The Minnesota Public Utilities Commission

This is to notify all telephone customers using Northwestern Bell Telephone Company private line telephone service (foreign exchange service, tie-line service, radio control circuits, alarm and security circuits, off-premises extensions, private line data circuits, as well as other miscellaneous services not generally considered to be a part of basic residence or business telephone service) that the deadline for intervening in the private line rate case presently before the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission has been extended to December 15, 1980.

All private line telephone service customers were notified of these telephone service rate changes and of the rate case before the Commission by a letter mailed in late September and by published notices. The previously mailed notice set a deadline for intervention of September 30, 1980. The purpose of this notice is to notify our customers that the deadline has been changed to December 15, 1980.

Any customer wishing to intervene in this case should contact Hearing Examiner Harry S. Crump at the Office of Administrative Hearings, 1745 University Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55104, (612) 296-8111, on or before December 15, 1980, the new deadline for intervention.

Ag Loan Demands Are Below Normal

Demand for agricultural loans in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, northwestern Wisconsin and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan remained somewhat below normal in the third quarter, and it should at best get back to normal in the fourth quarter, according to the latest agricultural credit conditions survey published by the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis. However, agricultural income and debt repayments were surprisingly strong in the third quarter and are expected to continue to be strong in the fourth quarter.

In the bank's July survey of agricultural lenders in the Ninth district, bankers said that they expected interest rates to decline in the third quarter, but not enough to drive the demand for ag loans higher than normal. Their expectations were realized. Interest rates on district agricultural loans did move down toward national money market rates, reducing their spread over the federal funds rate from six percentage points in June to three and one-half points in mid-September. Federal funds are funds loaned, usually on a short-term basis, between financial institutions. Interest rates were still at historically high levels, averaging 14 per cent on short-term ag loans in the third quarter.

Partly because of the high interest rates, ag loan demand in the third quarter was below normal. Many of the 125 bankers who responded to the survey agreed with the North Dakota banker who observed that farmers were "not in a buying mood." High interest rates along with large outstanding debts have apparently puersuaded many farmers to hold off a bit longer on buying capital items such as machinery or breeding stock. Thus, few bankers in the October survey reported high loan-to-deposit ratios or unusually high rates of loan refusals, loan referrals or funds shortages.

A majority of the surveyed bankers expects the demand for ag loans, both short and long-term, to return to normal in the fourth quarter. The expected strengthening in demand does not appear to be related to interest rates nor to be caused by higher earnings and renewed investment. High livestock feed costs and poor crops in some areas probably account for most of the expected increase in the demand for ag loans, particularly short-term operating loans.

Although ag loan demand was low, farm income has been surprisingly strong. Slightly more than half of the surveyed bankers reported that farm earnings in the third quarter were the same as or higher than they were a year ago, despite the fact that an overwhelming majority had expected earnings to be lower. The higher earnings can be attributed to the rebound in agricultural prices that followed the nationwide crop and animal losses of July and August.

Higher farm earnings could readily lead to more investment and higher farm debt — but they did not this time. High interest rates have provided a strong incentive for farmers to reduce existing debts, defer capital expenditures, and pay cash when possible. The geographic pattern of farm earnings and debt repayment in the district suggests that farmers who could afford it have indeed reduced their indebtedness. In three large areas that reported low farm earnings because of bad weather or unfavorable cattle prices — the area of Montana west of the continental divide, a large area sweeping from Havre and Billings in Montana across the Dakotas almost to the Minnesota line, and the Roseau-Crookston area in Minnesota — debt repayment remained below normal, changing little from the second quarter. In the rest of the district, farmers had unexpected increases in earnings, and there, in contrast, they repaid old debts and restrained new borrowing.

For the fourth quarter, most rural bankers in the survey expect that farm income will be the same as last year or greater. In keeping with this, few bankers expect any adverse change in farmers' ability to repay debt. However, a noteworthy minority of the bankers expects farm income in the fourth quarter to be less than a year ago. These bankers are predominately located in the three areas of district that currently have low farm income. In these low-income areas, bankers expect that the demand for refinancing loans will decline only slightly from the high levels that prevailed earlier.

44th Annual Conservation Convention Set

"Natural Resources — A Local Responsibility" is the theme for the 44th annual convention of the Minnesota Association of Soil and Water Conservation districts scheduled for December 7, 8 and 9 at Holiday Inn in St. Cloud. Over 500 conservation leaders from around the state are expected to attend.

Keynote speaker for the convention banquet Monday evening will be Dean Curtis, farm broadcaster from radio station KDHL at Faribault. Curtis is a well-known advocate of conservation and former recipient of the distinguished service award of the Minnesota Association of Soil & Water Conservation districts.

Four different "mini-sessions" have been planned for the convention, which are information - discussion meetings on topics of current interest. This year's sessions are on "The Local Role in Resource Management," "An Urban Program for Districts," "Water Planning," and "The Art and Power of Political Influence." Each of the mini-sessions will be offered twice so that those in attendance can become better informed on more than one topic.

Business sessions at the convention will include action on 40 different resolutions which have been proposed by local soil and water conservation districts. Some of the resolution topics include special tax levy for local soil and water conservation districts, increased funding by the state, and liability insurance for districts. Several resolutions relate to the state cost-share program and advocate inclusion of a mulch tillage practice and farmstead windbreaks. The "Redalen Bill" for mandatory erosion control will also be discussed. Also included in the business session will be election of association president for the coming year.

Convention officials report that reservations for this year's convention are running ahead of the last convention which was conducted in Duluth.

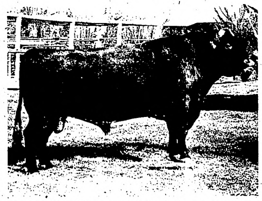
POPPLER'S



PUREBRED BULLS have been used for many years in the Milking Shorthorn herd of the Richard Peterson family at Plummer. This seven-year-old bull has been used in the herd for several years and was recently sold to Minnesota Valley Breeders association at New Prague. Nadolski's Bettina's Promise, classified VG86, has 24 daughters averaging 12,788 pounds of milk and 449 pounds of butterfat in their first lactations. Eight of the daughters classify VG and 10 desirable. The granddam of this bull, Sunny View Little Princess, had lifetime production of 281,632 pounds of milk and 11,801 pounds of butterfat with a top record of 29,385 pounds of milk and 1,225 pounds of butterfat. The bull is from a top herd in Ashley, Ill.

Alta Peterson Family Builds Dairy Herd

replacement in the milking string and the herd will soon consist entirely of registered animals. The herd registry name of "Twin Elms Farm" came from two large and prominent elm trees on the property.

The Peterson herd has been on DHIA testing with the Red Lake county association for a number of years. Present record of the 28-cow herd collectively is an average of 10,585 pounds of milk and 351 pounds of butterfat. Pride and joy of the herd is Hilda III which had a first lactation record of 16,832 pounds of milk and 527 pounds of fat in 342 days and a mature equivalent of 19,642 and 586.

"We're quite proud of the progress in our herd," Lowell said. "Daughters of the bull we just sold to Minnesota Valley Breeders will be the top producers nationally in their age groups in both milk and butterfat. One is in the Eldo Bentley herd at Twin Valley and one at the Donald Johnson herd at Pelican Rapids."

Remodeling is now being done to the dairy barn with new metal and new fluorescent lighting inside and new red metal outside. Two silos are used for corn silage and chopped oats, barley and hay. It also takes about 8,000 to 9,000 80-pound bales of alfalfa hay to bring the herd through the winter.

Mrs. Alta Peterson has been an adult leader in the Happy Go Lucky 4-H club for more than 20 years. Bill was a member for about 10 years and now is nearing 25 years of service as an adult leader. Lowell was a member for a dozen years and the three girls have more than 25 years of club work among them.

This was the second year for the Petersons to show and sell at the state Milking Shorthorn sale. In the first year last year they had the second high selling bred heifer and the second high cow.

"We have a new bull in the herd now that it took us nine months to find," Lowell added. "On paper he has a tremendous background and physically he looks like he's going to be a good one. That's the problem in this business; it takes several years to find out if your breeding program has been successful. You don't know until the offspring of the bull you've been using have completed a production record. If you make a mistake, it hurts for a long time.

If effort and study and selection make a difference, however, the Petersons should be in for another round of herd improvement. They are a farm family that takes the dairy business entirely serious.

State Averages With Others On Fire Statistics

How does Minnesota compare with the rest of the country on fire statistics? About average, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Comparisons for the calendar year 1979 were taken from the annual report published by the national fire protection association (NFPA).

Minnesota report is from the Minnesota fire incident reporting system, a relatively new system developed by the national fire data center in Washington and adatped to meet Minnesota's requirements by the state fire marshal's office.

Nationally, 7,780 civilians died in fires which was a 4.3 per cent reduction from 1978. Ninety of the 91 fire deaths in Minnesota last year were civilians. There were 328 civilian injuries in the state compared to 31,325 nationally.

In the propoerty loss area, the national estimate was $5.75 billion, a 27.8 per cent increase. Minnesota had a total of $68,871,818, up from $65,488,864 in 1978. Minnesota had 32,063 fire calls compared to 2,845,500 nationally.

The NFPA said the increase in fire property loss was attributable, in part, to a dramatic increase in "large loss" fires. Losses from these fires are defined as those causing more than $500,000 damage or more.

Minnesota state fire marshall division inspectors and investigators continue to work diligently in the area of fire safety inspections.

Library Survey Shows Need For Co-op Services

Cooperative reference services were voted the number one need by area librarians in a survey just completed. Combined holdings lists, directories of special resources and topics for continuing education workshops followed. The survey also indicated a need for regular communication between libraries in order to coordinate service policies.

Respondents represented 82 special libraries, academic libraries, public libraries and library systems and school media centers in a 23-county region. Conducted by the Northern Lights library network, an intertype library cooperative in northwestern Minnesota, the survey assessed strengths and needs and gathered information for a proposed directory.

An advisory committee composed of staff members from libraries of all types and sizes throughout the area is preparing program proposals for 1981. Based on the results of the survey and local planning meetings they rank the development of communications as the top priority, essential to cooperation of any type. Other leading priorities are planning for a bibliographic data base in order to identify and locate regional information resources; and developing and encouraging resource sharing, especially at a local level.

Northern Lights library network is one of a statewide system of multi-type, multi-county cooperatives as provided by Minnesota law in 1979. Planning and implementation funds are from state and federal sources. Membership is voluntary. Citizen governance is provided by trustees from regional public library systems in the area. Its purpose is to enable individual libraries to improve their services. It does not duplicate or replace existing libraries, but provides a vehicle by which they can coordinate their activities in a cost-effective manner.

Copies of the survey report and recommendation are available from the Northern Lights Library Network office, Box 247, Detroit Lakes, MN 56501, or by calling 218-847-4237.

USDA Requests Public Input On Milk Question

Consumers, dairy farmers and milk handlers may comment until Jan. 2, 1981 on a U.S. department of agriculture impact statement concerning a petition to change the pricing of reconstituted milk under all federal milk marketing orders.

P. R. Smith, assistant secretary for marketing and transportation, said the petition — submitted by the community nutrition institute, a processor and three individual consumers — asks for a public hearing to consider removing commercially reconstituted milk from the Class I pricing provisions of milk orders.

Reconstituted milk can be made by combining nonfat dry milk and butterfat with water. Currently, all milk products used for fluid consumption are priced at the Class I level, the highest-priced class under federal milk orders.

Smith pointed out that, in response to the CNI proposal, USDA had asked for public comments on whether a hearing should be held on the issue. At the same time, a study was initiated to determine the potential impact of the proposal on dairy farmers, consumers and milk handlers. He said the preliminary impact study does not recommend whether a hearing should be held.

Through this current comment procedure, the public will have an opportunity to evaluate the impact statement and to provide USDA with comments within 45 days on the analysis. Also, the public is invited to submit any additional proposals that might be appropriate, considering the possible economic impacts of the CNI proposal. Smith said this is in keeping with administration policy to provide for increased public participation in USDA's decision-making process.

Comments should be sent to the Deputy Administrator, Agricultural Marketing Service, 3069-So., USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

The impact study will be published in the November 17 Federal Register. Copies of the study will be mailed to known interested parties as soon as they become available. Copies also may be obtained from the market administrator for each marketing order or from the Dairy Division, AMS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

LOOKING OVER TOPS for quilts sewn by Mrs. Ida Gustafson (center) of Viking are a couple of members of the sewing circle of Zion Lutheran church in Viking. Dagney Peterson (left) and Sophie Braddock are among the small group of ladies which gathers twice a month from January through the middle of May and August through October to tie quilts. Dagney prepares much of the material for the quilt-making, pressing pieces of material salvaged from old clothes which are disassembled by her brother, Robert Anderson, 79. When the sewing circle gathers for an afternoon of work, the members plan on tying 14 quilts before they finish for the day.

Not Really Rags, But Real Riches . . .

Rags To Riches Story At Viking Involves Service

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

There's a rags to riches story in the city of Viking, and another story within that larger tale. And although the people involved are not financiers or stock market manipulators, they are rich in a way many of us may never expect to be.

The rags in the story are not really rags, either. They are discarded garments collected from a number of different sources. Disassembled, pressed and cut into strips or blocks, they are sewn into quilt tops and then tied into quilts, destined for relief shipment overseas to needy people. For many of them, possession of a quilt for shelter from the midday sun and warmth from the night time cold makes their own lives richer.

In November the Zion Lutheran church of Viking shipped 160 quilts to Lutheran World Relief, the organization which distributes them throughout the world. Those quilts were produced during the past year by eight or nine ladies of the church who take their quilt-making seriously.

Among that group the efforts of one lady stand out as exceptional — and that is the story within a story. Mrs. Ida Gustafson, who ~~lived right across the street from~~ the church, sewed 124 of the quilt tops during the period from October of 1979 to October of 1980. She uses a treadle-type sewing machine which she bought rebuilt and secondhand for $25 in 1915. Mrs. Gustafson is 94 years young.

"I'm not one who can sit around with nothing to do," she explains simply. "I have to keep busy. Sewing quilt tops and tying quilts gives me something to do. It's nothing, really."

Nothing? On the contrary, it is definitely something of importance, to those who are inspired by her efforts and to those who eventually receive the products of her labor.

Ida was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Halvorson of New Solum township on July 11, 1886, the eldest of 10 children. She completed her eighth grade education in District 34 school in New Solum township, then went to summer school and began teaching school herself.

She taught at Rosewood where school was held for five months of the year, two months in the late fall and three months in the winter and early spring. In 1904 she taught a term at the Gustafson school where she had 20 pupils in first through eighth grade. Because the Rosewood school wanted her back to teach there, and the Gustafson school board was agreeable to the arrangement, she taught six days a week at the Gustafson school to shorten the term, and then went back to teaching at Rosewood.

Her first paycheck was $33 for a month of teaching, and for the second term she got a raise, to $35. From her first check, she remembers, she paid $8 for her room and board bill and bought a new coat for $7. The remainder she gave to her father to help him pay his taxes. "Children tried to help out their families in those days," she explained. "It was the thing to do."

One of Ida's students was a new arrival from Norway who wanted to learn the English language. He was 17 or 18 years old, Ida estimates, and he began with the first grade reader. "I know he was older than I was," she recalls.

Ida married Olaf Greenley and they moved to Barton, N.D., where her husband was employed in a hardware store. He managed the co-op store when it opened in Viking, then in 1912 they moved to Alma, Mont., to homestead on a half-section of land nine miles from the Canadian border and 21 miles from Joplin. They built a 12x16 "Shack" where Ida and the children lived while Olaf went to work for the Advance Rumley company out of Leeds, N.D.

Under the homestead laws, persons occupying the land had to open 40 acres for agriculture and have at least 20 acres of land in crop. There were a number of other people from the Barton, N.D., community who also homesteaded in the area and they all worked together, sharing labor and machinery.

To acquire title to the property, they were to live on it for five years. But Olaf decided he had been separated from his family too much so they sold their livestock and machinery, proved up on the balance of their claim time with cash, and moved to Grand Forks in 1915. It was there that Ida bought her second-hand sewing machine.

When Olaf died in 1918, Ida moved back to New Solum township to live with her father. She went to work at the co-op store in the spring of 1920 and has been a Viking area resident ever since. She married Carl Gustafson in 1922 and he died in 1975 at the age of 91.

For the past five or six years Ida has been active with the sewing circle in making quilts. The ladies gather twice a month from January through the middle of May and August through October. They tie 14 quilts in an afternoon of work, partake of a hearty lunch and socialize while they work at two separate tables.

Most of the quilt tops are sewn by Mrs. Gustafson and the backs are often pieced together from whatever material is available. The lining is an acrylic batting used commercially for making insulated winter clothing. Wool yarn for tying the quilts is brought by the ladies working on the project.

Mrs. Gustafson is insistent on crediting others for the work that is done. "I wouldn't have anything to do if it wasn't for Dagney and Robert," she SPARKLING EYES and a ready smile reflect the love of life exhibited by Mrs. Ida Gustafson of Viking. Although she reached her 94th birthday on July 11, she spent much of the past year making quilt tops for her church sewing circle. When the organization sent 160 quilts this fall to Lutheran World Relief, Ida had the satisfaction of knowing that she had sewn tops for 124 of them. Her treadle type sewing machine was purchased 65 years ago when Ida lived in Grand Forks. She paid $25 for the rebuilt machine and says it has never given her any trouble. . . that she couldn't fix herself.

Rezoning Discussed; City Reviews Land Annexation

Discussion of the initiation by city council of a rezoning amendment for 10 acres of Diocesan property was the predominant topic at the city planning commission meeting Monday evening. The session was held before the city council, planning commission, Thief River Falls chamber of commerce, representatives of the town of North and other interested parties met at an adjourned city council meeting to discuss the proposed annexation west of town. (That meeting was adjourned from the November 25 city council meeting).

Ten acres of property described as an area near Greenwood street and Allwood acres addition that is bounded on the east by Allwood acres, which is zoned R-2 (medium density) bearing a mixed land use consisting of a single family and duplex dwellings; on the west by southern addition, which is zoned R-2 and is wholly developed as single family dwellings; on the north by First Southeast addition, which is zoned R-1 (low density residential), and is wholly developed as single family; and on the south by unplatted land zoned agriculture. The Bible Baptist denomination also has a church on this property.

Requested by petitioners in the area was a zoning change from agriculture to R-1. Because city council members decided at their November 25 meeting to accept the planning commission's recommendations to deny the two zoning changes in that area requested by Investment Development company of Fargo, this request became viable, with the planning commission removing it from the table last evening. (Planning commissioners had tabled the request at their November 3 meeting).

Major questions to be considered with the proposed zoning change, according to Jack Quinlivan, city planner, are 'Why should the change be granted'? and 'Why would R-1 zoning be more desirable'?

Following discussion, commissioner Duane Walton introduced the resolution to recommend the denial of the request and to pass the issue to the city council for discussion at its next regular meeting scheduled for December 9. The reasons for the denial, he said, are because, "the zoning request is not consistent with zoning in the surrounding area, and is not consistent with this commission's planning procedures which are to avoid rezoning an area which bears no specific use."

One and one-half hour discussion followed on the issue of the proposed annexation west of town. During that time, sewer, water and storm drainage service costs in the area (if annexed) were discussed by Jim E. Walker, city engineer, and utility costs by Arlo Rude, distribution engineer with the city utilities department.

A background summary of the proposed annexation includes the following:

Approximately one year ago, Alpha Investments of Thief River Falls initiated annexation proceedings for 67.9 acres of land northeast of the intersection of highways 1 and 59. Planning commission recommended, in March of 1980 that the city take a position in opposition to the annexation. However, the city council opted to take no stand on the issue.

Municipal board, a state organization set up to review annexations, had heard arguments for and against the annextation and decided in May to continue the annexation hearing at a later date. Notice arrived that the hearing would reconvene December 3. However, after a discussion with Terry Merritt, executive director of the municipal board, and Robert Wurst, city attorney, it was resolved that the hearing would be conducted January 15 at 10 a.m. in the council chambers of the city auditorium. This would allow more time to further discuss the issue with interested parties (a request made at the last regular city council meeting, November 25). The hearing, which will offer all persons an opportunity to be heard, will include a much larger area than previously petitioned (208 acres total).

Planning commissioners had denied the annexation of

I-500 Meeting Set Tonight To Plan Activities

Chamber of commerce committee making arrangements for the I-500 snowmobile race stop-over in Thief River Falls will meet tonight (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the chamber of commerce meeting room.

Items on the agenda are a fund night ticket sale and activities, press banquet, hospitality, security, hall of fame and other activities, according to Don Grabanski, committee chairman.

The committee has established an expenditure budget to cover activities connected with the race and the publication of a convention and tourism brochure.

The International-500 race from Winnipeg to St. Paul will complete its first leg in Thief River Falls Saturday, January 24.

Flea Market Saturday At City Auditorium

In response to many requests for a winter time flea market, a pre-Christmas flea market is being planned for this Saturday at the Thief River Falls city auditorium from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Arrangements are being made by John Zukatis, organizer of the summer flea markets which have proved to be popular events the third Saturday of each month May through September at Floyd B. Olson park.

The Christmas flea-market is open to everyone and so far has attracted participants from Thief River Falls, Grand Forks, Brainerd, Baudette and Roseau with such varied items as coins, antiques, wood toys, handicrafts, produce, collectibles and many others, Zukatis said.

Space is still available and a good turnout of both buyers and sellers is expected. If the event meets expectations it will be made an annual project. For more information contact Zukatis at Roseau.

Public Urged To Report On Waste Sites

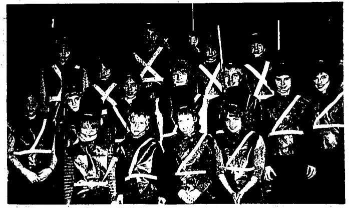
Minnesota pollution control agency's (MPCA) hazardous waste site strike group has set-up a toll-free phone "hotline" for citizens to report suspected improper hazardous waste disposal sites.

"Signs that may indicate improper hazardous waste management," said strike group leader Tim Scherkenbach, "include abandoned or buried barrels; oil or sludge spills; chemical odors, such as those similar to turpentine, glue or rotten eggs; and dead vegetation or wildlife near suspected disposal sites."

Persons should not try to investigate suspected sites any further than looking or sniffing, Scherkenbach emphasized, because of possible health dangers. Rather, citizens should call the MPCA and describe the site as best they can, including if possible the specific location; the site owner's name, address and phone number; the type of facility involved (dump, storage, treatment of industry); and the quantity and nature of the waste (in barrels, liquid, sludge or solvent, etc.) Agency staff then will investigate each report, he said, including those from persons wishing to remain anonymous.

Citizens with hazardous waste information calling long-distance to the MPCA's Roseville offices should dial toll-free 1-800-652-9747 from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Emergency spills after the above hours should be called in to 612-296-7373, the MPCA's 24-hour emergency number.



A COMPANY of toy soldiers is on display in the magic toy shop in the production of "The Toys Take Over Christmas", one of three Christmas plays presented during the holiday season by the local Chameleon Theatre group. Cost is $3 for adults and $1 for children. Advance tickets may be purchased at Larson Music in Thief River Falls.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Jesme-Anderson Vows Exchanged At Gatzke

Miss Diann Yvonne Jesme and Gregory Earl Anderson exchanged marriage vows on September 27, at 3:00 p.m., at the United Lutheran church at Gatzke.

The parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Floyd L. Jesme of Middle River and Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Anderson of Stephen.

Rev. Robert Amundson officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 400 relatives and friends. Mary Gentry, Middle River, and Melanie Lunsetter, Gatzke, friends of the couple, were organists and accompanists. "Nadia's Theme," from "The Young and the Restless," and Lohengrin's "Wedding March," were the processionals, and "Ode to Joy," the recessional. During the ceremony, Terry Ruud, Gatzke, a friend, sang "Longer," and "Wedding Song," and Julie Jesme, a sister of the bride, and Mary Gentry sang, "You Light Up My Life."

Wrought iron candelabra with pink tapers formed the chancel setting. An arrangement of silk flowers, matching the bride's bouquet, graced the piano.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was attired in a Chantilly lace gown with Venice lace outlining the Queen Anne neckline and forming the cuffs on her long bishop sleeves. Three rows of matching lace bordered her softly flared skirt which flowed back into a cathedral length train. Lace also edged her double-tiered veil of bridal illusion, held by a corresponding lace headpiece. She carried a cascade of fresh red roses, pink carnations, and purple and burgundy asters.

Serving as the bride's personal attendant was Bonnie Reed, Thief River Falls, a friend.

Maid of honor was Colleen Anderson, Stephen, sister of the groom. Other attendants were Debbie Fugleberg, Thief River Falls, and Julie Jesme, Middle River, sisters of the bride; Karen Anderson, Stephen, sister of the groom, and Connie Jesme, Williston, N.D., sister-in-law of the bride. They wore burgundy, floor-length, accordion pleated gowns styled with blouson bodices featuring a softly gathered yoke that flowed back over the shoulders forming a deep cowl in the back. They carried natural fans with burgundy and pink roses tied with pink ribbon streamers. In their hair they wore a cluster of burgundy star flowers and babies' breath. Their gold bracelets, earrings and necklaces were gifts from the bride.

Wearing a matching burgundy gown with a gathered skirt and short puffy sleeves was the flower-girl, Jana Aune, Thief River Falls, the bride's cousin. The rings were carried by her brother, Nicholas Aune.

Donn Anderson, Stephen, attended his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Glen Fugleberg, Thief River Falls, brother-in-law of the bride; and Keith Jesme, Thief River Falls, Myron Jesme and Terry Jesme, Williston, N.D., brothers of the bride. They wore black tuxedos with white ruffled shirts edged in burgundy. The boutonnieres were burgundy roses with babies' breath. A matching boutonniere complemented the all-white attire worn by the groom. Gold engraved key chains were the groom's gifts to his attendants.

Ushers were Wallace Anderson, Middle River, uncle of the groom; Todd Peterson, Middle River, friend of the groom; Lyle Aune, Thief River Falls, uncle of the bride; and Barry Skoglund, Middle River, cousin of the bride. The acolytes were Jeffery Newton, Thief River Falls, and Louie Cater, Middle River, cousins of the bride and groom, respectively.

The mother of the bride was attired in a pink floor-length gown topped by a pink lace cape with butterfly sleeves. The groom's mother wore a long-sleeved, floor-length gown of an aqua sheer banded with matching lace. Their corsages of burgundy and pink roses were accented with babies' breath and white ribbon.

Honor guests were Mrs. Alice Jesme of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Aune, Grygla, grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Marion Cater, Middle River, grandparents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Skoglund, Middle River, Dwayne Jesme and Mavis Newton, Thief River Falls; godparents of the bride; Gordon Anderson, Thief River Falls, godfather of the groom, and BreAnn Fugleberg, Thief River Falls, the bride's godchild.

A reception in the church parlors followed with Mr. and Mrs. William Jesme, Middle River, uncle and aunt of the bride, as host and hostess. Centering the serving table was a pillared, four-tiered wedding cake decorated with miniature burgundy flowers, white wedding bells with burgundy clappers, and ceramic cherubs with burgundy flowers. Corresponding cherubs topped the cake and a miniature bride and groom graced the third tier. The cake, baked and decorated by the bride's mother, was cut and served by Mrs. George Hill, Middle River, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Gordon Anderson, Thief River Falls, aunt of the groom. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Gerald Aune, Grygla, and Mrs. Gerald Moen, Newfolden, also aunts of the bride and groom. The groom's cake was distributed by Gwen Aune, Thief River Falls, and Christopher Aune, Gatzke, cousins of the bride.

At the guest book was Jodi Hanson, Stephen, friend of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Gary Cater, Middle River, uncle and aunt of the groom, ladled the punch. Gift bearers were Chad and Jason Cater, Brian Aune and Todd Jesme.

Head waitresses were Kim and Kari Skoglund, Middle River, cousins of the bride with Lisa Bernstein, Julie Brandon and Kim Aune as assisting waitresses.

Following a wedding trip to the Wisconsin Dells, the couple is now at home near Strathcona. The bride is a 1977 graduate of the Middle River high school and prior to her marriage was in charge of the circulation department at the Thief River Falls Times. The groom, a 1974 graduate of Stephen high school, is engaged in farming. Photo, Lund Photography, Roseau

Lois Nelson - Tom Wang Marriage Vows Spoken

Miss Lois Marie Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Nelson of Middle River, became the bride of Thomas John Wang, son of Mr. and Mrs. John N. Wang of Oslo, at a recent ceremony at the United Methodist church in Thief River Falls.

Rev. Jonathan G. Law officiated at the four o'clock ceremony. At the organ was Mrs. Elaine Idso. She played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" for the processional and "Arioso," for the recessional. Ruth Christiansen sang "I Pledge My Love," "Colour My World," and "Wedding Song — There is Love."

The altar was graced with candelabra and fall arrangements in orange and yellow.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was attired in a long-sleeved gown of white brocade satin. She wore a single flower in her hair and carried an orchid, accented with greenery and orange silk roses.

Jean Wiegrefe, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Tammy and Donna Nelson, sisters of the bride. Their gowns were of terre cotto polyester double knit. Each carried a single long-stemmed white rose with greenery and ribbon.

The bride's personal attendant was Carla Hansen, a friend.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Tim Wang. Groomsmen were Terry Wang, brother of the groom, and Steve Pfeiffer, a friend of the couple. They wore butternut tuxedos, bow ties, and white carnation boutonnieres. The groom's all-white tuxedo was complemented by a white silk rose on greenery.

The mother of the bride was attired in an apricot colored gown; and the groom's mother wore one in dark pink. Their corsages featured Japanese orchids and carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlors with Mr. and Mrs. David Olin, friends of the couple, as host and hostess. Rose Nelson, a sister of the bride, was at the guest book, and Carol Nelson, another sister, and Mrs. Gary Cater, a friend of the bride, ladled the punch.

The white, three-tiered wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with bronze roses, was topped with a cupid holding doves. The cake was decorated by Juliette Moiskness and was cut by Mrs. Charles Bubbers, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Dan Penas, aunt of the groom. It was served by the waitresses: Kathy Nelson, sister of the bride; Jane Gardner, cousin of the bride; Julie Brandon and Janna Lindemar, neighbors of the bride. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Michael Fisch, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Lillian Novak, a friend of the groom's family.

A wedding dance with a midnight buffet followed at the Elks' club.

The couple is now at home in Thief River Falls. Both are employed at Northwestern hospital, the bride as a registered nurse and the groom as an accountant.

Shetler And Dahlstrom Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shetler and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Dahlstrom of Thief River Falls announce the engagement of their children, Kathryn Louise, and Timothy Gene.

The wedding ceremony will take place June 13, at 2:00 p.m., at the United Methodist church in this city.

Local Eagles Aux. To Host Grand Madam President

Grand Madam President of the Eagles National auxiliary, Mildred Johnson of Dallas, Tex., will be guest speaker at the special meeting of the local auxiliary set for December 7 at 2:30 p.m., at the Eagles club rooms.

Mrs. Johnson is a charter member of her home auxiliary, 3108, Dallas, Texas. She was appointed secretary at the time of its institution in 1954, and with the exception of 1956, when she was madam president served as secretary until 1961. In 1957, she was elected Madam treasurer of the Texas state auxiliary and progressed through the chairs until becoming Madam state president in 1961.

Mrs. Johnson became Grand Madam President at the 29th annual grand auxiliary convention held at Salt Lake City, Utah. Since joining the official family in 1974, she has served as Grand Madam outside guard, trustee, conductor, vice-president and president-elect. She has been instrumental in the organization and institution of new auxiliaries and has received many awards for her achievements and accomplishments. She is employed as a bookkeeper by the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts.

The local meeting will also include a special initiation. A ham supper, catered by the Aerie will follow.

All members are encouraged to attend to assist in hostessing the invited guests from the district auxiliaries. The district includes the towns of Karlstad, Hallock, Crookston and East Grand Forks.

Thanksgiving Is Observed At DeCor Meeting

Members of the De Cor club of the Thief River Falls Federated Woman's club gathered at the home of Mrs. Matt Wick for their Thanksgiving meeting. To correspond with the occasion, Mrs. Wick read the article, "The first Thanksgiving in 1621." It was noted at that first Thanksgiving at Plymouth colony, the dinner menu consisted of wild turkey stuffed with corn bread, venison stew, baked oysters, baked sweet corn in their husks, and baked pumpkin flavored with maple syrup.

President Ethel Aase presided at the meeting and Signe Miller was in charge of the program featuring a demonstration on Christmas crafts. A report on her recent trip to the Eastern states was given by Geneva Overum.

Plans were made for the Christmas meeting. The event will be a supper party with a gift exchange on December 12 at the Best Western. Members also decided to send cards and a gift to Mabel Leyden, who is hospitalized at the Methodist hospital in St. Louis Park.

Attending the Thanksgiving meeting, in addition to those already mentioned, were Carla Peterson, Eula Kvikstad, Lillian Aasland and Madeleine Scramstad, who was reinstated as a member.

Jeanette Nelson And Steven DeHaan Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Nels Nelson of Thief River Falls and Mr. and Mrs. Martin DeHaan of Red Lake Falls announce the engagement of their children, Jeanette Kay and Steven.

Miss Nelson is a medical lab tech student at the AVTI, East Grand Forks. Her fiance is in the US Air Force stationed at the Grand Forks Air Force base.

No wedding date has been set.

Project Reports Are Given At Moccasin Meet

"Vegetable most successfully gornw this year," was the roll call at the recent meeting of the Moccasin garden club held at the Wallace Tieman home. The program consisted of a group discussion of interesting projects completed by the members. One reported the making of dried arrangements. She stated that tansy flower from an old-world plant now considered a weed in the United States, are excellent in arrangements. If cut early in the season, the flowers retain their color.

Vice president Olga Nelson presided at the meeting and led the group in reading "The Gardener's Prayer." The state and district dues for 1981 were paid. Lunch was served by Mrs. Tieman.

Present, in addition to those mentioned above, were Margie Carlson, Joan Nelson, Marianne Nelson, Eva Lendobeja, Rhodella Tieman, Alice Lendobeja, Beatrice Wilson, and the guests: Helen Torkelson and Clara Langevan.

The December meeting of the Moccasin garden club will be a dinner at the Rex cafe.

AN OLD WOMAN (Michele Contos) and another customer (Sylvia Hustad) are greeted in the magic toyshop by the rag doll, Sunny (Suzanne Pfeifer) in the production of "The Toys Take Over Christmas," directed by Bunny Engelman, assisted by Anna Marie Johnson. The production is part of the Chameleon Theatre Co's. family Christmas show to be presented Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. at Northland community college in Thief River Falls. Advance tickets are on sale at Larson Music at $3 for adults and $1 for children.

Deer Park Club Christmas Party Set For Dec. 6

Deer Park garden club Christmas party will be held Saturday, December 6, at the home of Lavonne Radniecki. The event will include a smorgasbord, a gift exchange, and whist. Each member is also asked to bring a prize for a man or a woman.

Plans for the Christmas party were made at a recent meeting of the club held at the home of Helen Chervestad.

The monthly program featured a demonstration in making macrame hang-ups, by Lavonne Radniecki, who showed the various kinds of knots used in making plant hangers and Ethel Wiseth, gave information on the basic folds, curves and bends used in working with straw. Each member made a spiral weave that were featured in the wreath and horn of plenty, which were displayed.

Lois Swanson gave information on the forcing of crocus bulbs for winter blooming. Yellow and white bulbs were planted by the members and were taken home to be placed in cold storage for six to eight weeks. The study will be continued at the January meeting.

During the brief business session, the 1981 year books were distributed and a community project was approved. It was also noted that Ethel Wiseth had participated at the 4-H club awards night by presenting the indoor gardening award to Sonia Wold of the Satellite 4-H club.

Members responded to roll call by naming the different varieties of grain.

TIPS
From The GREENHOUSE
CARE OF HOUSE PLANT IN THE WINTER
House plants have a dormant time now, so don't expect them to flourish a lot. Watering is at a minimum and fertilizing less. Keep your plants free of dust and use a plant insect spray as a precaution.

National Guard Bonus Program Begun In MN.

A recent swearing-in ceremony in Minnesota Gov. Al Quie's office marked the largest enlistment bonus program in the history of the Minnesota Army National Guard.

James Wendroth, a Litchfield high school senior, was the first Guard enlistee in the state to take advantage of the new bonus and was sworn-in by Gov. Quie at the Capitol.

Through the bonus program, an enlistee has the option of selecting a $4,000 educational assistance package or a $1,500 cash bonus. The educational assistance is applicable to post-high school study, either in college or vocational schools, covering tuition, books and associated fees.

"This is an excellent program," Gov. Quie said, "because it not only encourages young people to serve their state and nation, but it also encourages them to cintinue their education."

Guard bonus is designed to attract young Minnesotans to serve in those specialties which are now in greatest demand: infantry, armor, engineers, military police and medical.

Cash bonus of up to $1,500 is offered as an alternative to the more valuable educational assistance package. Both bonus programs are financed with federal funds.

"We have great hopes for the effectiveness of the bonus program," said Major General James G. Sieben, Minnesota Adjutant General. "High school seniors and graduates are urged to seriously consider this program as one method of helping them finance their education. When you combine the bonus," he continued, "with the amount you can earn through monthly Guard drills, active duty training and two weeks annual training, you have quite a nestegg."

"This could be a boon," Gov. Quie added, "to increasing enrollment in Minnesota colleges and vocational schools. Overall, it's good for Minnesota."

Ethel Brustad Services Held At Crookston

Mrs. Ocar (Ethel) Brustad, 78, of Crookston died there Sunday evening at the Riverview hospital.

Funeral services for Mrs. Oscar Brustad were held today (Wednesday) at 11:00 a.m., at Trinity Lutheran church in Crookston with Rev. James Hanson officiating. Special music was provided by Miss Alpha Morck and Garfield Reichert. Interment was in Oakdale cemetery with Stenshoels Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Harold Olsgaard, Ted Olsgaard, Bill Reynolds, Don Mjoen, Robert Samuelson and Roy Lindell.

Mrs. Brustad, the former Ethel Gustafson, was born in Crookston on Jan. 12, 1902 to William and Alma Larson Gustafson, now deceased. She attended the Crookston public schools, and for several years prior to her marriage was employed as bookkeeper for the Crookston Coca Cola Bottling company.

On May 5, 1928, she was united in marriage to Oscar G. Brustad at Brandon. The couple lived their entire married life at Crookston, residing at 321 Bertha.

She was a very active member of Trinity Lutheran church, the ALCW, and the Anna Guild. She was a charter member of the Altar guild, a former member of the choir and past treasurer of the Sunday school. She was also an active member of the Riverview hospital auxiliary and the World War I Veteran's auxiliary.

She is survived by her husband who retired in 1956 as Crookston's Postmaster; a son, William A. Brustad, Baltimore, Md.; three grandchildren: Kristen, Ingrid and Peter; and a sister, Mrs. James (Edna) Michie, Little Falls.

Peter Kalishko Rites Set At Middle River

Peter Kalishko, 84, a former resident of the Middle River community, died Sunday evening at the Karlstad Memorial hospital.

Funeral services for Peter Kalishko will be held Thursday at 2 p.m., at the First Lutheran church in Middle River. Rev. Donald Fredine and Rev. Merle Knutson will officiate. Interment will be in the City Cemetery at Stephen. The Collins Funeral home, Middle River, is in charge of arrangements.

A complete obituary will be published in a later edition of the Times.

Rites Held In Colorado For Mrs. J. Kierk

Funeral services were held in Arvada, Colo., for Mrs. Jens (Ella) Kierk, 86, a former Thief River Falls resident who died November 20 at the Julia Temple North Rehabilitation center in Arvada.

Interment will be in the family plot in Greenwood cemetery, Thief River Falls, with the Green Funeral home in charge of local arrangements.

Mrs. Kierk, the former Ella Engen, was born Aug. 26, 1894 in Brooten to Christian and Jorand Hellerud Engen. In 1901, she moved to Thief River Falls with her parents. She attended the Thief River Falls schools, graduating from the local Normal teacher's training department. She taught for several years in the rural schools in Pennington county.

On Aug. 10, 1918, she was united in marriage to Jens Kierk in Thief River Falls. They made their home on a farm in Norden township, near Thief River Falls, until 1970, when they moved to Colorado. The couple celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary this past August.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter: Mrs. Gordon (Joyce) Olinger, Arvada, Colo.; two grandchildren: Lee and Tawni Olinger; two sisters, Gunda Engen, Thief River Falls and Mrs. Chris (Clara) Kierk, Tacoma, Wash.; and one brother, Edwin Engen, Thief River Falls and several nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by four sisters: Laura, who died in infancy; Laura Engen, Hilda Wick and Mabel Halvorson.

Memorials may be given to the Heart Fund.

Services Set For Ralph McKeever, 49

Ralph McKeever, Sr. 49, of Middle River, died Tuesday morning at the United Hospital in Grand Forks.

Funeral services for Ralph McKeever will be held Friday at 2:00 p.m., at the First Lutheran church in Middle River with Rev. Donald Fredine officiating. The Collins Funeral home, Middle River, is in charge of arrangements.

A complete obituary will be published in a later edition of the Times.

Rites Set At Greenbush For V. Temanson

Vernon Temanson, 70, of Greenbush died Tuesday morning at St. Luke's hospital in Fargo, N.D.

Funeral services for Vernon Temanson will be held Friday at 10:00 a.m., at the Bethel Lutheran church in Greenbush with Rev. Glen Stadler officiating. The Collins Funeral home, Greenbush, is in charge of arrangements.

A complete obituary will be published in a later edition of the Times.

Services Held At Newfolden For Ida Julin

Funeral services for Mrs. Ida Julin, 90, of Newfolden were held today (Wednesday) at 2:00 p.m., at the Westaker Free Lutheran church in Newfolden. Mrs. Julin died Saturday evening at the Riverview hospital in Crookston.

Rev. Merle Knutson officiated at the services. Mrs. Stan Holmaas was the pianist and Harvey Dyrud and Mrs. Merle Knutson, the soloists. Interment will be in the Westaker cemetery with the Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Garfield Haugen, Dennis Strand, Dale Forslund, Hilton Hjelle, Percey Stokke and Virgil Hjelle.

Mrs. Julin, the former Ida Strand, was born July 13, 1890 in Marsh Grove township, Marshall county, to Johannes and Annie Nordrum Strand. She attended elementary school in Marsh Grove township and grew to womanhood there.

On Dec. 2, 1917, she was married at Newfolden to John Julin. The couple farmed in Marsha Grove township until Julin's death in 1966. After his death, Mrs. Julin continued to live on the farm until recently when she became a resident of the Good Samaritan home in Warren.

She was a member of the Westaker Free Lutheran parish and served actively in the Women's Missionary Fellowship.

Surviving are three sisters: Mrs. Selma Hjelle, Viking; Mrs. Gunda Johnson, Stanley, N.C.; and Mrs. Hilda Forslund of Warren; and several nieces and nephews.

In addition to her husband and parents, she was preceded in death by a daughter, Irene, who died in 1972; two sisters: Emma and Anna, and four brothers: Gust, Ted, Alfred and Albert.

Chester Hagen Services Held Here Today

Funeral services for Chester Hagen, 57, of Thief River Falls were held today (Wednesday) at 10:00 a.m., at the Green Funeral chapel. Hagen died Sunday afternoon at the Crestview rest home where he was residing.

Rev. Frank Armstrong, pastor at the First Baptist church, officiated at the services. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

Chester Lloyd Hagen, a son of the late Andrew and Dena Hagen, was born Jan. 4, 1923 in Thief River Falls. He attended school in Thief River Falls and during his working years was employed at various jobs here and in Minneapolis where he lived for a number of years. He was a resident of the Adeline Daley nursing home in Emily before returning to Thief River Falls in November of 1973. Since then, he had been residing at the Crestview rest home.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Raymond (Emma) Lifgren, Menahga; and two brothers; Robert Hagen, Minneapolis, and Herman of Bay City, Mich.

He was preceded in death by three sisters: Mabel Melhouse, Lena Lindgren and Alma Murphy; and four brothers: Adolph, Theodore, Albert and Clarence Hagen.

Hazardous Waste Site Is Meet Topic

Local residents will have an opportunity to participate directly in the siting of a hazardous waste disposal facility — and to speak out on the criteria for selecting that site — at a special community meeting at 1 p.m. December 9 at the law enforcement building, Crookston, according to Robert Dunn, Minnesota waste management board chairman,

Waste management board was created by the 1980 legislature, and will site at least one Minnesota hazardous waste disposal facility by 1983. Dunn explained that the upcoming meeting is one of many gatherings on this issue occurring throughout the state in the coming weeks.

"Next August the board will select six candidate sites for a hazardous waste disposal facility, and we are currently looking at the entire state in our search for sites," Dunn said. "These local meetings will enable Minnesotans to recommend criteria for the board to use in selecting a site.

"At the meeting residents will be able to learn about Minnesota's hazardous waste problem and about the need for a hazardous waste disposal facility," Dunn added. "They will have a chance to voice their views and questions directly to their representative on the waste management board."

Dunn added that local "Criteria and Siting Committees" formed at the initial meetings will hold additional meetings in the next few months to recommend specific siting criteria.

Local government officials, Dunn noted, were also notified of the meeting and urged to send a representative. He emphasized, however, that all residents are urged to attend.

"Residents are welcome — and encouraged — to attend this special citizen's meeting," Dunn said. "The board can only succeed in finding an acceptable site for a hazardous waste disposal facility with the involvement of concerned Minnesotans."

Job-Related Industries Are Same As 1978

There was about one job-related injury or illness for every 11 workers in the private economy during 1979, the U.S. department of labor's bureau of labor statistics reported. This ratio has remained the same since 1975.

The latest survey, based on reports submitted during 1980, shows an overall incidence rate of 9.5 injuries and illnesses per 100 full-time workers compared with 9.4 in 1978. Although the number of injuries and illnesses increased from 5.8 million to 6.1 million, or about five per cent, the increase was nearly proportionate to the rise in the number of workers employed and their hours on the job. Therefore, the rate of injuries and illnesses continued at virtually the same level in 1978 and 1979.

In 1979, there were 4,950 work-related deaths in units with 11 or more employees. The fatality rate was 0.86 per 10,000 workers. The rate was essentially unchaged from the 0.82 rate in 1978.

Following are other key results:

—The overall injury rate for private sector industries was 9.2 per 100 full-time workers, unchaged from 1978. The rate rose in four of the eight industry division, remained unchanged in three, and decreased in one.

—About 5.96 million work-related injuries occurred, up from the 5.66 million recorded in 1978. This increase is nearly proportional to the increase in hours worked.

—Lost time injury rates increased in all industry divisions between 1978 and 1979.

—The number of injuries involving lost worktime increased from 2.44 million to 2.70 million.

—About 42.6 million lost workdays resulted from work-related injuries — up from 38.2 million in 1978. The number of lost workdays per 100 full-time workers increased from 62.1 to 66.2.

—Injuries which did not involve lost worktime increased from 3.21 million to 3.25 million.

—About 148,900 recognized occupational illnesses were recorded in 1979, compared with 143,500 in 1978.

GRAND MADAM President of the National Eagles Auxilary Mildred Johnson of Dallas, Texas will be guest speaker at the Thief River Falls Eagles auxiliary meeting to be held Sunday, December 7, at 2:30 p.m., at the Eagles club rooms. District auxiliaries have been invited to attend.

Fire Safety Tips Given For Christmas

Each year, thousands of Americans have their Christmas festivities ruined by fire. Many of these fires result from unsafe or improperly used Christmas decorations.

The fire safety foundation reminds that one of the best Christmas presents is a safe, healthy family.

When purchasing a Christmas tree, the most important factor is its freshness. If the branches are brittle and the tree is shedding needles, the tree is already becoming dry. Tap it lightly on the ground. If the needles fall off, the tree is too dry. Trees are sometimes sprayed to improve their appearance so color is not always a good indication of freshness.

After purchasing your tree, keep it outside until you are ready to decorate it, if possible. Also keep the base in water.

When the tree is ready for decorating, cut the butt end diagonally one or two inches above the original cut. The stand should hold the tree stable and have a water container. Fill the container until the cut is covered and refill as often as necessary to keep the cut covered. The tree should be placed away from any heat source.

The decorations you use should be non-combustible. Be sure to fasten all lights to the tree securely, but they should never come in direct contact with the needles or branches.

Use This Year For Christmas Budget Plan

It is not too soon to start thinking about the 1981 holiday season if you want to plan a realistic budget, says the Minnesota Society of CPAs. You can prepare by keeping a full account of all your holiday expenses this year.

Gifts are probably the first expense that comes to mind. Remember that besides buying presents, you'll be paying for wrapping paper and ribbon, too. If you tip your mail carrier, the child who delivers your paper or anyone else who performs a service for you, include these costs, too.

If you bake holiday cookies or cakes the extra sugar and spices and other ingredients add to your weekly grocery bill. Don't forget extra milk and eggs for the eggnog! Will you have guests during the holidays? This means higher food bills, whether you eat at home or in restaurants.

Keep track of what you spend on holiday decorations. Include the tree and other costs for lights, decorations and that door wreath.

If you travel during the holidays to visit family and friends, or just to get away from it all, record your expenses, including transportation, lodging, meals and entertainment.

Costs of greeting cards, stamps and mailing gifts can add up. If you send them out in bundles, this is more than an incidental expense. Be sure to note what you spend on long distance phone calls on your holiday expenses list.

After the holiday season is over, total up your expenses in each category, then add everything together for a grand total of your holiday costs. Add 10 per cent for inflation, and you know the costs you have to meet next year.

One way to save is to open a Christmas club savings account. You deposit a certain amount each week, usually from $3 to $25. Some banks automatically transfer a specified amount from your checking account into your holiday account. Interest is not required on these accounts, but many banks offer the same interest rate available on savings accounts.

Before opening up a holiday club account, find out if you can close your account early. If so, would you be paid interest on that partial amount? Bank policies vary, so shop around. You may decide that you'll do just as well by depositing a certain amount of money every week or month into your regular savings account. If you have a day-of-deposit to day-of-withdrawal savings account, you'll be earning interest until the day you make a withdrawal, a feature holiday clubs generally don't offer.

However you decide to save for your holiday expenses, you'll know your goal after determining what you spent this year. Get into the savings habit early in the year, CPAs say, so you won't have a "cash crunch" when next holiday season rolls around.

SEWING QUILT TOPS is a familiar pastime for Mrs. Ida Gustafson of Viking. She made 124 of the tops last year, using the treadle-type sewing maching shown above which she purchased as a rebuilt unit in 1915 for $25. "I'm not one who can sit around with nothing to do," she insists. "I have to keep busy. Making quilts for the church gives me something to do." Mrs. Gustafson, who lives right across the street from the Zion Lutheran church in Viking, is 94 years young.

the above described property at their November 17 meeting based on (1) economic conditions; (2) further consideration that should be made of the area, including costs and site locations; and (3) comments from residents.

Various questions arose during the discussion Monday evening, including one from Jerry Sandstrom, executive vice president of the chamber of commerce, who addressed those present with the question, "once the property is officially annexed (if it is decided to proceed in this direction) at what point will the city proceed with costs?"

Commissioner Al Christofferson noted, "Growth in the city has not been in that direction (west). It has been in the south and east."

Following discussion, Mayor Carlson informed those present that every effort will be made to inform interested parties of upcoming meetings — which will very likely occur before the January 15 hearing, he added.

Rags To Riches Story At Viking Shows Service

says. Dagney Peterson, stewardship secretary for the ladies aid of the church, is in charge of the quilt project. Her brother Robert rips seams on descarded clothing which the group collects. Dagney presses the salvaged material and brings it to Ida for cutting and piecing into quilt tops. The finished quilts are 60x80 inches in size.

"Not all of the quilts go overseas," Dagney adds. "Sometimes we given them to local people who need them." And she adds that they can always use discarded clothing if anyone has any to donate to the project.

Mrs. Gustafson is already at work on more quilt tops for the project which generally involves a shipment to Lutheran World Relief every fall. She takes her radio with her into the bedroom where her sewing machine is located and stitches happily away. "I'm not much of a TV fan," she says. "I can't watch it and work at the same time."

And Ida is the first to admit she has been blessed with good health. "I've been in the hospital a couple of times," she said, noting that the reasons were for treatment of fractured pelvis and fractured hip. "But those were accidents. . . I've never really been sick."

She has recovered from the fractures and gets around her house and yard without the use of any walking aids. Her garden and flowers receive a good deal of her summer attention. She keeps up her own house and for afternoon coffee served two kinds of homemade cookies and banana bread. The Hartz store in Viking delivers groceries for her. "I try to call only once a week to order groceries," she said. She has a good memory and an alert mind, keeping her own checking account and reading her favorite papers and magazines.

Ida has five children. Floyd Greenley lives at Bellavista, Ark., Kermit Greeley of Dassell and Doris Greenley Torkelson of Vancouver, Wash., are twins. Mrs. Alex Krohn lives at Williams and Charles Gustafson lives at Dawson.

We asked Ida if she was making plans for her 100th birthday party. She smiled broadly, as if the thought may have crossed her mind. "I take things one day at a time," she replied.

If that day is like most days, Ida Gustafson will spend some time at her sewing machine, making life a little richer for herself and many others.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

In reference to your lead story in the Monday, November 24 issue of The Times regarding unemployment insurance and the statements made by Winston Borden at the chamber breakfast at Best Western.

Either you didn't hear right when he spoke or he gave misleading or partial information. Such as:

(1) Should people make more money when unemployed than when they are employed?

This is not possible in Minnesota. The benefit payments to claimants are 50 per cent of their average weekly earnings during the previous fifty-two (52) weeks. In order to be paid the maximum weekly benefit amount of $162, a claimant would have had to earn an average of over $324 earnings per week. That certainly would not be making more by being unemployed.

(2) Should people be able to refuse a job at $8 per hour when they had a previous job at $10 per hour?

It's very rare that this happens but it is possible. Many things have to be considered. Maybe the claimant is not qualified to do the job. Example: Maybe he is a heavy equipment operator who has never seen an offset printing press. Would you hire him at $8 an hour to run your press? Would you blame him for refusing the job because he knew nothing about it? Would the job be injurious to his health, morals or safety? Mr. Borden apparently said nothing about this. Was the claimant a member of a union which does not permit its members to take a job other than through the union, such as the high steel ironworkers or the plumbers?

Occasionally an employer will call and ask, "Why are you paying the claiment benefits? He refused a job with us." We have no way of knowing if a claimant refused a job unless the employer or the claimant informs us. We do investigate and issue determinations on reported job refusals, but we cannot do this until informed of the job refusal or quit. There are also times when an employer does not inform us that the claimant quit, even when we write and ask for the information. If he does not report a quit, his account could be charged.

(3) Should a person making more than $20,000 in one year be able to receive tax-free unemployment benefits?

Why not? Why should he be penalized because he was smart enough and worked hard enough to earn that kind of money. That would be discrimination. In fact, just four or five years ago, South Dakota passed and put into effect just such a law. If the claimant earned over so much money he had to wait three or six months before he could file a claim and if over a larger amount, such as the $20,000 mentioned by Mr. Borden, then he could not file for benefits at all.

The law was challenged before the federal government and the supreme court and it was declared unconstitutional and had to be rescinded. The supreme court ruled it was discrimination. I'm afraid if Minnesota passed such a law it would wind up the same way.

Mr. Borden also mentioned the tax-free benefits in his statement about the $20,000 wage earner. This is no longer true. Unemployment benefits must be declared and tax paid on them if the gross earnings of the person are over a certain amount. This law took effect January 1 of this year. The gross amount is set by the Internal Revenue service each year, so to the large wage earner unemployment is not tax-free.

I hope this will correct some of the half truths or misunderstandings in your story.

All state laws regarding employment and unemployment must comply with federal regulations and I would hate to see our legislators bombarded with letters to change the law as South Dakota did and had to rescind it.

Very truly yours,
Charles B. Josephson

To the Editor:

The undersigned has been on the receiving end of a certain amount of pressure from interested citizens in regard to the drug problem which obviously exists in the city of Thief River Falls.

Dave's News has been in operation since Sept. 1, 1979. Our product is newspapers, magazines and books, all of which originate from a distributor from Fargo, N.D. We also handle a small line of tobaccos, cigarettes, candy and pop.

When our first shipment arrived in the latter part of August, 1979 and the racks were being assembled for display, we noticed one magazine, namely "High Times" magazine, which stresses drugs, their use, and has articles which list their benefits, but also findings of different scientific bodies as to the adverse effects of drugs.

At that time we were somewhat apprehensive and brought a copy of the magazine to the local police department and discussed the matter with the local police chief. I was advised at that time that they were aware of this magazine and had seen it before, but was informed it was not illegal and no comment was made as to whether or not it should be displayed.

This magazine is the only periodical that we have had that stresses drugs, although there are many magazines readily available throughout the entire territory which have articles of the same nature. Time, Newsweek, U.S. News, etc., often have articles on the use of drugs as do several women's and men's magazines.

I advised the citizen's committee when they called on this place of business that the magazine had been for sale but it is not imperative that we continue to sell it.

Not wanting to antagonize people with good intentions, we made the decision that the magazine would not be carried if the majority of the operations were adverse.

It is also our opinion that those who apply pressure to a retailer, being it books, clothing, magazines or any merchandise which is classified as being legal, place themselves as prosecutor, jury and judge.

From the morality standpoint it is no different than a Christian being disturbed because his child has access to atheistic material or a copy of Mien Kampf.

We would like to stress the point, this small business does not approve nor condone the use of illegal drugs and never will accept that position.

MSU President To Speak At History Meet

Dr. Roland Dille, president of Moorhead state university, will be the featured speaker at this year's annual Red River valley historical society fall banquet and seminar Saturday (December 6) in the First Presbyterian church, 308 So. 5th St., Grand Forks, ND.

The event, co-sponsored by Red River Valley historical society and Grand Forks County historical society, will also feature "Harmony Reunion," an award winning barbershop quartet.

Dille, acknowledged as one of the finest speakers in the Valley, has titled his lecture "Diggin In."

Cost of the banquet is $5.50 per person. For reservations, please call Red River Valley Historical Society at (218) 236-9140, or Grand Forks Myra Museum (701) 775-2216. The public is cordially invited to attend. You do not need to be a member of either organization. All that is required is an interest in the past and the future of the Red River Valley.

'I Can Cope' Course Offered At Crookston

Living with cancer is often a helpless, frustrating existence, filled with fears anxieties with an overwhelming depression at no longer being in charge of one's life.

"I Can Cope" is a program designed to help cancer patients develop their own strengths through greater knowledge of their disease, through handling of stress, learning to live with limitations, expressing feelings about their illness and through utilization of helpful resources within the community.

Riverview hospital at Crookston, in conjunction with the American Cancer society (ACS) will offer an "I Can Cope" course, free of charge, for cancer patients and family members beginning January 7. Series of eight weekly classes will be conducted in Riverview's classroom from 7:30 to 9 p.m. conducted by Riverview's social service director Linda Yates and Darleen Mushel, RN. To register, call 281-4682, ext. 403 or 449. Registration deadline has been set for December 15.

Various resource speakers involved will include lawyers, physicians, public health representatives and pastors. They will help acquaint cancer patients and their families with resources that many are unaware exist within their communities. With such supportive help, cancer patients can begin to cope with damaging negative feelings.

There are over 100 hospitals in Minnesota offering the course, sponsored nation-wide by the American Cancer society. The first pilot program began in 1977 with funds provided by the Minnesota division of the ASC and North Memorial Medical center in Robinsdale where two oncology nurses had initiated the program.

Farm Prices Up As Wheat Hits Six-Year High

Higher crop prices pushed the index of prices received by Minnesota farmers up two per cent during the month ended November 15, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Lower prices for potatoes and all meat animals except calves limited the index increase. This is the sixth consecutive monthly increase in farm prices.

Oats prices reached record levels while wheat prices hit a six-year high; corn and barley prices were the highest in over five years. Compared to a year ago, the prices received index was up a sharp 17 per cent with substantially higher prices for corn, oats, barley, soybeans, flaxseed, hay, potatoes and hogs. The commodities below last year were cows, cattle, calves, sheep, lambs and wool.

The crops index increased seven per cent to 284 during the month. This was a 40 per cent jump above the index a year earlier. The mid-November prices and the changes from last month are: All wheat — $4.38 per bushel, up 30 cents from the revised October estimate; corn — $2.95, up 18 cents; oats — $1.74, up seven cents; barley — $3.03, up 16 cents; soybeans — $8.14, up 81 cents; flaxseed — $7.38, up 50 cents; potatoes averaged $4.90 per hundredweight for all grades, down $1.15. All hay was up $6 per ton to $66.50. All sunflowers averaged $10.80 per hundredweight, up 30 cents from the October price.

The meat animal index at 245 was down four per cent from last month but up nine per cent from a year ago. All hogs at $45.50 per hundredweight were down $2 from a month earlier. Beef cattle averaged $53.50, down $1.70. Calves were up 10 cents to $72.80. Sheep brought $14.30, down $1.80. Lambs were down $5.40 to $58.20.

The dairy index increased two per cent during the month to 279. This was nine per cent above the index last year. Preliminary milk price at $13.20 per hundredweight was up 28 cents from the revised October price.

The poultry and egg index at 237 was 13 per cent above last month and 12 per cent above a year ago. Turkeys were 48 cents per pound liveweight, up one cent from a month earlier. Eggs brought 55 cents per dozen for all grades in mid-November, up eight and one-half cents from mid-October and six and one-half cents above a year earlier.

Assistance Up For Meals To Elderly In '81

U.S. department of agriculture (USDA) will increase the level of assistance it provides in donated foods and cash to nutrition programs for the elderly during fiscal year 1981 from 43 to 47.25 cents per meal, assistant secretary of agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman said.

"This will be a 9.87 per cent cost-of-living increase in donated foods and cash assistance USDA provides to federally funded elderly nutrition programs," Foreman said.

Adjustment reflects the rise in the consumer price index for food away from home last year, and is mandated by law. New level of assistance applies to all meals served from October 1 to September 30, 1981.

Nutrition programs for the elderly are run by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services under Title III of the Older Americans Act, with USDA donating food or providing cash-in-lieu of food to states taking part in these programs. In addition, beginning this year, Indian tribal organizations operating elderly nutrition programs will receive a comparable level of assistance in donated foods or cash under Title VI of the act.

Notice of the cost-of-living increase was published in the November 21, 1980 Federal Register.

PAINTING DOUGH ART is serious business for Rebecca Parnham, daughter of Kenneth and Rita Parnham, as she gets an assist from her mother with the craft project. The activity took place during special persons week held by the Children and Parents Learning Together project at Mark Twin elementary school. Pre-school youngsters in the program worked in dough art and tissue paper ornaments during the craft session.

State Building Industry Reps Are Honored

Representatives of Minnesota's building industry were honored by the state of Minnesota division of emergency services recently for helping develop a plan to be used for recovery following natural disasters.

Commendation certificates signed by Gov. Al Quie were presented by assistant commissioner Kenneth Dirkzwager who made the presentations on behalf of public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

At a brief program at emergency services (ES) in the State Capitol, Ralph Olmos, ES director, said the state appreciated the efforts of 25 trade associations which organized in August of 1976 to draft a three-phase plan with the cooperation of ES.

Plan includes a building industry disaster recovery assistance plan, a program for disaster relief and control, and a disaster engineering emergency plan. First copy of the plan was published in 1977 and an updated version was completed this year.

According to Ed Johnson, assistant natural disaster project leader for ES, the construction industry has commitments from more than 1,100 of its associates to participate with equipment, labor, materials and professional services if needed.

Responding for the building industry to the commendations, Roger Miller, executive vice president of the builders exchange of St. Paul, said the plans are "comparable to a good insurance policy; we hope we never have to use it."

Miller and W.H. Gary, manager of the Associated General Contractors of Minnesota, received special commendations from the state.

MN. Employers Sought For Energy Contest

Minnesota employers who have implemented energy-saving programs are being sought for the 5th annual energy saver's award of excellence competition co-sponsored by the natural gas council of Minnesota (NGCM) and the Minnesota energy agency (MEA).

Purpose of the competition is to honor the Minnesota employers who have done an outstanding job of conserving energy and to serve as a forum for the exchange of energy saving ideas.

"Using energy wisely to help our nation meet its energy needs is becoming more critical every day," said Mark Mason, director of the Minnesota energy agency. "Several Minnesota employers have implemented effective and innovative energy saving programs to help meet those needs. We'd like to recognize those efforts throuth the competition."

"Another, and even more important part of the competition is the collecting and cataloging of useful energy saving ideas to be shared with employers throughout the state," he added.

Competition is open to any Minnesota employer who has had an energy conservation project in operation during 1980. Employer includes practically any kind and size organization — whether it's a business, government agency, city government, non-profit organization, hospital, church or school, with three employers or 30,000. Entry deadline is Jan. 31, 1981.

Winners will be selected in five categories, and category winners will compete for the statewide award. Entries will be judged on innovativeness, effectiveness and reusability of the programs.

"While the amount of energy saved is considered when the entries are judged, it is not a determining factor," noted Mark Hallgren, NGCM chairman. "We're more interested in looking at the creative use of new and existing technology and the thoroughness of the energy saving program."

Previous statewide winners include Control Data corporation, world distribution center, St. Paul; the 3M company — 3M center, St. Paul; Wenger corporation, Owatonna; and the Toro company, Windom.

The NGCM is a non-profit organization comprised of representatives of various investor-owned gas utilities whose purpose is to promote the wise use of energy. Member companies are Great Lakes Gas Transmission, Inter-City Gas, Minnegasco, North Central Public Service Company, Northern Natural Gas, and Peoples Natural Gas.

Employers interested in obtaining a brochure explaining the competition should contact the Energy Saver's Award of Excellence competition, 529 West Butler Square, Minneapolis, MN 55403 or call 612-336-3648.

Drivers Still Ignoring Bus Safety Rules

Some irresponsible drivers are making it dangerous for the school children of Minnesota because they are ignoring basic school bus safety rules, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Sopsic said he has received reports that many motorists are ignoring the flashing red lights and school bus stop arms. "When these arms are extended and red lights flashing it means youngsters are boarding or getting off the bus. This requires a full stop at least 20 feet from the bus," Sopsic reminded. "Our children's lives are being endangered by carelessness or ignorance of the law."

Sopsic said the Minnesota department of public safety has conducted a thorough campaign on school bus safety this year. He said most of the state's school districts asked for and received three school bus safety brochures: "The Bus Is For Us" (kindergarten through grade three); "School Bus Rider's Guide" (grades four through six) and "It's The Law" (adults). Sopsic estimates that more than 200,000 of the kindergarten through third and four through six publications and another 130,000 of the adult brochures were made available to other agencies. Supplies of the printed material were exhausted during the campaign.

Rounding out the effort were public service announcements sent to television and radio stations; a DPS news release, printed by more than 100 newspapers; billboards; and a proclamation for school bus safety week October 5-11.

"It is hard for me to believe that citizens of Minnesota are willfully ignoring such a basic safety thrust at the one contained in school bus safety programs," Sopsic said.

"I again urge drivers to be observant and obey the rules when they see flashing red lights on schoolbuses. Bus drivers should report violations to law enforcement agencies for prosecution," he concluded.

Isn't it time to give a tax break to savers?

It's here

On the average, the British save 13% of their disposable income. The West Germans save 15%. The Japanese, 25%. But Americans save only 6.5%!

This is a disturbing fact, especially when you consider that much of the money needed for the economic growth of America has been traced to personal savings accounts.

Without savings, there can be no investment. Without investment, there can be no new jobs created.

A major reason people in other nations save more is that they are given tax incentives by their governments for saving.

Americans don't receive incentives to save. In fact, by taxing the interest earned on savings accounts, this country discourages saving.

Isn't it time the Congress of the United States gave a tax break to savers? This would encourage more savings, which would help stabilize the economy and bring inflation under control.

Helping people save money would help America.

The Savings & Loan Foundation

Good news.

Legislation has just been passed that gives the small saver a tax break. The Savings & Loan business is proud to have been in the forefront in achieving this landmark legislation.

The law allows $400 tax free interest on savings for joint tax returns and $200 for individuals, effective for the 1981 tax year.

Savers are our business. The Savings and Loan business will continue to fight on behalf of the small saver.

Convention Hears Talk On Promoting Soil Stewardship

Farmers and city dwellers alike share a common interest in the need for sound farm programs and land use policies, and must work together to preserve the family farm and promote good stewardship of the soil, delegates to the 39th annual Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) state convention were told recently.

Dr. Charles Lutz, coordinator of the American Lutheran church's (ALC) world hunger program, told the MFU convention that serious economic pressures and public policies over the years have weakened farmers' ability to act as good stewards of the soil. The result has been an increasing concentration of farmland control and a drop in both the amount and quality of farmland.

As the editor of "Farming the Lord's Land," a recently published book on Christian perspectives on major food and farm policy issues facing the nation, Lutz has been active in his church's concern about these problems. Another major church body, the Upper Midwest Council of Roman Catholic Bishops, recently issued a policy statement, signed by 75 bishops, entitled "Strangers and Guests", which also examines key agricultural and food issues and urges a strengthening of the family farm, soil conservation and land stewardship. It is a far-reaching statement, which has drawn much interest.

While farmers generally are interested in keeping farmland in the hands of many producers and in retaining land for agricultural uses, "there are serious pressures that push farmers in opposite directions on all counts," Lutz said. "There is the pressure of inadequate farm prices." When commodity prices are low, "things are done in the name of survival that work against the values farmers believe in.

"And as long as we have a cheap food policy, and American food buyers are spoiled with the cheapest food of any nation, there will be pressures on farmers to continue harmful trends," he said.

"There is the pressure of public policies that favor bigness in agriculture." The ALC spokesman observed that the findings of the Farm Structure project, a joint effort of MFU and the Minnesota project completed earlier this year, document the harmful effects of some federal farm programs.

"Everthing from federal commodity programs that are open ended, to tax policies, to the kind of research done by the land-grant and experiment stations — all have encouraged large-scale agriculture," he said.

The pressures on modern farmers is further increased by an American cultural myth which Lutz said measures success only by economic growth. This influence has promoted competition over cooperation among farmers as they move to out-do their neighbors in acquiring more land and larger machinery.

Lutz also recounted the biblical view of land stewardship, which holds farmland as the Lord's property to be diligently cared for by its human tenants. It is the responsibility of American Society as a whole, he told the convention, to work toward this kind of policy which encourages sustainable agriculture for the benefit of hungry peoples and future generations.

A stronger family farm agriculture is an important part of restoring sound farm practices, the ALC official said. Among the policy options farmers and the rest of society should consider as they work toward a more responsible agriculture are:

+ Federal farm programs with cut-offs on a volume basis;

+ Changes in federal tax policies which encourage bigness;

+ Young farmer entry assistance programs in all states;

+ A graduated land tax similar to the one under debate in North Dakota;

+ More frugal use of non-farm land;

+ Careful land-use planning for urban and rural areas;

+ Taxing farmland at farmland (not urban values near cities; and

+ Connecting commodity programs and tax benefits to conservation practices.

Lutz also told reporters during a convention press conference that an inter-religious group, the Taskforce on U.S. food policy, will bring religious leaders together in Washington next month to discuss the 1981 farm program and the future of agricultural policies for the nation. Church groups, particularly the ALC and the Catholic Church, are becoming actively involved in farm and food policy discussions because of their concern about world hunger and the impact of policies and trends on its membership in rural areas of the Upper Midwest.

He will be returning home for Christmas before being transferred to Fort Bragg, NC.

GTA Revenues In 1980 Total $1.99 Billion

The Grain Terminal association (GTA), a regional grain marketing and processing cooperative based in St. Paul, announced total revenues of $1.99 billion and net earnings of $28.9 million for the fiscal year ended May 31, 1980.

GTA president and general manager B. J. Malusky told more than 3,500 delegates and patron-owners attending the co-op's 43rd annual meeting at the Minneapolis auditorium the year was good for GTA despite the difficulties and challenges of the period.

"Inflation impacted on GTA and the higher costs of operations and larger grain volume required more borrowings to finance larger inventories," Malusky said. The cooperative reported a 58 per cent increase in interest costs alone for the year.

Malusky said an 11-week strike at the Duluth-Superior port during the important shipping months of July, August and September increased costs of moving grain into export positions and created a shortage of transportation for country elevators. According to Malusky, additional problems resulted from the embargo of 17 million metric tons of grain from the Soviet Union last January.

"While the administration developed programs to protect farmers and shippers from financial loss, the action clogged the marketing pipeline for several weeks as shippers juggled their orders and sought new buyers," Malsuky said.

Last year GTA marketed 398 million bushels of grain for more than 780 locally-owned farmer cooperatives in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana and adjoining states. Patrons of these cooperatives will receive $7.5 million in cash refunds and the balance of their patronage earnings in GTA capital certificates. Other cash payments and capital certificates for the year brought total cash payments to $9.95 million.

President Malusky reported GTA had total equity of $175 million and assets of $531 million at the close of their fiscal year May 31, 1980.

GTA is a regional grain marketing and processing cooperative serving more than 150,000 farmer-owners.

Planning At Christmas Can Save Money

Two things are spent on a holiday shopping trip — time and money. You can save both of these commodities with a bit of advance planning, says the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Before setting foot in a store, draw up a list of all the people you're buying for with several gift ideas for each. Once you've determined what you want to buy, calculate the amount of money you'll need for the gifts. Now consider the "extras" that will add to this cost: gift wrapping, store delivery, postage and handling charges for mail orders. Don't forget gas and parking costs, or bus fare. And what about eating out? Consider all of these factors for an accurate view of your holiday shopping expenses.

Store catalogues can be helpful when you're making up your gift list. If you find the perfect gift for someone, save gas and wear on your feet and order the item directly, either by mail or over the phone. This works best when you only have to pay a small percentage of your total purchase price in shipping and handling charges. If it costs $2.50 to order a $6 item, it makes sense to buy it at a store while you are on a shopping trip.

Catalogues may take care of a portion of your gift needs, but you'll probably have to do some of your holiday shopping in person. Select one store or group of stores, whatever you feel you can manage in one trip, and shop them completely. Do the same each time you shop. That way you won't waste time and gasoline running back and forth from home to store. In a shopping mall, determine which stores to shop and stick to your plan.

Call each store beforehand to find out if what you want is in stock. Once in the store, ask at the information desk for the location of specific items on your list. Then start at the uppermost floor of the store and work your way down. Since most people shop from the first floor up, you'll beat the traffic.

If you're not particularly adept at wrapping gifts, most department stores can do it for you. The charge will depend upon the size of the package; on an average, $2 or $3 per package. To economize, have hard-to-wrap items wrapped at the store, and do the rest yourself.

You may be able to have your packages delivered to your home. Delivery policies vary from store to store; a charge may be imposed if the value of the purchases is less than a set amount, like $10.

If you spread out your shopping trips over a period of time, and distribute your spending between stores where you have charge accounts, you can stagger your bills. Be sure you're charging a purchase at the beginning of a billing cycle, rather than the end, so there will be a delay before you are billed. If your credit issuers allow you 15 to 25 interest-free days to submit your payment, pay the bill at the end of that period. That way, you can leave your cash in an interest earning account until you actually need it. Check your credit agreement for interest-free days and your monthly statement for the billing cycle. Keep your receipts to check against your statement.

Keep track of all your expenses, CPAs say, so that you can plan an accurate holiday shopping budget for next year.

Self-Employed Numbers Rise For Nation

Number of self-employed Americans is increasing dramatically, reversing decades of steady decline, according to the November issue of the Monthly Labor Review.

The Review, published by the U.S. department of labor's bureau of labor statistics (BLS), also reports on workers' retirement decisions and finds that, although age discrimination laws now provide protection through age 70, most workers choose to retire sooner.

In "Self-Employed Americans: Their Number Has Increased," Scott Fain reports that the growth in the number of self-employed workers reversed during the 1974-75 recession, but, in contrast to past trends, rebounded strongly after the recession. Fain reports that in recent years, self-employed workers have come to more closely resemble the rest of the work force. The self-employed are younger than in the past, more likely to be women than previously, and are working a shorter work-week.

But Fain notes that "earnings of the self-employed continued to lose ground in comparison with the earnings of other workers." Minorities still are underrepresented among the self-employed, says Fain, and "those who have managed to start their own enterprises are most likely to be in service and blue-collar occupations, while white self-employed workers are more likely to be in the relatively high paying, white-collar occupations."

TOWER BUILDING was one activity enjoyed by Mathew Johnson, son of Dr. and Mrs. Peter Johnson, during special persons week held at the Children and Parents Learning Together program at Mark Twain elementary school.

FOUR-FINGERED SCISSOR enabled Mrs. Harvey (Kathy) Ebbighausen to help son Matt cut out a construction paper wreath during special persons day at the Children and Parents Learning Together program at Mark Twain elementary school. Children in the program were encouraged to bring a special person with them to the activities day.

Malting Barley Conference In Minneapolis

Malting Barley Improvement association has announced that the biennial barley improvement conference, sponsored by the association, will be held January 8, 1981 in Minneapolis at the Sheraton-Ritz hotel.

Program will include reports on new varieties of barley, malting barley breeding, the Canadian barley situation, weather and agricultural production, barley freight rates, barley production and barley marketing.

President of Malting Barley Improvement association, Paul E. Pawlisch, extends a cordial invitation to all who are interested in malting barley to attend this conference. A block of rooms at the Sheraton-Ritz hotel is being held for the conference; however, those planning to attend should make their own reservations. In order to have an estimate of the attendance, notification of intention to attend would be appreciated. The association address is: 2040 West Wisconsin Avenue, Milwuakee, WI 53223.

New Crookston high school basketball coach Gary Vorachek, who left Barnesville to succeed Marshall Olson as coach of the Pirates, is optimistic heading into the 1980-81 season, hoping the success Crookston had in winning the 1980 Minnesota Class A state football title will carry over into the basketball season.

"Right now the big thing going is attitude," Vorachek told Lori Mateer of the Crookston Times. "The guys are still riding the success of their football year and that attitude is showing in practice. It should be a big boost for us all year."

Brent Weiss, Kyle Roelofs and Brian Bachmeier, all members of that 13-0 football team, are serving as Crookston tri- captains this winter and are expected to be the Pirates' leaders. "Brent should have an excellent year. He's a versatile player," pointed out Vorachek. "Kyle will be tough, and so far Brian looks good."

Opponents can expect to face pressure defense when they play the Pirates this winter. "I want to concentrate mainly on full court pressure," mentioned Vorachek. "I think the boys worked some on man-to-man last year, but I want to go mainly with a full press."

DNR Commissioner Responds

Department of Natural Resources commissioner Joseph Alexander, in an open letter published in the Grand Rapids Herald-Review in which he defended the antlerless doe permit system for deer hunters, said the drawings are not rigged.

"The drawing is honest and fair based on the number of hunters applying," wrote Alexander in a response to a Herald-Review article. "It is almost impossible to geographically select applicants. I do not agree that a permit can be obtained by knowing someone in the Department of Natural Resources. In fact, I will back that assumption with hard cash and have a standing offer of $1,000 of my own money for anyone who can give me evidence that a person in this department "rigged" or "fixed" the permitting system."

NWAC Sets Schedule

In addition to the selection of the 1980 all-conference football team, Northwest Athletic Conference officials set tentative dates and sites for 1981 spring and fall events at the annual NWAC fall meeting.

NWAC spring events include boys and girls indoor track Thursday, April 9, at Crookston; boys tennis Friday, May 1, at Crookston; boys and girls outdoor track either Tuesday, May 5, at Fergus Falls or Thursday, May 7, at Bemidji; boys and girls golf Saturday, May 16, at Thief River Falls.

Next fall the NWAC girls tennis meet will be held Tuesday, Sept. 29, at East Grand Forks; and the boys and girls cross country meet will be held Tuesday, Oct. 20, at Crookston.

NWAC competition is also held in boys and girls basketball in the winter, and volleyball in the fall. But those events are determined on a standings point system.

Miscellaneous

+Former Bemidji high school hockey and baseball coach Chuck Grillo, working with former University of Minnesota and U.S. Olympic team coach Herb Brooks, have purchased the Minnewawa Lodge on Clark Lake near Brainerd to provide housing facilities for the Herb Brooks summer hockey camp, a 10-week program conducted at the Brainerd area civic center arena. Grillo, who left Bemidji to accept a teaching and coaching position in Rosemount, has stepped down from those jobs to become a full-time scout for the New York Rangers, covering the WCHA, CCHA and the small colleges in the area. Grillo, hired by Craig Patrick of the Rangers, who served under Brooks on the Olympic squad, says he has found scouting to be "a whole new field. I found out I didn't know as much about hockey as I thought I did. Rating players is very difficult," he told Jim Wallace of the Brainerd Dispatch.

+Among the spectators at Saturday's Section 8 high school hockey jamboree played in the Thief River Falls sports arena were John Mariucci, assistant general manager of the Minnesota North Stars, and John Perpich, University of Minnesota assistant hockey coach.

+Golden Valley Lutheran, a team that has eliminated Northland community college from the MJCAA state basketball tournament title chase the past two years, boasts another strong team in 1980-81, headed by 6-8 Nelson Johnson, a sophomore from Cleveland, the top junior college prospect in the nation according to some recruiters. Johnson scored 57 points in last year's MJCAA state tournament championship game, a 107-106 triple overtime loss to Anoka-Ramsey. Johnson, 6-9 Bil Hudson of Milwaukee and 6-6 Steve Prioleau of Detroit give the Royals an awesome front line. Northland played Golden Valley on near even terms in the 1980 MJCAA state tournament semifinals before losing 103-90. The Northmen bounced back to beat Northwest Division rival Fergus Falls 107-94 for third place honors. Golden Valley eliminated Northland 86-68 in first round state tournament play in 1979.

THIEF RIVER FALLS representatives at the 1980 Minnesota state high school girls swimming and diving championships this week in the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis will include, left to right, Prowlers coach John Hustad, 50-yard freestyler Betsie Hallstrom and diver Brenda Lund. Swimming and diving prelims will be held Friday, with the finals scheduled Saturday beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Lund, Hallstrom Compete In State Swimming Meet

Brenda Lund and Betsie Hallstrom, a pair of Lincoln high school seniors who have a combined 11 years of varsity competition, will close out their careers as Prowlers this week by participating in the 1980 Minnesota state high school girls swimming and diving championships at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Lund will compete in the diving portion of the event. Her goal is to be a state champion. Hallstrom will swim in the highly competitive 50-yard freestyle. Her goal is to become the first Lincoln girl to break the 26-second barrier in the event.

The two girls, along with Thief River Falls coach John Hustad, will be in Minneapolis for pre-meet warm-ups Thursday from 2-3 p.m. Diving prelims will be held Friday at 10 a.m. Swimming prelims will be held at 3 that afternoon. Finals start at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Lund's goal of winning a state title are not unrealistic. She placed fourth in the state a year ago as a junior. She was a stunning sixth as an eighth grader in 1976, following that with four consecutive Section 3 diving titles.

"I'd sure like to see her in the top six," said Hustad, "but she has something else in mind — No. 1, and she doesn't think it's out of reach. But any time you get into the top six — any time you get to the state meet — you've done well."

But despite five straight state meet appearances and two top six finishes already to her credit, Lund isn't assured of a spot in the finals. The 1-2-3 finishers ahead of her a year ago were all underclassmen, including state champion Kelly Johnson of Irondale, a sophomore. But new faces are still likely to surface. For example, Joan Bastien of St. Cloud Apollo was a state diving champion as a junior in 1979. As a senior in 1979 she failed to make the finals.

"There are just too many variables in swimming and diving to say that last year's top finishers will repeat this year," pointed out Hustad. "But Brenda will do well, I'm sure. She has great body control; excellent balance. And she's definitely improved over last year. She's an outstanding diver. If she gets beat, either everybody else will dive outstanding, or she'll just plain mess it up."

A state title would require 11 near-perfect dives by Lund. "She knows it won't be easy," continued Hustad. "She knows she has to dive 11 excellent dives; 11 consistent dives. And that very seldom happens — she broke one last year and finished fourth. She knows she'll have to dive better than she did in region," which was a meet-record 406.4 point performance that left her unbeaten for the year.

Hallstrom, meanwhile, has no vision of state titles, but still has the incentive to do well. "Her goal is to go under 26, explained Hustad, who watched his sprinter turn in a best-ever 26.17 for a second place finish at last week's Section 3 meet. "She's really fired up for it. If she's under 26, she'd have a chance to get into the consolation finals — and that wouldn't surprise me at all."

Added incentive to Hallstrom is the fact that she qualified for the state meet in two events a year ago — the 50 and as a member of the 400-yard freestyle relay team — but missed the meet after being injured in an automobile accident.

For both girls the state meet will mark the end of long and successful careers with the Prowlers. Lund has been a varsity diver since the seventh grade, and Hallstrom has been a varsity swimmer since the eighth grade.

NCC Basketball Teams On The Road This Week

Season-opening action for the Northland community college women's basketball team will find the Northwomen playing at Bottineau Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile, the Northland men's basketball team, a 106-68 winner over the Northland Alumni Saturday to begin the 1980-81 season, will be in Winnipeg this weekend to defend its title in the Red River community college invitational tournament.

Northwomen

Four sophomores returning from a year ago and the addition of two other past performers who have decided to complete their sophomore year of eligibility should give the Northwomen a shot at improving upon a 2-9 finish in 1979-80.

"Right now it's a big question mark," said coach Deb Jacobson about her team's potential. "But I'm optimistic. We've got some really good outside shooters and we've got a couple of kids with some good speed. We could be a very surprising club."

Jean Stukel (Warroad), Julie Easton (TRF) and Jacki Nelson (Hallock) were all starters a year ago, with Angie Sinn (TRF) joining them off last year's team. Lynnet Donarski and Cheryl Larson, both Marshall County Central high school products, return after leaving the sport following their freshmen seasons.

Sue Maslowski (Cloquet) and Vicki Troska (Goodridge) are a pair of freshmen guards who are likely starters who could complement the inside game expected to be supplied by Easton and Nelson. Both newcomers have good speed.

Mary Sovde (Greenbush) is another freshmen who could break into the line-up, but she's been slowed by knee problems.

Other freshmen on the squad are all Thief River Falls girls: Kathy Walker, Colleen Kron and Stacy Sinn.

"We don't have much height," acknowledged Jacobson, who will be aided by an assistatn coach for the first time this winter in Dave Furbish, a member of last year's Northwest Division champion Northland men's team.

Northmen

Two-time defending champion Northland draws St. Boniface college in a 7:30 p.m. first round game Friday in the fourth annual Red River community college invitational tournament in Winnipeg.

Host Red River plays Saskatchewan technical institute of Moose Jaw, Sask. in the other upper bracket first round game. In the lower bracket, the University of Winnipeg junior varsity is paired against Assiniboine community college of Brandon, Man., while the Red River Blues face Mennonite Brethren Bible college of Winnipeg.

Consolation round games start at 10:45 a.m. Saturday. Semifinals will begin at 2:15 that afternoon, with the championship game slated for 9:15 p.m.

Northland coach Chet Engelman announced that sophomores Terry Harris (Dearborn Heights, Mich.), Tony Smith (Inkster, Mich.) and Joe Kraska (Lancaster) have been named tri-captains of the Northmen, who will return home to host the Jamestown college junior varsity Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Hockey, Basketball Teams Begin Play . . .

Lincoln Winter Sports Season Starts This Week

Winter sports season at Lincoln high school will get underway this weekend when three of the four Thief River Falls teams open their 1980-81 schedules.

It starts Friday when the boys basketball team hosts Roseau. On Saturday the girls basketball team entertains Tri-County high school of Karlstad while the hockey team travels to Crookston. All three contests start at 7:30 p.m., and are preceded by junior varsity games.

Only Lincoln team not scheduled to debut this weekend is the boys swimming team, which just began practice Monday. The swimmers will wait until Saturday, Dec. 13, to open with their Prowler relays.

Boys Basketball

Three seniors and two juniors have earned starting roles for Friday's basketball opener against Roseau as Thief River Falls coach Glen Peters tries to fill the gap left by eight graduated seniors off last year's team.

Expected to start against the Rams are 5-8 seniors Hal Swanson and Mark Lundin at the guards, 5-11 junior Kevin Sanders and 6-2 junior Eric Bondy at forwards and 6-2 senior Dave Kays at Center. Senior Jim Vigness, a 6-0 forward-center, senior Paul Koppang, a 5-9 guard-forward, and sophomore Mark Gere, a 6-1 forward, are all expected to see playing time.

While the Prowlers go into the game without a starter back from last year's 13-6 team, the Rams are even less fortunate. New Roseau head coach Elmer Bonnell doesn't have a single letterman on hand. Losses off last year's 9-9 team include Clay Larson, an all-conference center who led the North Border Conference in rebounding, and coach Ron Ruud.

"We're two ball clubs with no experience at all," admitted Peters. "But things are going pretty well for us. We will be a hustling ball club. We're not a polished ball club at this time, but we will be."

Girls Basketball

Tom Schafer will make his debut as head coach of the girls basketball team Saturday when the Prowlers tackle Tri-County, expected to be a title challenger in the Class A District 32 ranks this winter.

"Karlstad will be a good test for us," acknowledged Schafer. "Right now we're pretty much where we want to be. There are still some things we want to work on, but for now it's about as good as can be expected."

The Prowlers' starting line-up Saturday will feature senior Carla Ode at the point guard, senior Ann Goodrich and either senior Sally Narverud or sophomore Paula Myers at the wings, junior Tara Nicholson at center and junior LeAnn Paetznick at forward.

Goodrich, Nicholson and Paetznick were all starters a year ago.

Hockey

A 3-2 winner over defending Section 8 champion East Grand Forks in Saturday's 22-minute jamboree session, the Lincoln hockey team hopes to extend that kind of success to a full 45 minutes Saturday at Crookston.

"We were pleased with the second 11 minutes Saturday," noted Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand, whose Prowlers did all their scoring in the second portion of the scrimmage. "The first 11 minutes weren't so special."

Biggest concern facing the Prowlers this week is the health status of junior Steve Olson, one of three defensemen who are being counted on to shoulder a big part of the Prowlers' success this winter in light of the fact that their scoring punch was lost through graduation. Olson, who suffered a shoulder injury in football this fall, reinjured the shoulder in the jamboree. However, he is expected to be in uniform Saturday.

Olson will be joined on the blueline by seniors Scott Wiebolt and Dean Dokkin, along with junior Mark Harder.

Jeff Mongoven, a senior, will be in goal for the opener.

Junior Jim Dillon remains sidelined with a leg injury.

Is Grand satisfied with the progress the Prowlers have made to date: "Reasonably so," he answered. "We expect Crookston to be good. I picked them to be third in that preseason thing."

The Pirates, who finished atop the regular season Section 8 point standings a year ago, skated 19 seniors in Saturday's jamboree when they played to a 2-2 tie with Roseau. The Prowlers, on the other hand, had just six seniors in uniform.

1980-81 Hockey Opener . . .

Northmen Host Bemidji Tonight

A vastly improved Northland community college hockey team that went winless in 18 games a year ago, begins what looks like a promising 1980-81 season tonight (Wednesday) with a 7:30 p.m. nonconference game against the Bemidji State University junior varsity in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

The Northmen, directed by first-year head coach Tom Goddard, will kick off their Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) schedule with a weekend series against Rainy River in International Falls. Games will be played Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 12 noon.

Goddard is uncertain who will start in goal tonight for the Northmen, with sophomores Jeff Reese and Charlie Sehler, along with freshman Mark Tangen all possibilities.

On defense will be sophomore Howard Beito and freshmen Pat Murray, Jeff Hockin, Terry Mishler and Brian Ranum, a Thief River Falls skater who is coming back from an eye injury suffered in early practice drills.

Freshmen foreward Gary Usitalo, out of action for the past 10 days with a severe thigh bruise, is expected to miss at least another week of action.

"We're looking forward to our first game," mentioned Goddard, who expects to see a formidable offering from the Beavers, who will bring their fourth, fifth and sixth varsity lines to Thief River Falls. Freshman Bob Fitzgerald of Thief River Falls is expected to skate for Bemidji tonight.

SEE WHAT THE FASTEST SNOWMOBILES ON EARTH DO TO A SLOW SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Come to Winnipeg Stadium on Sunday, December 7 and see the dead of winter come roaring to life with the screaming start of the 1980 Sno-Pro Racing season.

At over 100 mph on glare ice, this is oval track snowmobile racing the likes of which you've never seen.

Top factory teams. The hottest new snowmobile technology. The world's best drivers. See and meet 1979 World Champion Bob Elsner of Team Arctic, Heteen Cup Winner Jim Dimmerman of Team Arctic and 1980 High Point driver Brad Hulings of Team Scorpion. Watch them compete on machines that outaccelerate anything from motorcycles to dragsters, on ice most men can hardly walk across.

Bundle up the whole family Sunday afternoon and we'll cut your chill with the first exciting heat. It'll be a cold day in Hades before there's a hotter race in Winnipeg.

Minnesota Outdoors

by Stu and Dee Mann

Carrol Henderson, nongame supervisor, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, section of wildlife, St. Paul, MN 55155, can be contacted about bird surveys or 'bird problems.' Henderson has also written a "Minnesota Guide To Winter Bird Feeding."

"Winter bird feeding is most successful if the specific needs of different birds are considered. More birds can be attracted to a home if a variety of feeds and feeders are employed," she writes.

"The grains most popular for bird feeding include sunflower seeds, corn, milo and millet. Sunflower seeds are probably the best and the most popular seed. They are preferred by goldfinches, bluejays, cardinals, black-capped chickadees, evening grosbeaks, grackles, pine siskins, purple finches, pine grosbeaks, and white-breasted nuthatches.

"Either whole or cracked corn is popular among bluejays, grackles, house sparrows, starlings and pheasants.'

"Sand or grit is necessary in the gizzards of birds at a winter feeder to help grind up the seeds consumed. It can be mixed right into the food or supplied at a separate location.

"Feeders will probably be most successful if they are located in a sheltered location in or near trees, bushes or buildings.

"It is best to place feeders out in mid-September to attract the attention of winter residents as they move into your area. Feeding should be continued until about mid-April. Since birds which are using a winter feeder are often doing so in lieu of migrating farther south where a wild source of food would be available, they become very vulnerable to the weather if their food supply runs out. The primary rule of winter bird feeding is: "Once you begin feeding, don't stop until spring when natural food again becomes available".

"Squirrels may post a significant problem at bird feeders. They can scare birds away, eat a large amount of expensive seed, and waste seed by scattering it out of the feeder. Red squirrels are sometimes so aggressive that they will kill small birds which they catch at "their" feeder. A few commercial bird feeders have a counterweight on the back which closes the feeder when a squirrel sits on it. If a feeder is placed on a pole, a circular tin-shaped shield can be employed to deter squirrels.

"If squirrel problems persist, a live-trap can be used to trap squirrels and release them in an area where they will not again bother you or other persons who feed birds."

Winter bird list — Golden-crowned Kinglet, Bohemian Waxwing, Cedar waxwing, Red-winged blackbird, Rusty blackbird, Common grackle, Cardinal, Evening grosbeak, Purple finch, Ring-necked pheasant, Mourning dove, Common flicker, Red-bellied woodpecker, Red-headed woodpecker, hairy woodpecker, Downy woodpecker, Grayjay, Bluejay, Pine grosbeak, Hoary redpoll, common redpoll, Pine siskin, American goldfinch, Red crossbill, White-winged crossbill, Dark-eyed junco, Harris sparrow, Fox sparrow, House sparrow, Black-capped chickadee, Boreal chickadee, Tufted titmouse, White-breasted nuthatch, Red-breasted nuthatch, Brown creeper, Robin, Rufous-sided towhee, Tree sparrow, White-throated sparrow, Starling and Song sparrow.

Most Area Teams Open Sports Seasons This Week

Area sports scene, which began with one game last week when Plummer defeated Gonvick 55-14 in girls basketball, swings into full gear this week as the 1980-81 winter sports season takes shape at Goodridge, Oklee, Plummer, Marshall County Central, Middle River and Grygla.

Things began on four fronts Tuesday. In girls basketball, Middle River, Goodridge and Oklee all opened play, while Minnesota State High School League cooperative wrestling programs debuted in the area when Plummer-Erskine met Warren-Alvarado.

Girls basketball teams at Marshall County Central and Grygla will open their seasons Thursday when the Nordics visit Middle River and the Eagles play at Hallock.

Boys basketball starts at most sites Friday when Grygla visits Goodridge, Plummer is at East Grand Forks Sacred Heart, Marshall County Central travels to Argyle and Middle River goes to Warren. Oklee will wait until Friday, Dec. 12 to open at Fosston.

Oklee starts its wrestling season Saturday by participating in an invitational tournament at Bagley. The Bobcats host Plummer-Erskine in a Monday dual.

Boosters Club Meeting Set For Thursday

Thief River Falls Sports Boosters club will meet at 12 noon Thursday when lunch will be served in the office of Lincoln high school athletic director Russ Smith.

Guest speakers at the meeting will be Lincoln boys and girls basketball coaches Glen Peters and Tom Schafer. Both teams open their 1980-81 seasons at home this weekend when the boys host Roseau Friday and the girls entertain Tri-County high school of Karlstad Saturday. Game time both nights is 7:30 p.m.

Middle River 62
Strandquist 35

Dawn Nelson scored 23 points while Mary Gentry dominated the boards Tuesday to lead Middle River past Strandquist 62-35 in season-opening girls high school basketball action.

The Skippers built a 12-4 first quarter lead and stretched that to 33-14 by halftime.

Gentry, in addition to her rebounding, scored 12 points while Becky Jesme added 10. Middle River was playing without starter Patti Blazek, who missed the game because of illness. Laurel Opheim led Strandquist with 12 points.

Middle River hosts area rival Marshall County Central in a key early season District 32 test Thursday.

Goodridge 50

Turnovers and foul trouble plagued Goodridge Tuesday as the Huskies dropped a 63-50 season-opening girls basketball decision to Mount St. Benedict.

Ahead 29-28 at halftime, the Blue Wave broke it open by out-scoring the Huskies 20-9 in the third quarter to take a 49-35 lead into the final eight minutes.

Angie Berndt and Mary Jo Kiesow led Goodridge with 15 and 14 points, respectively, but both players fouled out of the game. Mary Biermaier of Mount St. Benedict led all scorers with 28 points.

Goodridge, scheduled to play at Gonvick Thursday, was 18-for-29 at the foul line last night. Mount St. Benedict made 7 of 21 free throw attempts.

Cardinals 18

Eight pins and three forfeits shortened the length of Tuesday's season-opening wrestling meet at Plummer as Warren-Alvarado defeated Plummer-Erskine 49-18.

"If we can find some more bodies to fill a couple of weight classes we could be all right," explained Gary Brantl, coach of the cooperative Plummer-Erskine program. But despite the combination of the two schools for wrestling, the Cardinals still had to give up 18 points on forfeits.

Brantl's youthful squad, featuring just one senior and two juniors, will be at Crookston for a Thursday dual.

TRF To Host DNR Forum On Trails Thursday

One of 14 Department of Natural Resources public forums on a state-wide recreational trail plan that are scheduled to be held throughout Minnesota in early December will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

The DNR has scheduled the meetings to gather opinions on which to base a state-wide recreational trail plan. The DNR wants to know whether users want more or fewer trails; what kind of trails (horseback riding, snowmobiling, hiking, etc.); and where the trails should be located.

In addition to the Thief River Falls site, trail meetings are scheduled for Fergus Falls, Appleton, Bemidji, St. Paul, Rochester, Mankato, Brainerd, Willmar, St. Cloud, Slayton, Chisholm, Duluth and Minneapolis.

TRF YOUTH HOCKEY

Parents meeting for Squirts hockey players, ages 9-10, has been scheduled for Saturday at 9 a.m. at the sports arena.

by Stu and Dee Mann

An open letter from John McKane, senior editor, The Minnesota Volunteer.

Dear Stu and Dee—

Since you two are the conservation columnists emeritus of the North Star state, aka "Minnesota Outdoors", I shall once again turn to you to spread the gospel.

In the November-December edition of The Minnesota Volunteer we will request our 73,000 subscribers to make a voluntary, tax-deductible contribution to our Volunteer magazine fund.

We hope to raise at least two times $23,500, the cost of a single edition of the Department of Natural Resources magazine.

We elected this alternative for a simple reason: We will have to cancel one annual edition of the Volunteer — probably the May-June edition in each of the next two years — if we can't find ways and means to finance the per edition cost.

As you know, we have a statewide government austerity program. No complaint about that; we must tighten belts like everyone else.

But I will not opt for the second alternative: a paid subscription Volunteer.

Why?

My counterpart and good friend, Charles Post, South Dakota's fish and game commission information and education director, said:

You were right, John. We should never have gone to a charge system on our magazine (1976). It's the biggest headache we ever encountered. . ."

My specific reasons are there:

(1) I am familiar with the policies of all 46 states which publish conservation magazines. None of them has ever been able to document that a "charge" publication is less expensive to produce than a "no charge" public service magazine, such as Minnesota and Missouri produce.

(2) Without advertising — and we obviously can't accept commercial advertising in a DNR publication — no publication, newspapers or magazine alike, will survive long.

(3) A subscription charge automatically means you must add staff for billing, posting and accounting. Further, you must immediately retain a subscription promotion firm; Example: Michigan DNR, which pays $30,000 a year for subscription sales promotion.

(4) Any state that claims it is "making money" on subscription charges — without advertising — is either deluding itself, or practicing very poor economics. Such states are either not counting salary costs of added staff or not considering a host of related costs when it goes to a charge publication.

For example: The Minnesota Volunteer with only 2.5 full person-hour equivalent on its full-time staff, holds its per copy cost down to 30 cents. The Volunteer staff is the smallest of any state in the Union, on a per copy basis (73,000 circulation; readership 300,000 plus).

This may sound a bit boastful but we will not take a "back seat" to any state magazine in the United States.

There are two final reasons why I biennially plead with our Legislators not to tell us to charge.

First, if we charge, the old publishing rule applies: "if you charge, we charge!. ." For 40 years, Volunteers authors and artists — top-notch private sector Minnesotans — have given of their free time and talent out of a sense of conservation stewardship.

States that have gone commercial have learned this fact of life the hard way. They must pay $300 to $800 per article — and then pay for their color art besides!

Well, we would like to think, on this, the Volunteer's 40th anniversary, that we have paid for ourselves: that our school kids who are assigned Volunteer material by their teachers for classroom exercises; that the timeless message the Volunteer conveys has been and will always be a good investment for Minnesota citizens.

MEMBERS OF THE Thief River Falls archery club have been practicing in the club's indoor facility located above the old arena in preparation for the 1981 indoor league season, which begins in January. Annual archery club meeting will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. in the meeting room of the public library. New members are invited to attend the meeting, which will discuss the 12-week indoor season. Those shown in the picture include, left to right, Brian Peterson, Danny Roach, Kimberly Roach, Candy Bergh, Shelly Bruggeman and Leslie Nelson.

Antlers Serve Many Purposes, Reports NWF Monthly Magazine

They may look like excess baggage, but nature has adorned most male deer with antlers for some very good reasons, according to the current issue of Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine. They're handy as weapons in the mating season, serve as "air conditioners" in hot weather, and provide mourishment for other animals after they're shed.

Antlers begin to grow in early spring, starting as soft, swollen pads on the skull, and lengthening into club-like structures, the National Wildlife Federation monthly publication reports. While growing, antlers are covered with a soft brown-haired skin called "velvet." Right under this skin are many tiny blood vessels that carry food and minerals to the growing antlers.

While the antlers are in velvet, they can be hurt very easily. A male deer in velvet is careful to jump out of the way of low-hanging branches. If an antler is knocked against a tree during the velvet stage, it will bleed.

Within four and a half months or so, the antlers are full-sized. On the moose, full-sized can mean more than seven feet wide from tip to tip, and a weight of more that 45 pounds, according to the Ranger Rick report. They attain these impressive proportions in just three to four months, making them the fastest growing tissue known.

During mating, or rutting season, a buck uses his antlers to fight other males. With a quick lunge one male will attack a rival, head on, and lock antlers. After a few minutes of shoving and pushing, during which pieces of antler may be broken, the weaker male will usually retreat, leaving the victor to mate with the female deer in his territory.

Heavy as they are, antlers are helpful during hot weather. "During the summer when a buck's antlers are growing, they act as an air conditioner to help get rid of extra body heat," notes Ranger Rick.

At full size, antlers harden beneath their velvet and the blood supply stops. The dead and dry velvet peels off in strips, aided by the buck's vigorous rubbing against trees and bushes. The antlers are now bone-hard, with furrowed bases and pointed tines, ready for the challenges of the rutting season.

When the mating is over, the antlers suddenly drop from the buck's head, leaving only a pair of bony bases from which next year's set will grow.

This cycle is the same with all of the more than 50 kinds of deer in the world except the Himalayan musk deer, which have long curved teeth to protect them from their enemies, and the Chinese water deer, which have long, sharp tusks. The female caribou and reindeer are the only female deer that grow antlers.

Shed antlers no longer serve the deer, but they are a welcome sight to other forest dwellers. Because they are made of calcium, salt and other minerals important in the diet of many animals, such creatures as mice, chipmunks, squirrels and porcupines gnaw away at them. What's left decays and is an enriching addition to the soil, so even plants and trees benefit from antlers.

Clean Air Is Seen As Key To City Life

Urban dwellers and commuters concerned about air pollution and improved transportation in their cities will find up-to-date help and information in a free publication produced by the National Wildlife Federation for the U.S. environmental protection agency.

"A Citizen's Guide to Clean Air and Transportation" is designed to get people involved in helping their cities reach three important goals for the 80's: clean air, efficient use of federal transportation funds and cultural and economic revitalization.

"Is it possible to cut our transportation energy use per capita in half while maintaining our standard of living? Can we clean up the air and maintain high levels of mobility? Will downtown areas again bustle with nightlife and commercial activity? If our cities are to be saved, these are the challenges we face," notes the citizen's guide, which was written by David Burwell and Christopher Meyer, transportation specialists with the NWF, the nation's largest conservation education organization.

To help readers understand these challenges, the 59-page guide explains with the help of photographs, charts, and graphs the health and economic effects of air pollution, how cities plan their transportation systems, and how cities are affected by the clean air act amendments passed by Congress in 1977.

Bicycle transportation is the topic of a final section in the NWF guide. "Admittedly, there are some very real limitations on use of bikes, such as safety, convenience, speed and comfort," authors Burwell and Meyer agree. But they insist that these limitations can be overcome.

Copies of the "Citizen's Guide to Clean Air and Transportation" are available free of charge by writing to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Printing and Management (PM-215), Washington, D.C. 20460.

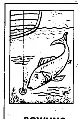
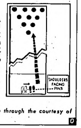
FISHING



Modern angling experts choose to fish for most types of fish through the middle of the day, rather than the early morning or late evening. Anglers have probably wasted more hours on early morning fishing than on any other superstition. But for salt water fishing, early morning is best. The fish feed on plankton that are noted for their dark-to-dawn movements.

BOWLING

A "fast" lane is a slick one where the ball has difficulty hooking. To properly compensate for this condition, you should move your stance position a couple of boards to the right to form more of a diagonal with the one-three pin pocket. This action will serve to diminish the need for a sharp breaking hook ball.



These facts come to you through the courtesy of Teacher's Scotch.

LITTLE OAK . .

Guests at the Marvin Bakken home on Thanksgiving day were Mr. and Mrs. Leule Quam, Mr. and Mrs. Gaylen Quam and Eldon and Allison Quam and Gary Vad, and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Race and Jennifer.

Visitors at the Terry Haugen home Thursday evening were Larry Johnsrud, Loren Holen and Joel Fideler.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Mostrom of Gonvick and Mr. and Mrs. Willie Good visited at the Orben Good home on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Good visited at the Jorgen Bjerklie and Willie Mostrom homes in Gonvick on Friday.

Supper guests at the Gary B. Johnson home at Kratka on Thanksgiving day were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burstad of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Homme, Mishawn and Chad, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Haugen, Floyd Haugen of Parkville and Bradley Robyn and Brian Johnson.

Floyd Haugen of Parkville arrived here on Thanksgiving day and he stayed until Sunday evening. He was busy working over at his farm. He also visited at the Terry Haugen home when he was here.

Cora Oftelie and Clara Bjerklie visited at the Gene Marquis home Saturday afternoon. They also visited at the Arnold Haugen home Saturday evening.

Mrs. Gladys Hanson arrived in Grand Forks, N.D. Monday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Ose met her at the airport. She had spent three weeks with her son Lester and his children who live in New Jersey. She stayed at the Ose home until Thanksgiving day and she accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mostrom home.

JEWELS FOR THOUGHT
BY PHIL HESS

One thing every new house should have: a self-cleaning family room.
When the price of duck feathers increases, down will be up!
When parents see the handwriting on the wall . . . they know it's time to paint.
Small boy to another: "That tongue twister you taught me was also a mouth soaper."
Sheer nonsense: something you can easily see through.
As experienced jewelers, we can tell a good value from a poor one. Many stores and catalogs are featuring jewelry with ficticious list prices to make their sale prices seem a bargain. Don't be fooled, it's sheer nonsense. Check with us before you buy.

Decisions? Decisions?

Many people refuse to make a decision. You know who they are, they keep on saying the same old thing.

"We should have bought 10 years ago."

Let me show you an ad for a farm that ran in the November 4, 1970 addition of the Thief River Falls times.

600 acres, 520 crop acres. $80 per acre, 15 year Contract for Deed.

You are now thinking the same thing. "We should have bought that 10 years ago. Just think, you could have bought a $48,000 farm with around a $10,000 down payment. The property would have carried itself all that time as the renter would have made the payments. Market value today on a 600 acre farm is right around $450,000-$500,000. That means you could sell the farm today with a gain of near $450,000! Imagine, a real genuine case right here in Thief River Falls where $10,000 approx. made a half million. Instead of saying: "I should have", you could now just retire on the interest dollars for the rest of your life, with no worries about whether or not the Social Security checks are going to keep coming.

Can you make a decision now? Or do you want to wait another 10 years?

We have farms in most areas.

Call and check our current farm inventory at any of our locations.

EMPLOYEE SUGGESTIONS PROGRAM is now in its second year at Arctic Enterprises following a successful four-month trial in 1980. During the period of its initial trial, the program produced about 100 ideas and 15 winners were selection to share in a drawing for prizes. The employees provided suggestions on quality, cost reduction, energy, conservation, safety or increased productivity to benefit the company. A review committee reviewed the ideas and made awards of cash or the equivalent in merchandise. The new program will run through July 31, 1981, and will include employees in all of the company's U.S. and Canadian operations. Local winners shown with Arctic president Ken Severinson (front row, center) are, left to right: Front row, Tom Miller, Wayne Peters, Randy Adamson and Don Stanislawski; back row, Orlie Rux, Randy Vondal, Peggy Ettestad, Stuart Rugland, Kent Espeseth, Midge Green and Clara Reierson. Not pictured are Del Hinden and Hazel Huot.

Give Gifts To Cancer Society

Memorial gifts to the American cancer society were received recently in memory of Harold Walseth, Selmer Larson, George Stewart, Emmett Mousley, H. S. Williams and Leo Ellingson, according to Mrs. Charles Krause, memorial chairwoman for the Pennington county chapter.

Memorials are used for cancer research, education and service.

Anderson In College Fest

Bryan Anderson, son of Marvin and Mabel Anderson of Thief River Falls, is participating in the 24th annual festival of Christmas at Bethel college in St. Paul, December 5-7.

For the first time, the festival will center around a Scandinavian tradition. Over 300 singers and instrumentalists, wearing Swedish costumes, will portray the theme of "a glorious light."

Recognition Banquet For Scouters Set

Annual Voyageur Trails District, Boy Scouts of America adult leader recognition banquet will be held Saturday, December 6, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the University of Minnesota, Crookston. A social gathering will be held at 6:30 followed by the evening meal and program.

Various awards and certificates will be presented to volunteer scout leaders for their contribution to local and district Cub scouting, Boy scouting and Exploring programs. All volunteer leaders, friends and the general public are invited to attend this event. Evening will include program, awards presentation and dinner.

Tickets are available at the door of the food service building at UMC.

Voyageur Trails district, part of the Northern Lights council, Boy Scouts of America, is comprised of scouting communities in Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Norman and Mahnomen counties. Currently there are about 1,200 youth members involved in the three scout programs.

Northern Lights council is able to provide the scouting program to local communities through the efforts of United Way and sustaining membership enrollment campaigns.

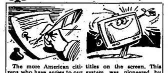
THE PUBLIC INTEREST



The more American citizens who have access to our communications media, the better off our economy and our democracy can be. As Thomas Jefferson wrote: "The basis of our government being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right . . . enlighten the people and tyranny will vanish."

While a free press and free speech are guaranteed by our constitution, until earlier this year, deaf Americans could not really get much from most television programs.

Now, however, three television networks are broadcasting shows with "closed captioning," the audio portion written out like subtitles on the screen. This system was pioneered by the National Captioning Institute, a nonprofit organization.

The words can only be seen on special TV sets or sets with special "TeleCaption" adapters. These adapter units are being marketed by Sears, Roebuck and Co. Sears now also sells sets with the decoding equipment already built in. The system is demonstrated in Sears stores.

About 30 hours of closed-captioned prime-time programs are televised each week by ABC, NBC, PBS, and independent stations. Information about the captioned programs is included in many newspaper and magazine TV listings.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q: I am a widow receiving Veterans Administration compensation. How do I arrange to have my check deposited directly to my checking account?

A: Ask your bank to submit a Form SF-1199A: Authorization for Deposit of Federal Recurring Payments, to your nearest VA regional office. Be sure to have your deceased husband's file number or Social Security number with you.

Q: I received an honorable discharge after completing a two-year enlistment in the military service. I had no wartime service. Am I eligible to receive a headstone or grave marker from the Veterans Administration?

A: A headstone or grave marker is available from VA for any deceased veteran of wartime or peacetime service (other than active duty for training) who was discharged under conditions other than dishonorable.

Q: What are the benefits to the veteran of using a Veterans Administration guaranteed loan to purchase a home?

A: The security a veteran offers a lender is strengthened by the fact that the credit of the U.S. government stands behind the loan. Because of the protection of the VA guarantee, the veteran often does not have to make a down payment, as is usually required. Also, the loan may be prepaid, partially or fully, at any time without premium or fee.

Q: I receive retired pay as a result of military service and I also qualify for a Veterans Administration clothing allowance for prosthetic devices I wear. Am I required to waive a portion of my retirement equal to the clothing allowance?

A: No. But you must waive an amount equal to any Veterans Administration compensation you receive.

Q: My husband was killed in service. I am now financially able to purchase a home. Will the Veterans Administration guarantee a loan for me?

A: Yes. Call or visit your nearest Veterans Administration regional office. Assistance is also available through veterans service organizations.

Q — I served in the Air National Guard from February 1, 1955 until March 1, 1958. I was on active duty for training several times during this period — for a total of 285 days. Am I eligible for a Veterans Administration home loan guarantee?

A — No. To be eligible for VA home loan benefits a veteran must have served at least 90 days on active duty war-time service or more than 180 days of active duty during peacetime. For purposes of eligibility for home loans, active duty for training is not qualifying service.

Q — Can I make arrangements in advance for the burial of my wife and children at a national cemetery in the event one or more of them dies before I do?

A — No. Application for burial in a national cemetery must be made at the time of death of an eligible veteran or his eligible dependent. The selected mortuary, Veterans Administration cemetery or any VA regional office will provide information and assistance in matters pertaining to burial and allowances.

Q — Must I take my Veterans Administration insurance dividend in cash or do I have other options?

A — There are several dividend options available to policyholders other than cash. For full information contact your nearest VA regional office.

Study Shows 1 In 10 Drivers Is 65 Or Over

Americans who are in the category of 65 years of age and over have received increasing amounts of attention in recent years. But one aspect, the senior citizen effect on traffic safety has not been emphasized, according to Minnesota public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

In a recent issue of its monthly newsletter, the National highway traffic safety administration addressed the subject with an article by Dr. Darlene J. Winter. Winter is on a year's sabbatical with NHTSA, on loan from teachers college of New York's Columbia university.

In her research, Dr. Winter found that one of 10 drivers in the country is 65 or over. Moreover, 23 per cent are 55 or over and this segment has shown a 25 per cent rise since 1961. What this means is the percentage of 65 or over will rise dramatically in the next several years.

Winter also pointed out that:

+ Older women are increasing in ratio to older men (150 to 100) with the result that more of them are solely responsible for their transportation. Among their main fears are driving on freeways, driving alone at night and having visual problems affect their driving.

+ Older drivers are more cautious. A study of 31 states concludes that the elderly have the lowest median accident involvement but are more likely to have a fatal accident than drivers from age 35 to 64.

+ Research shows that older people are more involved in specific types of accidents and cited for the following violations:

Failure to yield right-of-way, improper turns, inattention to traffic lights and stop signs, improper lane use, driving the wrong way on a one-way street and failure to signal when changing lanes.

"When their numbers and characteristics are taken into account, this group may be a challenge and force a new look at licensing practices as well as other components of traffic safety," Dr. Winter concluded.

STEINER . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Halvorson and Mr. and Mrs. Arvid Halvorson, Lisa and Aaron drove to Manvel Thursday morning to enjoy Thanksgiving dinner and supper with Mr. and Mrs. Mike Hart, Dicky and Chris at their home, together with Mr. and Mrs. ElRoy Enervold of Langdon.

Sunday supper guests at the Lloyd Larson home were Mr. and Mrs. Orville Harstad and Mrs. Gerald Swaser all of Viking.

Thanksgiving dinner guests at the Jim Muzzy home were Melvin Saugen, Mrs. Anne Muzzy and Albert Peterson, besides Jerry, Kurt and Scott Muzzy.

What is forever?

Last week there was all the tenderness of young love. Today they broke up. And there is hurt in the wake of love — disillusion and bitterness.

What about you? Did you marry your high school sweetheart? Few of us do. Most of us have been through experiences like this, yet we survived.

And some of us who did marry our high school sweethearts lived on to find that it didn't work out. We had the trauma of divorce, which inflicts much deeper wounds.

Where did we turn? What did we do? It depends on how long ago it was. Because there was a time when you didn't turn to the church about divorce and other problems which, like it or not, are a part of life.

No longer. Today's church is with you in all things. Try it and see!

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

In regard to Mr. John Wengeler's comments published in Wednesday, the Nov. 26th edition of the Times.

How long do "sportsmen" (the category excludes the very small number of slobs who seek to hide behind the word, and who Mr. Wengeler and others of like thinking consistently exemplarize when attacking an extremely large, conscientious and law-abiding group of citizens who happen to enjoy hunting and trapping and like pursuits) have to listen to unsubstantiated drivel about the evils of the leghold trap and the "merciless" slaughter of our wild animals?

I would suggest you anti-trappers and anti-hunters get your facts straight before making your attacks. Have you ever considered accompanying a trapper to see what things are really like? Or are you simply content to rely on propaganda put out in newsletters from idealistic "wildlife" organizations?

Addressing Mr. Wengeler's concerns... it's probably true that some animals die in leghold traps, but very few of those are in traps, leghold or not, set by conscientious trappers. It's the law, at least in Minnesota, that traps must be checked daily. Slobs are a minority.

Granted, an animal left in an unchecked trap would die a slow, agonizing death due to starvation, but in the case of a leghold trap would not die from pain inflicted by the trap. An animal caught in one of your so-called "humane" traps would suffer the same fate if not killed immediately. Slobs are a minority.

As far as leghold traps being "excruciatingly" painful, what else have you been told by a fox or raccoon? When a trapper approaches a set for a check, a trapped animal will, in many cases, be sitting calmly or even sleeping... not howling with pain. Occasionally an animal will attempt to chew off a leg, but it's not likely unless the animal has been in the trap for a long period.

Non-target animals... dogs, cats, etc., do get caught. It's usually in places they should not be. Be reminded that pet owners have a responsibility in taking care of those animals. When they are caught, though, all a trapper has to do is open the trap and the animals run off with usually nothing more than a numb leg.

I'm not familiar with the law in other states, but in Minnesota traps are required by law to be tagged with the owner's name and address and usually are, so it's relatively easy to track down violators. Traps that are not are against the law.

Trappers are not intent on torture and do not use leghold traps to see animals suffer. A leghold trap is simply a means of holding an animal, comparable to a pen for cattle, and it's extremely doubtful that the animal is going through "excruciating" pain when caught in one. Those of you who have talked to these animals may have heard something else. Death for a trapped animal is usually swift and painless at the hands of the trapper. Nobody, not even trappers, like to see an animal suffer. How could anybody imply that a large group of people are bent on torture? Come on, Mr. Wengeler.

Oh... and Mr. Wengeler... about the very pertinent comment you made about leaving the remains of the animals to rot? I'm sure that if you have some good use for the carcasses, you're welcome to them. When I'm gone, you can have my carcass, too.

The pelt is, of course, the main object of trapping. The sale of pelts in the state of Minnesota alone, brings millions of dollars each year into the state's economy. Sale of trapping licenses by the state contributes to the upgrading and preservation of our wildlife resources. In the same vein, trapping is a valuable management tool. Is it better to let our animals die from tulermia and a host of other problems or rot with mange, than use a valuable tool such as trapping to insure a healthy, stable wildlife population?

Sportsmen, including trappers, are the number one advocate of our wildlife and have done more than any other group, bar none, to further wildlife preservation and well being. The anti-trapping, anti-hunting groups fail to recognize the essentials in preserving our wildlife. Prohibition of trapping, of which a ban on the leghold trap is simply a first step, would prove catastrophic for a healthy wildlife population.

You are very dramatic in your attack of the leghold trap, Mr. Wengeler, painting a vivid picture of torture and mutilation of wild animals... all the while, not having the vaguest idea of the method, procedure or effects of using a leghold trap. Until you can fairly recognize and consider both sides of the question, maybe you should refrain from one-sided judgments based on the ideas of some idealistic bleeding heart whose writing Grizzly Adams stories and making money off people like you.

Letters like the one in Wednesday's edition of this paper verify the fact that there are uninformed in every category whose actions tend to do more harm than good. You'll need more evidence before you can show the guilt of the leghold trap in the torture of wild animals. If you're philosophy succeeds, Mr. Wengeler, you'll be partly to blame for the slow but sure death of countless more animals than were ever caught in a leghold trap.

Sincerely,
Davin Halvorson
Viking, Minnesota

To The Editor:

In response to the letter on trapping by John Wengeler in Wednesday's Times, I would like to give a trapper's side, and present some facts overlooked by Mr. Wengeler.

He stated that "trapping is on the increase because chic women and men must adorn themselves with fun furs, and because hobby trappers want extra cash.

It is true that furs are highly fashionable. It's also true that hobby trappers are able to make some extra money with the high price of fur nowadays. But being a trapper and also being acquainted with many others who enjoy the trapline, I would say trapping is on the increase because it's a form of outdoor recreation, like hunting or fishing or any other outdoor recreation. They're all on the increase. The difference is trapping is a more profitable form of recreation.

Mr. Wengeler estimated 15 million wild animals suffer slow, agonizing deaths in steel jaw or leghold traps. Does he realize that death in the wild is seldom humane? Left alone I'm sure wildlife could take care of itself. Law of the fang and claw would rule. Disease and starvation are other forms of nature's population control. Wouldn't this be a waste of a resource when man can harvest the surplus for his own use?

Personally I'm not of the opinion that the steel jaw trap is any more inhumane than little old mother nature herself.

According to wildlife biologist William H. Longby, 50 to 80 per cent of most Minnesota furbearers can be harvested without a population decline the next year. It is also documented that increased winter survival and improved reproduction result when the surplus animals are removed before winter sets in.

Also, in these days of economic uncertainty, let's not overlook the fur industry as an economic stimulant, which would be greatly reduced without the steel jaw trap. In 1974 Minnesota trappers took 3.6 million dollars in fur. In New York City alone fur is a billion dollar industry.

Getting back to Mr. Wengeler's letter and his statement that animals suffer slow agonizing deaths and that many traps are not checked for days or weeks at a time. Let's look at trapping methods used by me and other trappers I am familiar with. Eighty to 95 per cent of the critters trapped in Minnesota are aquatic oriented (mink, muskrat, beaver). These animals are easily taken in drowning sets which do them in in a few minutes. This may still sound cruel, but if we were to discontinue everything that involved an element of cruelty, the whole human race would have to change its habits on obtaining food, clothes and other necessities of life. If you don't believe this, take a tour of a slaughter house.

Minnesota law has it that all traps not set to kill the critter must be checked every 36 hours. It's true this is hard to enforce, but in reality any serious trapper is going to check his traps regularly, often in the early morning so a thief doesn't find his catch first. Good trappers will use a proper size trap so it won't break the critter's leg, yet hold it secure.

Muskrat traps are often checked twice a day or more when trapping dens, so very seldom is an animal left in the trap more than a few hours. How much the animal suffers in that amount of time I don't know. How can one equate the feelings of an animal to those of a human being?

I will say I've caught critters with a foot gone from a previous trapping season, or perhaps an accident or injury not related to trapping.

Somebody may have used too big a trap and broke the animal's leg. Yet when I've caught these three-leggers they were fat and healthy. Did this animal suffer as a human would if he lost a foot? I really don't think so. A human would certainly bleed to death or die of infection without medical help.

Also I've many times made a catch and found the critter asleep in the trap. I'm sure the foot is numbed and I doubt the pain is all that excruciating. But I don't know and won't present my trapper-biased opinion as a fact, only as an opinion based on observation.

Mr. Wengeler stated that thousands of dogs and cats also fall victim to the steel jaw trap. It's true that a dog or cat will occasionally get caught. Is this the fault of the trapper or the pet's owner who doesn't keep it at home? Each year there are thousands of complaints of dogs chasing deer. Cats are an enemy of game and song birds.

I think most trappers stay far enough away from farm houses to avoid catching domestic animals, but even if one is caught, I've never had trouble releasing a dog or cat unharmed.

Now let's look at the more humane trapping methods and traps. The body grip, a killer trap, is best suited to water animals. Although they have their advantages for certain sets, their bulk and high price makes them impractical in many situations. A drowning set can be used many times as easily without having to carry the extra bulk. For land sets the killer trap is impractical for a couple of reasons. For one, domestic animals couldn't be released. For another, fox and coyotes are too wary to be taken in such sets. The cage or live trap is impractical because of its bulk and high price.

As for Mr. Wengeler's statement about fake fur taking less energy to produce, I must ask this: Why deplete our petroleum and other non-renewable natural resources to get a lower quality synthetic product when we have an industry utilizing renewable furbearers? How big an industry would it take to replace the fur industry? (Remember it's a billion dollar industry in NYC alone.) How much pollution would this new industry cause? And what do you mean when you say it takes more energy to produce and maintain real fur than synthetic?

Before attempting to abolish trapping or even the leghold trap, let's not forget that trapping is one of the oldest honorable professions in America. Also, that it was the beaver trappers who pushed west in search of fur, and became the first explorers in North America.

With sound furbearer management and cooperation between trappers, land owners and wildlife biologists, it can be enjoyed by future generations. I'm aware that problems do exist. It's up to the trapper to be humane and considerate about his hobby or profession or we'll all lose.

Trapping is recognized as a tool in wildlife management. Let's not lose it and a tradition as American as turkey on Thanksgiving.

Sincerely,
Tony Brosseau

Do-It-Yourself

Tips from Stanley

Wallpaper Hanging Tips

Want to hang wallpaper like a pro? Here are a few professional tips.

Remove paper already on the walls with a removal preparation or hot water and a Stanley wall scraper. Patch holes and cracks with spackling compound. Seal them with shellac.

Measure walls to determine rolls of paper needed using charts provided by wallpaper manufacturer for estimating number of rolls.

On the wall with fewest windows and doors, measure off a distance a half-inch less than the wallpaper width.

Suspend a chalk line reel and plumb bob at this point and snap a chalk line to determine the straightness of the first panel and all succeeding strips.

If you don't have pre-pasted paper, mix paste in bucket, adding water until paste has consistency of sour cream.

Cut several lengths of wallcovering equal to height of wall plus three inch overlaps for the top and for the bottom.

Apply paste to paper on makeshift newspaper covered pasting table or board. Line up strip with chalk line and the ceiling leaving three-inch overlap at ceiling. Brush paper to wall using special paper hanger's brush. Cut excess paper at ceiling and base board with Stanley utility knife. Line up each additional panel with the preceding one and match the pattern.

Apply paper over switches and outlets, after removing cover plates. Cut away paper over openings with the utility knife. At windows, doors, mantels, etc., crease paper around edges first with a Stanley putty knife. Then cut paper along creases and press into place. All tools are available in hardware outlets.

PLUMMER . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Magers, Sarah and Kimberly, Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Arlt, Amy and Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Terry Rewertz, Justin and Jeana left Wednesday for Volin, S.D., to visit over the Thanksgiving holidays at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Katschke. They returned home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Prestegaard of Thief River Falls and Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Willett were Thanksgiving day dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sorenson.

Lee Vigstol of Minot was last Monday overnight guest at the Nels Vigstol home.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Vettelson and children and Mrs. Tommy Willett were Saturday lunch guests at the Lloyd Sorenson home.

An Appetizing Holiday Appetizer — And It's Low Calorie!

Mushrooms are mushrooming in America's kitchens. And Savory Stuffed Mushrooms are a super way to start off a splendid holiday dinner or buffet.

Surprise your family and guests with this appetizing holiday appetizer that's definitely low calorie. Whole mushrooms (66 calories per pound) are stuffed with fresh vegetables which have been marinated in low-calorie Italian dressing. Mushrooms and vegetables are then topped with a flavorful swirl of Snack Mate pasteurized process cheese spread. For an added festive touch, serve with Triscuit wafers.

SAVORY STUFFED MUSHROOMS

24 medium mushrooms
1/3 cup seeded and finely chopped tomato
1/4 cup finely chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons sliced scallions
1/3 cup low-calorie Italian dressing
Snack Mate pasteurized process cheese spread
Triscuit wafers

Remove stems from mushroom caps; chop stems and mix with tomato, green pepper and scallions. Place mushroom caps and vegetable mixture in a shallow dish. Pour dressing over mushroom caps and vegetable mixture. Cover and refrigerate at least 4 hours or overnight, turning mushroom caps occasionally. Spoon vegetable mixture evenly into mushroom caps. Garnish with Snack Mate pasteurized process cheese spread. Serve with Triscuit wafers. Makes 24 mushroom servings.

Transmission Line Talk

Manager Andrew L. Freeman of Minnkota Power cooperative expressed his views on opposition to the proposed MANDAN power line in a recent issue of the Minnkota Messenger. He discusses the right of way for the line, noting that the only land use loss would be the tower sites themselves (less than 50 acres for the 600-mile line).

And he points out some pertinent information as follows:

People who are so willing and anxious to be quoted ought to pause and carefully reassess their own position. If they are so sincere in their opposition to transmission lines, they ought to ask themselves why are they using electricity?

Every home and every community in the route of the MANDAN line across the state gets their power by means of a transmission line. These are located on the property of some far away landowners they don't even know or even care about.

Some town officials who have expressed opposition to the MANDAN line have contracted to get their future power from such far away places as Wheatland, Wyoming. Others in South Dakota and Minnesota who are equally opposed to transmission lines get their electric power via transmission lines from hydro sites on the Missouri River or the coal fields in North Dakota.

What all of us ought to do is stop and realize that we are living in a dangerous period of time. We need electricity as a replacement fuel. We are hooked on oil. We are exporting 90 billion dollars a year to satisfy our thirst. We are slaves of the OPEC oil trust. We are at their mercy, and they could cut our lifeline without a moment's notice.

While all this is going on, we fail to realize that we have access to great quantities of hydro power from Canada. We sit on lignite reserves capable of supplying the area's energy needs for a thousand years or more.

Instead of diligently working to promote their use, we occupy ourselves listening to and answering an unthinking group of people who fail to recognize or understand the precarious position we are in.

These people who seek to promote the false idea that eliminating transmission lines will eliminate headaches and nosebleeds may instead be bargaining for World War III. A war that will not only bring headaches and nosebleeds, but heartaches and death and the possible destruction of our once great and powerful nation.

People ought to stop and think. Newspaper editors and their reporters along with government leaders, ought to realize that the proper move at the moment is to switch to an electric economy wherever possible.

We ought to actively work to electrify the railroads, switch to an electric automobile and use electric heat instead of gas or oil. We ought to promote conservation, and work to develop and use alternate forms of energy when they can be shown to be practical and profitable for this area.

Instead of fighting power lines we ought to look at them and say, "there goes our lifeline." Beyond that, we ought to look upon the companies who are your electric power suppliers as your friend and neighbor. They may not be perfect, but no one brings you a better bargain 24 hours a day and 365 days a year.

Nuclear Windmill?

Promoters in Madison, Wis., promised a rock concert with an extra gimmick thrown in. It would be the world's first windmill-powered rock concert, according to an antinuclear sponsor. Three windmill generators were supposed to provide power for this "save-the-earth" gala. Also planned was a solar-powered electronic concert, but protesters scratched this idea when they found that two acres of solar collectors would be needed.

The concert was held on a Saturday afternoon in late September. The three windmills rotated merrily — on a calm day! And one of the windmills was rotating backwards!

It seems that backup electricity from the friendly local utility company was providing power to run both the concert amplifiers and the windmills. Electric generators will also work as motors, and apparently one was hooked up wrong, hence the backwards windmill.

Since Madison averages 32 per cent of its electric power from nuclear plants (even higher on weekends), the rock concert sponsors achieved the world's first nuclear-powered windmill!

New Direction For Democrats?

Following editorial is from the Morris Sun:

The Reagan-GOP landslide raises interesting questions about the future direction of the national Democratic party. While the election of a Republican president is not in itself remarkable, the establishment of Republican control of the Senate indicates the importance of new currents in American politics. The defeat of a small army of liberal Democrats in the Senate also portends major changes in the Democratic leadership as the party begins to adjust to its new opposition role.

The voters' rejection of sixties-style liberalism could turn out to be the most significant aspect of the 1980 election. "The Reagan landslide is very deep and very broad," concedes Morris Udall, one of the few prominent Congressional liberals to survive the onslaught. "It seems people are asking for a little less government and a little less interference," Udall adds.

Here in Minnesota, probably the last bastion of liberalism, it is difficult to sense the dramatic shift in the nation's mood. But to voters in the "Sun Belt", the GOP gains in the recent election came as no surprise.

In the last three decades, the western states have become solidly Republican, just as the South was once solidly Democratic. Meanwhile, Democrats have lost so much ground in the South that Mr. Reagan was able to carry all but one state in his contest with a native Southern Democrat. All but two Southern states are now represented in the Senate by at least one Republican.

After post-census congressional redistricting, the South and West combined will control 290 electoral votes, twenty more than the number needed to win a presidential election. The significance of regional power shifts will not be lost on Democratic leaders.

Many observers are predicting that the Democratic party will move to the right, with candidates abandoning the heavy emphasis on government intervention which has characterized the party for decades. If this occurs, a "neoconservative" like Senator Daniel Moynihan of New York could be the party's standard bearer in 1984.

It is also possible that Democratic politicians will selectively repudiate liberal doctrines, espousing a hybrid ideology. California Governor Jerry Brown's combination of fiscal conservation and social liberalism exemplifies this approach.

Democrats could also choose to return to populist roots in an attempt to regain the party's image as the champion of the working man.

Over forty per cent of the delegates in the 1980 Democratic national convention were government employees. As the Democratic party has become increasingly associated with big government and bureaucracy, it has alienated constituencies that once accounted for the party's strength. But if Democratic politicians spurn the ivory tower "new politics" ideology in favor of a straightforward appeal to pocketbook issues, a Democratic resurgence could be in the making.

Of course the Democratic party will recover its recent losses very quickly if the Reagan administration fails to accomplish the tax cuts and spending cuts which have been promised. Mr. Reagan has until the 1982 congressional elections to carry out the initial phase of his agenda.

But even if Mr. Reagan is entirely successful in accomplishing all of his objectives, the Democratic party is likely to demonstrate its resilience in upcoming elections. At the very least, Democrats will provide the American political system with a strong and well-organized opposition.

Borrowed Nonsense:

On an icy and blustery winter day, the cold and shivering man arrived at the home of a sick friend. "I almost didn't get here," he puffed. "For every step I took I slid back two."

"If that's the case," the friend asked, "how did you manage to get here at all?"

"I wouldn't have," the man said, "but I said to myself 'the heck with it' and turned around and started back home."

During a game of chess, the wife said to her husband: "This reminds me of years ago when we were dating."

"What do you mean," the husband asked. "We never played chess."

"No," the little woman replied, "but it took you two hours to make a move."

Holiday Time Is Action Time

AND TODAY'S EASY-TO-SHOOT HOME MOVIES CATCH ACTION AS SNAPSHOTS NEVER CAN.

Here come the holidays with families visiting, students and friends home for vacations, lots of parties, gift giving excitement, and fun as the general mood. What better way to catch all the expressions and action than movies, which are so easy to shoot and such pleasure to share?

A decorated tree is a great snapshot, but did you get Dad in the action of swiping the popcorn strings, the kitten pulling down the tinsel, or the kids sneaking around the presents? What about Mom and six other relatives all trying to get dinner at the same time? And one of the little ones falling into the cake?

These are more complete memories than snapshots, and they're so easy to "shoot." Today's movie cameras are lightweight, compact and many are reasonably priced. They load easily with cartridges which automatically set the exposure. The Sankyo shown is an inexpensive silent model with "green and go" settings. Set the dials to green, look through the viewfinder and film your holiday happenings. Here are some tips to make your movie-making easier:

Movies are easy to shoot these days, with easy handling models like this Sankyo silent, but some members of the family need to be coaxed.

- Have plenty of film and fresh batteries on hand.
- Planning a big holiday dinner? Pass the camera around the table and let everyone "aim and shoot" to spice the action.
- Indoors, use a fast ASA 160 film. If the room is a bit dim just use a couple of photo-flood lights in regular lamps—don't get complicated.
- Don't act like a director . . . relax and have fun.
- Shoot for six to ten seconds so your film isn't jumpy when you show it.
- If babies are involved, get down to their level when you film.

One of the nicest things about movies is that watching the results is something families do together. We can't even say that about television these days.

Looking Backward

1900 — 80 YEARS AGO

The large saw mill of the St. Hilaire Lumber Co. closed down after a successful season. — The 1900 census showed an Indian population on the Red Lake reservation of 1,849, up slightly from ten years ago. — H.M. Hicks is locating the crockery department of his furniture store in an adjoining building.

1920 — 60 YEARS AGO

Organization of a Legion auxiliary unit is scheduled at a meeting this week. — John L. Durbin, prominent early-day lumberman here, died at 64.

1930 — 50 YEARS AGO

District judge Andrew Grindeland of Warren retured after 27 years of service, and Governor Theodore Christianson appointed Julius J. Olson, also of Warren, to succeed him.

1940 — 40 YEARS AGO

Oscar Vigen, Rocksbury 4-H club member, was awarded a free trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago. — Total TRF city tax rate was set at 97.96 mills for 1940, compared to 107.84 mills for 1939, the rate for city purposes being reduced nearly ten mills.

1950 — 30 YEARS AGO

Information was being assembled here to back up the TRF community's request for air passenger service by Wisconsin Central Airlines. — Carl Wennberg was recuperating from severe burns suffered in an explosion in his welding shop. — Capt. A.C. Tiedman of the TRF National Guard unit is heading a drive to build up the enlisted strength from 68 to 90 men.

1960 — 20 YEARS AGO

Plans are being finalized for the 1960 Pennington county United Fund drive, with $20,000 set as the goal. — Local school board approved a budget of $1,422,197.95, making necessary an increase of nearly 15 mills in school taxes. — Thief River Falls increased in population from 6,926 to 7,151; according to the 1960 census, but Pennington county lost almost 500 people in the past 10 years. — Bruce Russell, 16, of rural Thief River Falls won the state 4-H tractor program competition and was awarded an all-expense paid trip to Chicago for the 4-H Congress.

1970 — 10 YEARS AGO

Morris Hursh, commissioner of the Minnesota department of public welfare, addressed a regional information meeting in Thief River Falls. — Although total assessed valuations of Pennington county increased by $1,523,317 during the past year, TRF taxpayers will have a net increase of 6.55 mills in taxes payable in 1971 because budgets of the county, city and school district have increased by a combined total of $803,174 over a year ago.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

This letter is in regard to the trapping article written by John Wengeler which appeared in "Letters to the Editor" in Wednesday's November 26th edition of the Times.

Mr. Wengeler, have you ever seen a furbearer in a leghold trap? Many times the animal is asleep in the trap! When sprung, the trap grips the paw and simply holds the animal. The foot quickly becomes numb and there is no pain.

Now, as for checking traps, most trappers try to check their traps every day, as the law requires. It just makes sense as you will lose many more animals from just pulling out or getting stolen if you don't check your traps every day. And most trappers when setting by water will make drowning sets so the furbearer will be drowned quickly and humanely.

Leghold traps are the most effective management tool there is. Have you ever seen an animal that has sarcopic mange? The animal starts to lose its fur and the animal starts to rot inside, while living! Death is slow and agonizing. This is caused by over-population, or in other words, under-trapped. And the leghold is the only trap that we'll control the population with effectively and efficiently.

As far as catching pets, they are released unharmed with maybe only a slight limp for a few days.

And a lot of trappers, including myself, just like being outdoors and trying to outwit a wise furbearer. Trapping is an art which requires skill and knowledge and also hard work.

Trappers have organized large associations in every state to help protect and defend our right to trap. I am proud to be a trapper and I always will be.

Sincerely,
Gene Mosbeck

ENTERTAINING IDEAS

HOW TO MAKE A POPCORN WREATH

Your family probably eats plenty of popcorn all year 'round because it's so good tasting and provides an inexpensive snack. Holiday time offers an extra dimension to corn popping; everybody can make a popcorn sculpture. Here's a chance for a great neighborhood party. Just buy plenty of that pop-in-the-package popcorn and three or four friends can be popping corn at the same time. Below are the directions for a popcorn wreath which hangs prettily on door or mantle.

JIFFY POP® DELLA-ROBBIA WREATH

- 1 bag (3 oz.) spearmint gumdrop leaves
- 1 bag (3 oz.) French Burnt peanuts
- 1 package (5 oz.) Jiffy Pop® Popcorn
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup light corn syrup
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine

Extras needed: one 9" tube cake pan, Christmas ribbons for bows.

Prepare popcorn according to package directions. Place popcorn in large pan or bowl. Heat sugar, corn syrup, and water in saucepan to 250°-260° (120° C) or until a drop of syrup in cold water forms a hard ball. Remove from heat and stir in the butter. Pour over the popcorn and mix thoroughly with a large spoon.

Grease inside of tube cake pan thoroughly. Grease hands, also. Working quickly pack the popcorn lightly into form. Allow to sit for 15 minutes. Remove the popcorn "wreath" from form and place on plate or tray. Decorate with spearmint leaves and berrie-shaped French Burnt Peanuts. Add ribbon bow. Hang on door or mantle.

Savings Bonds Interest Rate Increases 1%

Secretary of the Treasury G. William Miller today announced that President Carter approved a one per cent increase in the interest rate paid on United States savings bonds and savings notes.

The President acted after signing legislation permitting the Secretary of the Treasury, with the President's approval, to raise savings bonds interest rates by up to one per cent during any 6-month period. Previously the interest rate ceiling was fixed by statute.

Interest rate on series EE bonds purchased on and after November 1, 1980, is being increased from seven per cent to eight per cent, compounded semiannually, when the bonds are held to original maturity. The term to maturity is being shortened from 11 to nine years.

Interest rate on series HH savings bonds purchased on and after November 1, 1980, is being increased from six and one-half per cent to seven and one-half per cent to their original maturity, which remains at 10 years. Interest on these bonds is paid semiannually by check.

All outstanding series E, EE, H and HH savings bonds, as well as outstanding savings notes (freedom shares) will also benefit from a one per cent increase to their next maturities. The redemption value of E and EE bonds and savings notes and the interest on H and HH bonds during periods before their maturity will be improved. In general, the increase will be effective with the first semiannual interest period that begins on or after November 1, 1980. Maturity periods for these bonds and notes will not be changed.

Secretary Miller said, "This action and the phase-out of ceilings on deposit interest rates that was begun earlier are major steps toward the administration's goals of assuring a fair rate of return to small savers and encouraging greater total savings.

"Giving small savers a fair return and encouraging increased savings in this country are integral parts of our efforts to reduce inflation and provide the enormous investment needed to revitalize our economy in the 1980's."

Depending on market conditions, a further rate increase of up to one per cent may be made as early as May 1, 1981.

The new eight per cent rate for EE bonds and seven and one-half per cent rate for HH bonds will be guaranteed minimum yields to their original maturities.

Continuing benefits of series EE bonds include their exemption from state and local income taxes, the option to defer federal income taxes on accrued interest, the low minimum purchase price of $25, and the right to redeem the bonds anytime after six months at issue price plus accrued interest.

Treasury hopes that the higher interest rates will increase purchases of savings bonds, particularly through payroll savings plans, as well as reduce redemptions. The unprecedented market interest rates during the past year have resulted in a heavy volume of redemptions and declining sales.

CHRISTMAS' PAST

A magnificent confection you've created yourself can be a terrific way to say Merry Christmas to someone special.

This year when you're trimming the tree, filling Christmas stockings, hanging mistletoe or feasting on beautifully decorated delights, give a thought to where you got your favorite Christmas custom.

The use of greenery at Christmas grew out of ancient Roman and European customs, historians say. Holly was a favorite decoration of the Romans, who made lavish use of green boughs and garlands to honor Saturn, their god of agriculture.

We may kiss under the mistletoe but the ancient Druids of England called the plant "all heal" and believed it had the power to cure disease.

An increasing number of families are celebrating the holiday season with their own specially decorated Christmas cake. You may like to cheer family and friends with a cake shaped like a welcoming wreath, a smiling Santa, a bedecked bell, a candle-lit tree or any one of a number of gorgeous goodies. The shapes make it merry and Wilton, the cake decorating experts, make it easy for you to do with cake pans, icing colors, tips, and simple step-by-step instructions. The festive fun fare can be found in the Wilton Cake Decorating Center of department stores, supermarkets and cake decorating specialty shops or write to Wilton Enterprises, 2240, West 75th Street, Woodridge, Illinois 60517.

Santa Claus's real-life predecessor is believed to have been a fourth-century bishop of Turkey. According to legend, he dropped a bag of gold coins down a chimney into a stocking which a poor girl had hung by the fireplace to dry: hence our custom of hanging Christmas stockings.

From the past customs to the cakes of the present, Christmas can be full of delightful surprises—and not only in the gifts you'll find under the tree.

Visitors last week at the Orville Rolandson home were Beverly and Brian Trulson, Sue Miller and Joan Nelson.

Dawn Muzzy spent Thanksgiving day with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Muzzy. Dawn is a foster daughter of Orville and Belle Rolandson.

Friends of the Armond Lian family will be interested to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Brett (Nancy Lian) of Bloomington were among the guests at the MGM hotel at Los Vegas during the recent fire. They were rescued from their smoke filled room by firemen. The Armond Lian family were former residents here.

Thanksgiving day dinner guests at the Ken Rolandson home in East Grand Forks were Mr. and Mrs. Orville Rolandson and Kelley Millard.

Mrs. Orville Rolandson visited on Tuesday last week with her sister, Mrs. Douglas Olson. Mrs. Olson is recovering very nicely from recent surgery.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gustafson were supper guests of the Walter Wiskow family on Thanksgiving day.

Guests at potluck dinner at the Carolyn Haugen home on Thanksgiving day were Kevin Swanson of Moorhead, Brad Swanson of Fargo, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Torkelson, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Torkelson and Brett, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Bjorge and Charissa. In the afternoon Blair Froseth came to visit.

We extend congratulations to Orville and Belle Rolandson on the recognition they received from the Grand Forks Herald. The Rolandsons' foster daughter, Kelly Millard had written a letter to the Herald telling why she is thankful. Her subject matter was Orville and Belle.

Rehab Hospital Helps Create Dressing Needs

Many people face one of the toughest challenges of the day when they reach for their clothes to get dressed in the morning.

For those whose arms and hands have been weakened by arthritis or stroke, for those who have lost fine hand movement abilities and for many others, simple buttons can become insurmountable obstacles. Ties, shoelaces and apron strings may be impossible and snaps may no longer be a snap.

But dressing remains a necessity, and frequently the ability to dress independently becomes equally important.

That independence can be achieved with the use of simple dressing aids and clothing adaptations, many of which can be accomplished at home, according to the occupational therapist at the medical center rehabilitation hospital at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks.

Velcro fasteners can replace buttons, snaps or hooks on many garments. Special devices can be fashioned out of plastic and cord to make stockings easier to pull on, scissor grips can be used to extend a person's reach and tiny zippers can be made easier to grab with the use of large rings.

Arthritis, stroke, spinal cord injury and amputation patients at the rehabilitation hospital learn many of these techniques as part of their treatment programs there, and the occupational therapists who do the teaching say the process can and does continue when the patient returns home.

"There are many ways to become independent in dressing," said Dory Marken, occupational therapy director for the rehab hospital. "We teach the basics here, and often the patient can take it from there."

Hints For Homebuyers

ARM YOURSELF WITH INFORMATION

How can you tell genuine value from a cosmetic come-on when you're buying a home? Where can you find financing at times when interest rates are high and money is scarce? What are the real costs of owning a home after you buy it?

It's important to know the answers to these and many other questions before you set out to buy a home. Fortunately, you can find them in one place: The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has put it all together in a comprehensive 97-page guidebook.

Titled the Homebuyer's Information Package, it covers eight topics: To buy or not to buy, searching for a house, purchasing contracts, financing the house, the closing process, money management, maintaining your home, and definitions of commonly-used terms.

The Package is written clearly and simply, but it's the equivalent of an academic course in homebuying and management. It's produced in a looseleaf format and comes with worksheets, checklists, and sample legal documents.

To get it, send your check or money order for $4.95 to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Dept. 32-I, Washington, D.C. 20402. Or you can give your VISA or MasterCharge credit card number and expiration date. Either way, make sure you specify GPO Stock No. 023-000-00508-5.

A leaflet containing pointers from the Package is available free. Write Package Pointers, HUD USER, P.O. Box 280, Germantown, Md. 20767.

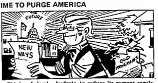
RETURN TO GREATNESS

A TIME TO PURGE AMERICA



Improved tax quality, reduced government bureaucracy, and limited elective terms of office are needed. By facing our problems squarely, we may be able to have all that. Here, the Chairman of Medalist Industries discusses how we can return to greatness.

By Norman J. Fischer

It is time to purge this country of outmoded legislative and bureaucratic procedures that hinder our development. Unless citizens throughout the nation take an active interest in revitalizing our system of government, we may soon be carving as our epitaph: "The U.S.A.—born to greatness, but died of neglect."

Limit Office Terms

Fischer

First, the Presidency must be altered to a single six-year term. No President can achieve his objectives in four years—when the first is devoted to on-the-job training and the last to campaigning for re-election, often at the expense of running the government effectively.

Second, maximum time in office for Senators or Representatives must be restricted to 12 years, thereby giving incentives to more business leaders to commit some years to public life.

Third, federal budgets must be prepared as annually adjustable, three-year programs. Because government is so cumbersome, it is far more realistic to develop and put into operation a national budget incorporating a three-year operational target, with annual adjustments to recognize economic shifts.

Reduce Government Bureaucracy

Fourth, citizens must reverse their growing lack of concern for the principles that shaped our formulative years. Our country has survived largely due to dedication to hard work and improving productivity through technological advancement. Excessive regulatory restriction and bureaucracy now threaten to bring us to our knees. We must take steps immediately to reduce the number of government employees on all levels through attrition. Sunset laws must force government agencies to justify their programs—and their existence. Every agency must make an effort to reduce its current regulations. The federal government must begin a program to return power to the states wherever appropriate.

Improve Tax Quality

Fifth, we must enact wise tax laws that will increase investment and productivity while removing current shackles on industry research and development. We must restructure our Social Security system so that it will be meaningful to those paying into it when they need to reclaim their savings.

We must return to the spirit of savings and investment by enacting an "Investment and Savings Tax Deduction" plan that rewards citizens for contributing to national growth.

Sixth, we must strive to close the labor-management gap by strengthening the natural bond of concern for the future that exists today. The improvement of capital formation and productivity through legislative and tax means is truly a cause for united action by all Americans.

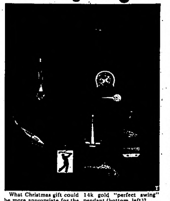
Gift-Giving Ideas for Men



What Christmas gift could be more appropriate for the sporting man than a personal memento of his favorite game in lustrous, enduring gold? Fine jewelry stores are well stocked this year with special gifts for that very special person, crafted of 14k or 18k gold.

For the "Jack Nicklaus" in your life, how about a gold golf tee (center, left), "x marks the spot" marker (top, right), crossed clubs tie clip (bottom, left) or a 14k gold "perfect swing" pendant (bottom, left)?

The sharpshooter will adore the 18k gold mini-gun pendant (complete with blanks), which actually works! The sailor will "jib" for the 18k gold penknife or 14k gold anchor pendants. And for the 19th hole sport, how about a cigar cutter (middle, right) in 18k ridged gold, a 14k gold toothpick or, for the biggest sport of all, a 14k gold retractable (and wearable) champagne stirrer!

ENERGY ASSISTANCE

Energy Assistance funds for low-income residents of Pennington, Red Lake, and East Polk counties will soon be available according to Inter-County Community council. I.C.C.C. staff said over $850,000 in fuel assistance money is expected to help approximately 1700 eligible households with high fuel bills.

The Energy Assistance money will be available to low-income households in the form of a credit toward future energy costs, or as an actual payment for already existing fuel oil, natural gas, electric, coal, wood, or other energy bills. Renters and households which cut their own wood for fuel may also be eligible for the Energy Assistance Program.

Income eligibility for the fuel Assistance Program is based on the total number of individuals in each household and gross income. Persons living alone who earn less than $4,738 are eligible for the energy assistance. The income guideline for a household of four is $12,240 and $16,890 for a household of six. Households with more than six persons should add $2,450 for each additional member when determining income eligibility.

Medical expenses in excess of three per cent of a household's annual income can be deducted when determining income eligibility for the energy assistance. Persons must bring medical expense records, as well as proof of income and fuel bills, when applying for the Energy Assistance Program.

Individuals or any household member receiving Aid to families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Food Stamps, or General Assistance, are categorically eligible for the program.

The actual amount of energy assistance provided to an eligible household is determined by a formula. It takes into account the type of energy which the household uses and the average cost of that same type of energy in the region in relation to household income. Assistance payments will range from $50 to $1,045.

Think Safety!

Light Up Your Christmas With Safety

A Service of Underwriters Laboratories

The proper use of Christmas trees and decorations is crucial to a safe holiday season. Decorative lights and materials serve to brighten homes and hearts at Christmas time; but improperly used, they can darken your celebration with the tragedy of accidental fire and injury. Damaged or worn light strings, a dry tree and overloaded circuits add up to serious fire risks for you and your loved ones.

Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL), an independent, not-for-profit organization testing for public safety, offers the following safety tips while extending wishes for a happy holiday.

- Place your Christmas tree in a location away from fireplace, radiator or other heat source. Be sure that it is out of your home traffic pattern and does not block a doorway.
- Fill the base holder with water, and keep it full while the tree is indoors. Remember heated rooms dry trees rapidly; a dry tree is a fire risk.
- If buying an artificial tree, choose one that has been tested for flammability.
- Use lights that have been tested for safety. Identify these by the Underwriters Laboratories mark.
- Check each light set for broken or cracked sockets, frayed or bare wires and loose connections. Discard any of this equipment that is worn or broken.
- Check labels of lights to be used outdoors to see that they are suitable for outdoor use. Never use indoor lights outside.
- Overloading a circuit with too many lights could cause a fire. Read manufacturer's instructions carefully and do not use more than the recommended number of lights on one circuit.
- Always turn off tree lights and other decorations when you leave home and before going to bed. A short circuit in any of this equipment could cause a fire.
- Never use electric lights on a metallic tree. Damaged insulation in the light strings could cause the entire tree to be charged with electricity. To avoid this danger, use colored spotlights above or beside a metal tree, never fastened onto it.
- Never use lighted candles on a tree or near other evergreens.
- Avoid smoking near flammable decorations.
- Burning evergreens in the fireplace can be dangerous. When dry, greens burn like tinder. Their flames can flare out of control, sending sparks flying about the room.
- Always dispose of Christmas wrappings as soon as possible. Place in a metal container, and don't burn them in the fireplace. They can ignite suddenly and cause a flash fire.
- Use care with "fire salts" which produce colored flames when thrown on a wood fire. They contain heavy metals, and can cause intense gastrointestinal irritation or vomiting if eaten. Keep them away from the reach of children.

Most important of all, PLAN FOR SAFETY. Remember there is no substitute for common sense. Look for and eliminate potential danger spots near candles, fireplaces, trees and electrical connections.

"Merry Christmas?"

not if you have a hearing problem

For the person with a hearing loss, Christmas can be the saddest time of the year instead of the merriest. You feel lonely, "left out" — even with those you love.

But you may be able to hear again all the precious sounds of Christmas — carols, church bells, a whispered "Thank You." Because today, most hearing problems can be helped.

Why not find out if you really do have a hearing loss . . . and how you, too, may hear again? Just come in for a free electronic hearing test.

With today's rising food costs, it's a real challenge to plan meals that are economical, yet still appealing in flavor. Golden Apple-Chicken Bake, rates tops in these categories and is simple-to-prepare as well.

Reminiscent of the old-fashioned corned beef 'n' cabbage dinner, this dish combines the wonderful juicy-sweet flavor of Golden Delicious apples with popular chicken, cabbage wedges and seasonings. A savory sweet and sour-style sauce tops it off before it is oven-baked to perfection.

All purpose Golden Delicious apples are ideal for baking in all sorts of main dishes, breads and desserts, because they hold their shape so well during cooking. And the crisp, juicy flesh of Goldens, when cut, stays white longer than that of other apple varieties, making them a favorite for appetizer trays, fresh salads and, of course, wonderful snacking.

Golden Apple-Chicken Bake

- 1/2 head cabbage, cut in 1-inch wedges
- 2 teaspoons flour, divided
- 3 Golden Delicious apples
- 2 tablespoons packed brown sugar
- 1 (2-1/2 lb.) chicken, cut-up
- Salt
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- 1/3 to 1/2 cup cider vinegar
- Paprika
- Chopped parsley

Place cabbage wedges in bottom of shallow 2-quart casserole. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon flour. Core and slice apples into rings; set aside several rings. Cover cabbage with remaining apple rings. Combine brown sugar and remaining 1 teaspoon flour; sprinkle over apples. Sprinkle salt over chicken; arrange chicken skin side up, with reserved apple rings. Mix together butter or margarine, vinegar and 1 tablespoon salt; pour over chicken. Cover and bake at 350°F. 45 minutes. Uncover and bake 35 minutes longer or until chicken is tender. Garnish with paprika and parsley. Makes 4 servings.

NOTE: If desired, sauce may be thickened. Boiled potatoes make a nice addition to the meal.

Indoor Flea Market Sat. Draws Good Attendance

FIRST-TIME EXHIBITORS at Thief River Falls flea market were Pat Rossiter and Connie Schendzielos of Bemidji. They create unusual wood art by collecting and cutting burls from trees in the area and developing existing patterns of the wood into creative designs with the addition of pastel art work. Connie, whose father is Minnesota duck stamp designed Dick Miller of Onamia, does most of the art work. Pat says he is the collector, cutter and critic.

"There's everything here from Christmas trees to barbed wire," smiled John Zukatis as he surveyed the first pre-Christmas flea market he had organized on Saturday in the Thief River Falls city auditorium. People were milling about the more than 30 exhibits arranged by flea market participants.

"We're going to hold another one next year," Zukatis said. "I don't know if it will be here in the auditorium or not, but we'll have one somewhere in town. There will be another indoor market in April at the Falls Mall (now being renovated after a fire) and then we will have our regular monthly outdoor markets at the park."

Zukatis said he had to turn away 10 or more people who wanted to be included in the pre-Christmas event. "I saw what happened a couple of weeks ago at the holiday fair," he said. "There was so much stuff packed in here there was no place for the people to move. I figured if we kept it down to around 30 tables there would be space enough for people to circulate."

Originator of the summer flea markets at Floyd B. Olson park, Zukatis said there is much more work associated with an indoor event. "In the park you can just let anybody come in and find a spot and set up whatever they want. That's what a flea market is supposed to be. They can come when they want to and leave when they want to.

"But here we have to control it a little bit more. I asked all of the exhibitors to stay around until five o'clock. When you restrict the number of people who can display, you want them to stick around for as long as the market is open. Otherwise it isn't fair to the public."

While Zukatis is a flea market addict, usually going to a number of the events during the year, most other participants are sometime entrants. They paid a $10 fee to participate in the pre-Christmas show. It costs them $2 at the park in the summer. Zukatis rented the auditorium for $200 and spent another $100 in advertising. "I collected from 31 exhibitors so I made ten bucks," he said. "And I might sell some of the junk I've got here myself."

First time participants at the show, Pat Rossiter and Connie Schendzielos of Bemidji, seemed impressed with the crowd and enjoyed visiting with and explaining their craft to show visitors. They create tables, plaques and other items from burls cut from area trees, adding pastel art work to create unique items.

"We use elm, maple, several kinds of pine, anything we can find that's unusual," Rossiter said. "A lot of this we cut along an old abandoned railroad grade and it was really tough to get to it. You have to know what to look for and even then you don't always know what you'll get."

Rossiter does carpentry work for a living, primarily working on remodeling. He is

Money And Banking Class Begins Dec. 15

Are you interested in the practical aspects of money and banking? If so, the University of Minnesota — Crookston (UMC) is offering "Money and Banking" as a continuing education course from 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays beginning December 15, at the Thief River Falls area vocational technical-institute.

Historical treatment will be kept to a minimum. Emphasis will be placed on such problems as economic stabilization, types of spending, the role of gold, limitations of central bank control, government fiscal policy, balance of payments and foreign exchange, according to instructor Terry Gere. The course is AIB approved.

Fee for the 10 sessions is $79.50 for three credits.

EXTENSIVE HELP for the Thief River Falls park program has been provided by the Thief River Falls Lions club with approximately $8,000 spent over the past three years on the park located near the city water tower on Nora street. Lions president Arnold Narverud presented the city a check for $5,000 at last Wednesday's noon meeting of the club with acceptance made by Mayor Bob Carlson and Mike Mongoven, director of parks and recreation. Now known as Lions park by official resolution of the council adopted in October, the facility has been improved with fencing, shelters, trees and at least nine different pieces of playground equipment as a result of Lions club support.

PRE-CHRISTMAS FLEA MARKET at the city auditorium in Thief River Falls Saturday attracted a large crowd throughout the day, leading promoter John Zukatis and a number of the exhibitors to plan for another event next December. Zukatis, who organized the monthly outdoor flea markets at Floyd B. Olson park in Thief River Falls during the summer, set up the indoor event in response to demand. Another indoor flea market is being planned for April in the Falls Mall, now under renovation following a fire. Monthly outdoor markets will resume in May. Zukatis is shown in the inset at lower right.

WINTER VISITOR in Thief River Falls Saturday was this Cedar Waxwing, one of a flock of about 25 birds devouring fruit of a flowering crabapple tree in the Orin Green yard. The waxwings may be found almost anywhere from northern Canada to Cuba at nearly any time of the year, but seem to be most noticeable in this area when they form flocks and feed voraciously on fruit trees or berry bushes, primarily in the late fall or early spring. The photo above was taken with a 100-500mm telephoto lens provided by Ekeren Drug. For camera buffs, it was taken on Tri-X film, f:11, 1-125 second, hand-held.

Knox Students To Present Program Tues.

Knox elementary school grades 3-5, will hold their Christmas program entitled "Joyful Sounds All Year Round" tomorrow (Tuesday) at 1:30 p.m. with Jeanne Harger directing.

Winter will be presented by the third grade, spring and summer by the fourth grade and autumn by the fifth grade.

A mini musical will also be given, entitled "Elf Factory".

Rev. Knutson Leaves Parish At Newfolden

Rev. Merle Knutson, who has served the Newfolden Free Lutheran parish for the past nearly six years, is leaving that community and plans to take some time away from the active ministry.

Rev. Knutson, who said he has had difficulty with his voicebox, will move with his wife to Lakefield where his mother, brother and two daughters live.

Solar Energy Society Meet Set Wednesday

December 10 meeting of the Northern Tier solar energy society will be held at the Agricultural research center, Northwest experiment station, Crookston at 7:30 p.m.

Presentations will be made by Melvin Johnson, innovator, machinist and wind energy systems designer from East Grand Forks and John Cuddy, wind specialist from the Minnesota energy agency, St. Paul. Interests of the society will be discussed.

Johnson has had many years experience with wind systems, direct current battery hook-ups and is presently building a large wind generator. His machine shop at East Grand Forks contains many interesting pieces of equipment which he has designed and built himself.

Cuddy, representing the energy agency formerly experimented with his own wind systems and carried this practical interest to the department he now represents.

Legislators To Visit Here Tues.

Several area legislators will be guests of the legislative committee of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce Tuesday at a tour and reception, according to Chris Twomey, committee chairman.

Confirming their intent to participate in the event are Sen. Marvin Hanson, Hallock, state senator from District 1; Sen. Roger Moe, Ada, state senator from District 2; Rep. LeRoy Stumpf, Plummer, state representative from District 1B; and Rep. Myron Nysether, Ross, state representative from District 1A.

Twomey said that contact has been made or is being attempted with other legislators in the area, but those people either were unable to participate due to other commitments or were unavailable to be contacted.

Planned from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. are tours of the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute, Northland community college, Arctic Enterprises manufacturing plant and Hydra-Mac manufacturing plant.

At 5:30 p.m. a reception will be held at Lon's restaurant and it will continue until 6:30 p.m., Twomey said. Members of the chamber of commerce are encouraged to attend the reception to get acquainted with their legislators and discuss items of concern or interest prior to the forthcoming legislative session.

ELECTED HISTORIAN of the Minnesota chapter of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) at the delegate assembly held November 16-17 at the St. Paul Radisson hotel was Dawn Davidson (seated second from right) of Thief River Falls. This is the first year a Thief River Falls high school VICA candidate has been elected to state office. Lisa Hefty (seated at left) was a runner-up for the state reporter office. Delegates from Thief River Falls to the assembly were, left to right, front row: Lisa Hefty, Kim Boutain, Dawn Davidson and Helen Lehnhoff; back row, Collette Anderson, Darcy Harbott and Chrisa Bjorge. Not pictured is Lori Berg.

Grant-Writing Workshop Set At TRF Library

Minnesota Humanities commission will sponsor a grant-writing workshop December 11, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Northwest regional library, Thief River Falls.

Day-long workshop is intended for individuals and representatives of non-profit organizations, agencies, and institutions which may be interested in applying for a project grant from the Minnesota Humanities Commission. Community groups such as clubs and professional organizations, libraries, museums, and historical societies; schools and colleges; town councils and government agencies; labor, business, civic, and farm organizations; and ad-hoc communities are all eligible for such grants.

Workshop will begin at the library with a brief introduction to the commission's program. Participants will then meet at Northland Community College for a sample humanities program entitled "Plains Women, Men, and Children," a 30-minute videotape based on diaries and letters collected by Dr. Elizabeth Hampsten of the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks. Hampsten will lead a discussion of prairie life and rural history following the showing of the videotape.

Remainder of the workshop will be conducted at the library and will focus on reasons for sponsoring a humanities program, how to apply for grants from the Minnesota Humanities Commission, what the role of the project director entails, and what characteristics identify a strong and competitive grant application.

Minnesota Humanities Commission supports programs that make the knowledge and wisdom of the humanities available to the adult public of Minnesota. Persons interested in attending the workshop in Thief River Falls or in receiving more information on humanities grants may write the Minnesota Humanities Commission at LL 85 Metro Square, 7th and Robert Streets, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Census Reports Available Later

Many people are eagerly waiting for the results of the largest survey ever taken of the American people — the 1980 Census. "When will the information be out?" and "What data items will be available?" are questions which concern many of us, notes director Tom Jorgens of the Northwest regional development commission.

The census is a survey conducted by the federal government to gather information about the society in which we live. The United States has conducted a census every 10 years since 1870 to ensure regular measurement of changes and trends in our society.

There are several different kinds of census. A census of population is done every 10 years in years ending in zero and gathers such population data as the total number of people and their age, education, employment, income, martial status, race and sex. Several new items occurred in the 1980 census, such as current language and English proficiency, ancestry and means of transportation to work.

A census of housing, started in 1940, is conducted along with every population census. The housing census gathers various information about each housing unit, such as the

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Marilyn Ann Kiesow And Ronald A. Bryl Are Wed

Marilyn Ann Kiesow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kiesow of rural Goodridge, became the bride of Ronald Alan Bryl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Bryl, also of Goodridge, at a recent ceremony at St. Bernard's Catholic church in this city.

Rev. John Kleinwachter officiated at the mid-afternoon, double-ring ceremony. Readers were Trish Lasley, a friend, and Dale Neuschwander, a cousin of the bride. Both reside at Grygla, as do Bill and Bob Neuschwander, cousins of the bride, who served as altar boys. Serving as organist was Christie LaCoursiere. Karl Peterson of Goodridge, a friend, was pianist. The processional was "Jesu, O Joy of Man's Desiring," and the recessional was "The Wedding March." Soloists were Connie Nelson of Fergus Falls and Dean Ellis of Ashby, friends of the couple. Selections rendered were "Sunrise, Sunset," "He Has Chosen You for Me," as the unity candle was lit; "Mother, at Your Feet is Kneeling," as a rose was presented at the altar of the Virgin Mary; and "God, A Woman and A Man." During the liturgy of the Eucharist, the assembled guests sang, "Holy, Holy," and "Fill My House."

Arrangements of pink and white daisies graced the chancel.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a white organza gown featuring a chantilly lace empire bodice with Raschel lace and pearls complementing the Queen Anne neckline and key-hole back. Matching lace formed the cuffs on the bishop sleeves and topped the crystal pleating that edged her pick-up skirt which extended into a chapel-length train. An all-pearl Juliet styled headpiece held her double-tiered fingertip veil, edged with corresponding Raschel lace. She carried a cascade of pink roses, white daisies and babies' breath. Her pearl necklace and matching earrings were a gift from the groom.

Attending the bride were her sisters: Laurie Kiesow as maid of honor; Judith and Mary Jo Kiesow, as bridesmaids, and Jacki Kiesow as flower girl. They wore identical pink gowns styled with A-line pleated skirts and lace blouson bodices with split bishop sleeves. They carried colonial bouquets of pink and white daisies, accented with babies' breath.

Mary Baumler, Chaffee, N.D., a friend of the bride, was personal attendant.

Best man was Larry Bryl, Goodridge, a brother of the groom. Serving as groomsmen were Howard Liedberg, Goodridge, and Bruce Berg, Starkweather, N.D., friends of the groom. Ushers were Bruce and Ronald Kiesow, brothers of the bride; Sheldon Stremler, Brighton, Tenn., a brother-in-law of the groom; and Albert Bryl, Webster, N.D., a cousin of the groom. The ring bearer was Collin Bryl, Goodridge, a nephew of the groom. All wore silver colored Seville tuxedos, corresponding with the white tuxedo worn by the groom. Their boutonnieres were pink.

The mother of the bride was attired in a blue gown topped by a flowing floral sheer overlay. The groom's mother also wore a blue gown. It was fashioned with a crystal pleated bodice and flared skirt accented by a long, knit tunic. Their corsages were of pink Sweetheart roses.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Erick Kiesow, Goodridge, grandparents of the bride.

Renee Kuznia, Crookston, and Diane Mutnansky, cousins of the bride, distributed the wedding program; Mary Jean Mischel, Angus, friend of the bride, and TJ Getzlaff, Ranier, Ore., nephew of the groom, presided at the guest book as Arlyne Neuschwander, Grygla, aunt of the bride, and Toni Bryl, Goodridge, sister-in-law of the groom, served as flower hostesses. The gifts were carried by Michelle and Yvonne Stremler, Brighton, Tenn., nieces of the groom, and Mary and Della Kuznia, Argyle and Stephen, respectively, cousins of the bride.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Hosts and hostesses were Mel and Margaret Brady, Ranier, Ore., brother-in-law and sister of the groom, and Floyd Neuschwander, Grygla, uncle of the bride. At the punch bowl were Kim Getzlaff, Ranier, Ore., niece of the groom, and Laurie Windjue, Devils Lake, N.D., cousin of the groom. The rice packets were distributed by Betty Jo and Lynn Kiesow, sisters of the bride, and Wendy Bryl, niece of the groom.

The serving table was centered with a four-tiered chocolate and white wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with yellow centered pink daisies. Between the tall Roman pillars that supported the cake was a flowing water fountain. Topping the cake was a sunburst featuring a pair of cherubs on a filigreed heart. The cake was baked and decorated by Margaret Rupprecht and was cut and served by Theresa Mutnansky, Goodridge, aunt and godmother of the bride, and Florence Stremler, Brighton, Tenn., sister of the groom. At the coffee service were LouAnn Kiesow, Goodridge, aunt of the bride, and Judy Wyche, Oak Harbor, Wash., sister of the groom.

Waitresses were the bride's cousins: Mary Lee and Kathy Neuschwander of Grygla, Garnette and Kim Kuznia of Strandquist and Geralyn and Patsy Kuznia of Stephen.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of Goodridge high school and will graduate in May from North Dakota State university as a mechanical engineer. The groom is a 1974 graduate of Goodridge high school and is self-employed. The couple is at home at West Bison court, Fargo, N.D. Photo, LeMar Photography, Crookston.

Also attending were Curt and Helen Spande, Excelsior and their granddaughter, Margie Roach of Akron, Ohio; Kathy Sturre of Staples; Sterling and Elizabeth Phelps and Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Manderud of Thief River Falls; Muriel Asp, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Asp, Johnny Asp, Mr. and Mrs. Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Frazer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Sturre and Jerry.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Bert Coan, Mr. and Mrs. David Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Elg, Mr. and Mrs. Loren Race, Mrs. Marion Vraa and grandchildren Leslie and Courtney Vraa, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Manderud, Shannon and Kari and Clayton Loyland.

Unable to attend but telephoning their congratulations were Mrs. Campbell's sister, Grace Sheridan and Ardith Schwabauber of Flint, Mich.

Among the many cards and gifts received were those from the Goodridge senior citizen club, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Scholfer, Mr. and Mrs. John Tanem, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Quam and the Danny Campbell family of Minneapolis.

A potluck lunch was served.

Brandon Langlie Baptized At Zion Lutheran Church

Brandon Scott Langlie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Langlie of this city, was baptized Sunday, October 12, at the 10:30 a.m., worship services at Zion Lutheran church, Thief River Falls. Rev. Richard Larson officiated. Sponsors were Wendy Nelson and Cindy Langlie of Minneapolis; Scott Langlie, Staples; and Nancy Nelson of this city.

For the occasion, the child wore a white satin two-piece baptismal suit, a gift from his great-uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Knouf of Minneapolis; and a white shawl, handmade by his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Howard Langlie, Thief River Falls.

Following the baptism, the child's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Nelson hosted a dinner at their home. Centering the table was a baptismal cake, baked and decorated in blue and white with yellow daisies by Margaret Rupprecht. Inscribed on the cake was "Welcome to God's Kingdom, Brandon."

Guests, in addition to the child, his parents and sponsors, were his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Langlie; his paternal great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Busse; his maternal great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Nelson of Newfolden; his maternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Ella Nelson, and his great uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Busse.

Also present were Jim Meier of Minneapolis, Mrs. Mary Sabo and Sheila Busse.

LWML Christmas Meet Set At St. John

Officers of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League (LWML) of St. John Lutheran church, will be installed at the annual Christmas party to be held Tuesday at 8:00 p.m., at the church. Rev. Barrie Henke will preside at the installation.

Members in the first half of the alphabet will be in charge of the program and those in the last half will provide the lunch.

All members and friends are welcome.

Local BPW Club Discredits Equal Rights Fallacies

Fallacies regarding the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), were discussed at length at the November meeting of the Thief River Falls Business and Professional Women's (BPW) club held at the Elks club rooms.

Bonnie Folkedahl, chairman of the legislative committee, stated that too many people had the wrong impressions of the ERA. She said that the amendment simply stated "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Several of the mistaken ideas interpreted by the public were listed by Mrs. Folkedahl, who counteracted with the facts, which will appear in parentheses. She stated that the most commonly heard was: "the ERA will destroy the family." (The ERA affects only governmental action, such as equal pay and legal rights, not private relationships. The career homemaker's contribution to marriage and rearing of children will not be effected.)

"Men will no longer have to support their wives and children." (Support will depend upon love, not law. Even now, according to the courts, a married woman living with her husband, receives only what he chooses to give her.)

"Mothers will be forced to find jobs, leaving their children in the care of others." (The ERA will not require anyone to take a job. The individuals involved will still decide who in the family works outside the home.)

"Woman's place is in the home." (Over 70 per cent of the women who work do so because of economic necessity. The ERA will reinforce the right to equal pay for the women who are heads of their families.)

"Divorced women will no longer be given support or custody of their children." (Divorced women who need support will continue to be awarded such aid. The good of the child will be the primary criterion in awarding custody.)

"The ERA will take away labor laws protecting women." (The ERA will unmask protective laws which are thin disguises for excluding women from higher paying jobs and opportunities for advancement. The truly beneficial protective labor laws will be extended to men.)

"Women will be subject to the draft and mothers will be torn from their children and sent into combat." (The ERA means women will be subject to a draft, but as in other drafts when fathers were exempted, Congress could exempt either parent or both. Equal rights mean equal responsibilities.)

"Women will lose their present Social Security benefits based on their husband's earnings." (Women will not lose any present benefits. Women's and men's benfits will be equalized so that present injustices, primarily affecting men, will be eliminated.)

"Men and women will have to share the same public bathrooms." (The constitutional right to privacy will still justify separate restrooms, dormitories and barracks as equality and modesty can co-exist.)

"The ERA will legalize homosexual marriages." (ERA can not permit or forbid marriages of the same sex, but if men are forbidden to marry men, women won't be allowed to marry women.)

"The ERA will mean wholesale abortions." (The Supreme Court's decision on abortion will not be affected by the passage of the ERA.)

The last fallacy, "The 14th amendment makes the ERA unnecessary," was corrected by Mrs. Folkedahl stating "The 14th and 15th amendments have not been interpreted by the courts to mean sex discrimination is unconstitutional." She concluded by saying "It is time, after 200 years, that the constitution recognizes women as first class citizens on the same level as men."

Also discussed at the meeting were the club dues, which were raised from $18 to $20; the Christmas meeting, which will include a gift exchange and a one dollar donation; the proposed budget, which was accepted; and methods of raising money for the scholarship fund and regular club expenses.

President Vicky Erickson presided at the meeting.

Fruit Cake Squares

- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1½ cups graham cracker crumbs
- 1 cup shredded coconut
- 2 cups diced candied fruit
- 1 cup dates, cut up
- 1 cup nuts, coursely chopped
- 1 can sweetened condensed milk

Method: Melt butter in jelly roll pan. Sprinkle graham cracker crumbs evenly over the melted butter. Cover with coconut. Top with candied fruit, dates and nuts. Press lightly to level the ingredients. Pour the sweetened condensed milk evenly over the top. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool before cutting into squares.

These bars are very rich and do not require frosting. However a light powdered sugar glaze may be used, if desired.

The Johnsons live at Holt, but due to mail service, their address is rural Newfolden. To add to the confusion, their two children attend different schools. Cecily is a 10th grader at Marshall County Central at Newfolden and Corey is in the fourth grade at Viking. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are employed in Thief River Falls. Johnson is quality control man at Arctic Enterprises and Mrs. Johnson is a part-time employee at Northwestern hospital. As a family, they attend services at Holt at Nazareth Lutheran church.

Prehensile Hand Is New For Amputees

Dave Cooper tapped his hand in time with the music coming from the van's radio as he waited for the traffic light to change on Main street in Boulder, CO. The metalic tapping of the "farmer's hook," which replaced his right hand, attracted the attention of the driver in the car next to him.

"This guy started shouting for us to pull over, he had something to show me," Cooper recalls with a smile. "I thought he was a kook — a big guy with a beard. But, we pulled over anyway, and I'll tell you, it really changed my life."

The big man with the beard turned out to be Ron Dick, co-inventor of the prehensile hand, a device he says offers new hope for people with below-the-elbow amputations. Within two weeks Cooper was doing things he thought he'd never do again, thanks to the device Dick made for him.

There are no precise figures on the number of below-the-elbow amputees in the nation, but Dick says it is the most common amputation to occur. And, he says, until now such amputees have had to be content with a hook device that has seen little improvement through the years.

Current hooks use rubber bands to provide their limited gripping power and do not call on body functions to be involved in their use. As a result, Dick says, atrophy of muscles is a very common side effect of amputations.

The prehensile hand changes all that. The device requires the user to activate it with muscle power and to think about what he is doing. Dick says the lack of mind and muscle coordination is another drawback with the familiar hook.

Cooper backs up the inventor's contention. "My shoulder muscles were atrophying, but I felt my muscles shaping up two weeks after I started using the new device," Cooper says. "I can do anything from applying gentle pressure to pick up an egg to locking it like a vice so nothing will fall from my grip. It's been a Godsend to me."

Dick first started working on the device four years ago with Bob Radocy, a student he taught in one of his therapeudic recreation classes at the University of Colorado. The two men are now partners in Therapeutic Recreation Systems of Boulder, the firm they started to manufacture the device.

"We actually started out trying to design something that would enable me to participate in sports activities," Radocy says. "But the more we worked with it the more it appeared to us as better than just a sports device."

Attempts to interest major manufacturers of prosthetic devices were met with disinterest, Dick says. As they searched for more information they found that very little research had been done in the mechnical hand area.

"There's a great deal of interest in bio-electric devices, but the big manufacturers seemed to consider our device just an improved version of the old hook," Dick says. "This is not the case at all. The prehensile hand not only does a much better job in gripping, it also helps improve the user's muscle and mind."

Despite the rejections and lack of interest, the pair have devoted their savings to development. They've been unable to do the advertising required to get their story out. But, some recognition has come in the farm press.

"Our study indicates that about 60 per cent of the below-the-shoulder amputees are farmers," Radocy says. "Many of them resulted from accidents before new safety devices were used on farm machinery."

A few articles in some Midwest farm publications have resulted in a lot of inquiries. And, once they show the device, they have almost 100 per cent reception by amputees.

"There have been some who felt it is too heavy, that it's too big or that it doesn't look nice," Dick says. "However, everyone who has one says they'd never part with it. And, we are working on a lighter, smaller device to answer the most common criticism we've received thus far."

Dick feels this is important because he especially wants to be able to fit the device to adolescent amputees. He feels it is important to get them using the mind and muscle coordination right away.

"If they got used to using an ordinary hook they are going to experience muscle atrophication and once they lose the use of those muscles they won't get it back," he says.

The two inventors have dozens of stories of what the new hand has meant to amputees. One of the most revealing is that of Bill White, a construction worker in Waterford, Pa.

White lost both hands in an explosion and tried to go back to work using the typical hooks. However, after breaking several hooks and finding that he simply could not keep up with the work he was told he was going to have to be replaced.

In desperation, White sought out a better method. A prosthesis house in Erie had heard of the prehensile hand and put White in touch with Radocy and Dick. In a matter of weeks he was back on the job, able to keep up his old pace.

But, it didn't stop there. White had been an avid target shooter. Last year, after resuming target practice, White captured the National Rifle association 100 yard .22 caliber championship.

Radocy, an avid archer before losing his left hand, says the prehensile hand means amputees can resume many sports activities that would be pretty much precluded by ordinary hooks. Soon after perfecting the device he again took up archery and in the 1978 season bagged a doe at 45 yards.

The major problem Radocy had was glare of the sunlight on the stainless steel hand. He solved that quickly by spraying the steel hand with easily-removed camoflage paint.

U.S. Chamber Questions Use Of Loss Figure

Old myths die hard, if ever. All through the 1970s an important national debate centered to a significant degree on the claim of business critics that consumers lose $80 billion a year due to lack of competition in the U.S. marketplace.

The $80 billion figure was repeated over and over again by antitrust activists who tried to break up certain national industries even though they were no monopolies, reports the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Now, 10 years later, the author of the book that gave birth to the purported $80 billion loss acknowledges he was off base and that, in the use and re-use of the data over the period of a decade, "truth was not well served."

It all began innocently enough with Dr. Frederic M. Scherer, a professor of economics at Northwestern university and a former director of the bureau of economics of the Federal trade commission (FTC).

In 1970 he published a scholarly text entitled, "Industrial Market Structure and Economic Performance," which has been required reading for college juniors, for graduate students in business schools and by lawyers who specialize in the field of antitrust law.

In the course of the study, Dr. Scherer concluded that in so-called concentrated industries — where statistics show four major companies, for example, did a large share of the business — prices rise above their normal competitive level.

He estimated that, as a result, consumption in the nation was reduced by the equivalent of 6.2 per cent of the gross national product (GNP). In other words, 6.2 per cent of GNP represented higher prices rather than actual value of goods and services.

Antitrust activists, particularly in the nation's capital, quickly pounced on the 6.2 per cent estimate and calculated the annual losses at about $80 billion. Through constant repetition, the figure — frequently without attribution — gained credibility and was used time and again to justify legislation to break up the oil and auto industries, among others.

The figure was cited by such noted antitrust activites as the late Sen. Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.), who served as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and by Thomas Kauper, a former assistant U.S. attorney general in charge of antitrust matters.

The story spread even after being exposed by "Barron's," a highly respected Dow-Jones weekly, and by the U.S. chamber of commerce, which kept stamping it out whenever it cropped up in Congressional legislative debate.

A reporter for "Barron's" in 1974 first became suspicious of the origin of the ubiquitous $80 billion figure and traced it to Scherer, who readily conceded that in arriving at his 6.2 per cent estimate of losses, he "threw scholarly caution to the wind." The estimate, he acknowledged, was "iffy" and should be taken with a grain of salt.

Some time later the reporter found that the mythical rip-off figure was not only being repeated but updated. In 1976 it showed up in a new book on corporate charters by Ralph Nader and two coauthors who stated flatly: "Frederic Scherer put monopoly-related losses at $85 billion annually."

The authors apparently took 6.2 per cent of the $1,406 trillion GNP for the year involved and thus updated the fable, reporter Shirley Sheibla wrote.

Recently, Paul W. MacAvoy, professor at Yale university, wrote an article for the "New York Times" (September 29, 1980), pointing out that Dr. Scherer, in revising his book earlier this year, had dropped altogether his 6.2 per cent estimate of consumer losses. The MacAvoy article said:

"On page 470, he (Scherer) decides not to attempt any estimate of GNP losses from oligopoly pricing. In addition to the 'caution which comes with age' he gives two reasons: 'The composite estimate in the first edition was surrounded by appropriate caveats, yet these were assidiously ignored by journalists and policians seeking to enliven an article or speech with a seemingly precise magic number. Truth was not well served.'"

Although Sherer replied (Oct. 12, 1980) to the MacAvoy article in a letter published in the "Times," he did not revive nor defend the original 6.2 per cent estimate.

This question remains: Will the facts ever overtake the myth? Perhaps like an old soldier, the myth may never die but simply fade away.

21 TRF AVTI Nursing Grads Pass State Test

All 21 of June 1980 practical nursing graduates passed their state board test pool examinations (SBTPE), according to Sharon Erickson, coordinator of the practical nursing program at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute.

Eight hundred and fifty-nine graduates from the 27 approved practical nursing programs in the state of Minnesota wrote the examination in St. Paul October 21. Achievement of a passing score on the SBTPE is one of the requirements for a Minnesota Licensed practical nurse license.

Test items are designed to measure the essential level of understanding basic to safe, effective practice. A standard score of at least 400 is required. State average of attainment of this score was 93 per cent compared to 100 per cent for Thief River Falls AVTI graduates.

Christmas Gift List Offered For Motorists

It's time to start thinking about Christmas presents, and the Automotive Information council (AIC) again has issued its annual suggestions of gifts to car owners.

With more and more motorists getting involved in their own service work, AIC suggests a trouble light with a long cord for use under the car and under the hood. A good companion for the light is a creeper which permits easy scooting under the car or a pair of portable ramps which bring the car up for easier underneath access.

A small set of socket wrenches and one for spark plugs also will be popular with the do-it-yourselfer, along with a slip-proof fender cover.

For the average motorist, AIC suggests putting together an emergency kit for storage in the trunk. It should include battery jumper cables, a flashlight, safety flares or reflectors, a fire extinguisher and a first aid kit.

A roll of electrical tape and a spool of wire should be included for temporary repairs. The tape can stop leaks on almost any kind of hose and the wire can be used to make a hose clamp. Kit also should include an inexpensive plastic raincoat in case of a rainy emergency.

A couple of white cloths can be used as distress flags and for post-repair clean-up.

Tools which should be included are pliers, adjustable wrench, blade screwdriver, phillips screwdriver, and a tire-pressure gauge. All of these items, readily available from any store which sells auto equipment, can be stored in a large fishing-tackle box or a sturdy cardboard box.

While none of these gifts are glamor items, they will be well appreciated by any motorist because of their thoughtfulness, said AIC.

Volunteers gave nearly 10 million hours of service to veterans last year at Veterans Administration medical centers. Each month they made some 78,000 visits to veterans in VA health care facilities.

Sen. Boschwitz Gets Foreign Relations Post

Senator Rudy Boschwitz has been appointed to the senate foreign relations committee giving him the opportunity to serve on four senate committees during the next session of congress.

Boschwitz will be retaining his position on the agriculture, small business and budget committees while adding the foreign relations committee. "I sought the seat on this committee because it is one of the most important in the senate and of great interest to Minnesota," he said.

"At a time when American prestige is being threatened throughout the world," Boschwitz said, "it will be a real challenge to serve in the area of foreign affairs. We need to improve our image as a country around the world by formulating foreign policy that our allies can depend on and our adversaries respect," he said.

Boschwitz said the foreign relations committee assignment will "dovetail nicely with my chairmanship of the foreign agriculture policy subcommittee. In that position I will be working to expand the export of Minnesota and American farm products," he said. "My seat on the foreign relations committee will help me to do an even better job of expanding exports because all trade agreements and treaties must be approved by that committee."

Retaining his seats on the small business and budget committees, Boschwitz said he will continue his work "to provide more opportunities for the growth of small business and to trim the increases in government spending so that we can balance the budget."

Rodeo Telecast December 18

Big Cars May Be Best Buy For This Year

Your best buy in a 1981 automobile might be (surprise!) a big car.

There are two basic reasons for that view, says the Automotive Information council (AIC):

(1) The larger cars have been given lower percentage price increases than their smaller brothers because of the higher popularity of the latter models. For the same reason, dealers will give better discounts on the big cars.

(2) the larger cars have received big gains in fuel efficiency this year.

But the smaller cars give better fuel economy, you say. True, but the savings will be less than in the past years because of the improvements in gasoline economy for the bigger ones.

Fuel improvement for many full-size and intermediate cars has gone up about 100 per cent when compared with their 1972 counterparts, while gains for small cars have been about half that. The mileage difference therefore has been changed dramatically.

For example, if a driver covers the average 12,000 miles per year with a 30-miles-per-gallon subcompact, the annual gasoline expenditure would be $500 (at $1.25 per gallon).

The owner of a large 22-miles-per-gallon car would spend $681, or a difference of $181 for the year.

Therefore, suggests, AIC, there is more than gasoline economy to be weighed when considering a new car. Think about how many people the car will carry on family trips, the luggage space and the purchase price. Weigh all of these factors before making the final decision.

Then you just might decide that a big car will be your best all-around bargain, says AIC.

Gail Moose Performs In UMC Concert

Gail Moose of Viking will play baritone and sing with the pop choir in the fireside Christmas concert December 16, at 8 p.m. at the University of Minnesota (UMC) campus in Crookston. Three musical groups — Trojan singers, Trojan band and pop choir — will perform under the direction of George French, UMC's instructor of music.

"For Unto Us A Child Is Born," and the "Hallelujah" chorus from Handel's "Messiah," will be sung by a mass choir under the direction of a guest conductor. Tickets for the evening are $1.

Farmers Urged To Acknowledge Loan Program

Minnesota Wheat Growers association is urging farmers to take a very close look at the new supplemental loan program that was recently passed by Congress and signed into law. It contains some features that could make it very attractive.

Fred Kreps, wheat growers president from Felton said the new program would provide a $3.30 per bushel price support loan for 1980 and 1981 wheat that is placed in the farmer held reserve. This is a 30 cent increase over the $3 per bushel loan on non-reserve wheat.

In addition, the recent legislation waives all interest charges on the 1980 and 1981 reserve loans which would increase the returns to the producer. "The $3.30 loan plus the first year's interest could realize about $3.67 per bushel during the first year for producers who utilize the program," Kreps stated, "and this does not include any storage payments that may be made."

Kreps stated that since the program includes 1980 wheat, producers who have already taken a loan on their 1980 crop can move this grain into the reserve program, receive the higher loan rate and still be eligible to waive all of the interest charges, retroactive the date of the original loan. He added that as long as the wheat reserve remains in "release" status, which is assured now through the end of December, the producer would still have the option to market his grain and repay his loan just like under the regular loan program.

Kreps warned however, that if the prices drop to below the release levels the reserve would be closed and the grain would have to remain isolated from the market until prices increase to release levels again. If prices fall below release levels, he added, storage payments would begin.

Kreps stated that the wheat growers had been working for a loan level higher than the $3.30 for wheat placed in the reserve, but, when this was not possible, they pushed for the interest waiver instead.

Kreps urged producers to contact their ASCS office for specific details of the program.

Census Report To Be Available Early In 1981

year it was built, how it was financed, number of rooms, condition of the unit and type of plumbing and heating facilities. Some of the new items asked here in 1980 were the number of light trucks and vans and the homeowner shelter costs for mortgage, real estate taxes and hazard insurance.

About 80 per cent of the respondents answered "short form" questions. These questions, which are asked of everyone, are called the "100 per cent sample." The remaining 20 per cent were interviewed by a census taker on the "long form." The information from this "sample data" is projected for the total population and is used for deriving other information, such as family size, type and income, poverty status, persons per room, institutions and other group quarters and farm residence. There are also censuses for agriculture, local governments, business, construction, industry and transportation, which are conducted every five years.

Federal law requires that the census bureau provide the President and Congress with population totals by Jan. 1, 1981. Working toward this date, the bureau last summer gave local governments "preliminary" population and housing data for checking. The data will be made final and be the subject of the final report to come out of the 1980 census.

This report, PHC(V), is scheduled for release between now and February of 1981. A series of reports, PHC(2) to be released in the spring of 1981, will contain tract level information on most of the 100 per cent housing and population subjects included in the Census. Sample data will be available in the spring of 1982.

Some of the reports and estimated publication dates include: Number of Inhabitants, PC(1),A, Fall 1981; General Population Characteristics, PC(1)-B, late 1981; General Social and Economic Characteristics, PC(1)-C, early 1982, sample data; Detailed Population Charateristics, PC(1)-D, late 1982-83, sample data; General Housing Characteristics, HC(1)-A, late Summer 1981, 100 per cent housing items; Detailed Housing Characteristics, HC(2)-B, Spring 1982, sample housing items; and Metropolitan Housing Charateristics, HC(2), Fall 1982.

There are also many data items which will be available on computer summary tapes by the end of 1980 and microfiche, maps and more complete tapes later.

A complete list, information on special census bureau services and general information can be obtained through the Kansas City regional bureau of the census office, 1 Gateway Center, 4th and State Streets, Kansas City, MO 66101, 816-374-4601.

PAT ROSSITER of Bemidji shows one of the pieces that he had on display at the pre-Christmas flea market in Thief River Falls city auditorium Saturday. The wood is cut from a tree burl with a chain saw, sanded; natural configuration developed through the use of pastel art (such as the raccoon above), sealed with a spray varnish and coated with epoxy for strength and permanence.

Flea Market Saturday Is Well Attended

involved in a remodeling project at the present time for Gary Sargent, hockey defenseman for the Minnesota North Stars, who makes his home in Bemidji.

"I've been doing this for the past five or six years," Rossiter said. "Connie started doing the art work a few months ago. She's the artist and I'm the critic."

Connie comes by her artistic talent naturally, having had no formal training other than high school art classes. Her father, Dick Miller of Onamia, is a wildlife artist and the design winner for the 1981 Minnesota waterfowl stamp. He has also written and illustrated a book which was offered for sale at the flea market.

Also Bemidji participants at the show were Joyce Thompson and her sister Lorna Hanson. They left home at 3:30 a.m. to drive ice-covered roads and still be in Thief River Falls in time to set up for the market. Joyce had done a number of acrylic art items, including several pictures and many plaques, pins and magnetized ornaments.

Exhibitor from the greatest distance came from Baudette, Zukatis said, and there were quite a number from Thief River Falls. Many items on display were suitable for gift giving, somewhat of a contrast to the normal summer flea markets. "There's a lot more junk during the summer," Zukatis observed.

St. Hilaire Co-Op Passes Market Record

St. Hilaire Co-op elevator recently surpassed its own record by loading out 229 rail cars and 489 semi-trailer trucks during November, for a total of 1,176,000 bushels of grain shipped for the 30-day period.

Old record was 1,050,000 bushels for November of 1979. This will be the second consecutive year that 10,000,000 bushels will be marketed out of this area by the cooperative.

A complete obituary will be published in Wednesday's edition of the Times.

Dear friends,

What to say at a funeral home visitation? Let your heart speak naturally. Simply saying, "I'm sorry" or "I'm saddened by your loss" is adequate. Often merely a firm handshake, an embrace, a kiss, the sympathy in your eyes, or even tears - these communicate better than a rehearsed speech.

Respectfully,

Belmont Funeral Home

THIEF RIVER FALLS

Peter Kalishko Rites Held At Middle River

Peter Kalishko, 84, a lifelong resident of northwestern Minnesota, died Sunday evening, November 30 at the Karlstad Memorial hospital.

Funeral services for Peter Kalishko were held at 2 p.m. on Thursday, December 4, at the First Lutheran church in Middle River. Officiants were Rev. Donald Fredine and Rev. Merle Knutson. Mrs. Richard Luoto was the soloist and Mrs. Floyd Peterson, the organist.

Pallbearers were Kermit Strandberg, Gordon Bring, Tom Cooper, Edor Anderson, Milford Rokke and Roger Bring. Interment was in the Stephen city cemetery with the Collins Funeral home of Middle River in charge of funeral arrangements.

Peter Kalishko was born Feb. 17, 1896 at Stephen to Joseph and Annie Kalishko. He attended school and grew to manhood in that community.

On April 25, 1942, he married Alma Ellingson Moen in Spruce Valley township of Marshall county, near Middle River. Following their marriage, the couple made their home in Spruce Valley township and later moved to Argyle. After his wife's death in 1956, Peter continued to make his home at Argyle for several years. He later became a resident of Blom's Boarding Home in Middle River and had recently moved to the Karlstad Memorial Nursing Center.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Margaret Cich, Forest Lake; three step-sons: Leland Moen, Newfolden; Marvin Moen, Middle River; and Stanley Moen, Montana; and several nieces and nephews.

His wife, parents, one sister, four brothers and one half-brother preceded him in death.

Toys Remain Special To 'Young' At Christmas

by Mary Combs
Smithsonian News Service

Sixty-three years ago this season, a committee of bureaucratic Scrooges nearly ruined the spirit of Christmas day. But in the end, like Scrooge, they were captivated by the charm of that very special holiday.

Charged with conserving the nation's resources during World War I, the U.S. council for national defense proposed clamping an embargo on the buying and selling of holiday gifts, a plan reminiscent of the spirit of self-denial practiced by the Puritan fathers, who had banned the celebration of Christmas altogether.

Hero of the hour was A. C. Gilbert, inventor of the erector set and president of a year-old trade association, Toy Manufacturers of the U.S.A. Armed with an assortment of their wares, Gilbert and a representative group of manufacturers set out for Washington to convince the council that most toys would not drain materials or manpower from the war effort.

Boston Post reported that Gilbert and company were at first so intimindated by the dignified atmosphere of the office and the serious mien of the council members that they hurriedly stowed the toys behind a couch. (The boxes already had been efficiently and hilariously inspected by security guards.) Gilbert embarked upon an eloquent defense of the role of toys in molding the patriotic character and skill of American youth.

His audience thus primed, out came the toys, followed by the council's swift capitulation. According to the Post account, "From the moment he opened them . . . the secretaries were boys again. Secretary (of the navy) Daniels was as pleased with an Ives submarine as he could be with a new destroyer . . . he kept fast hold of it . . . 'Toys appeal to the heart of every one of us, no matter how old we are,' said another cabinet member. And it was because they did . . . that the boys and girls of the United States are going to awake this Christmas morning upon a day as merry as Christmases in the past."

Those eager middle-aged "boys" were playing with toys barely dreamed of by their great-great-grandparents. And neither generation could have guessed that their playthings — a link to today's line of electronic toys — would end up in the collections of museums such as the Smithsonian Institution.

The 19th century saw the industrialization of America and the growth of the United States from a fledgling nation to a world power. Changes were reflected, and sometimes anticipated, by a parallel growth in the toy world. Mass-production techniques and increasing prosperity and sophistication played a role in this surge, but in the end, youngsters wanted — as always — toys that were copies of things in the real world.

Toys advanced from being generally home creations or imports to the products of large-scale manufacturing enterprises. In 1882 author James Lukin commented: "Talk of the march of the intellect—the march of toydom beats it all hollow: I do not believe a modern baby would look at such rude creations as delighted the babies of 50 years ago . . . the really instructive and highly interesting toys of our time, the scientific and mechanical ones (were) a class utterly unknown in olden days."

Lukin went on to describe the earliest "mechanical" toys, powered by fine sand poured over a wheel that animated cut out figures. Like almost all early toys, these "rude creations" were made of cardboard or wood.

It was the increased use of metal for toys that ushered in the new era in the 1830s and 40s. Metal made possible elegant and detailed shapes and, more importantly, added truly durable wheels and gears to the stock of parts.

By the mid-1840s, the toy business had grown so large that almost every town, no matter how far from the beaten track, had a toy store, or at least a store which sold toys. Woodworth's Fancy Store in New York proudly advertised the arrival of the most popular playthings in December 1844 "by packet from Le Havre — locomotives, mechanical and Automaton toys for children."

Toy manufacturing was interrupted during the Civil war, but emerged from the conflict raring to go. Industry and America were on the move, and soon most toys moved somehow, with the help of wind-up clockwork, friction motors, gravity devices, magnetism and, finally, steam and electricity.

There also was a significant and increasing vogue for realism. Wilkins Toy Works, for example, got its start when one Mr. Wilkins found that his model clothes-wringer sold better than the real thing. Like other enterprising men of the time, Wilkins knew a good thing when he saw it. He plunged into production of small versions of trains, carts, wagons, fire engines — anything that moved.

The second half of the 19th century was the golden age of wind-up toys; steel springs continued to be cheaper and safer than steam or electricity. The period saw the success of such manufacturers as Ives, producer of the realistic submarine the Secretary of the Navy clutched fervently in that meeting room in 1917.

From mid-century, the boom in vehicle toys led to copies of every kind of horse-drawn conveyance, eventually moving from horses to horsepower. One of the first wind-up toy automobiles on the American market — if not the first — was produced in the 1890s by H. T. Kingsley, who simply removed the horse from a sporty carriage model and added a steering wheel.

Animated pull and push toys remained hugely popular. In the 1880s a new variation arrived and considerably raised the noise level on Christmas morning. These toys were fitted with chimes or bells automatically struck as they rolled merrily along.

There was socio-political commentary as well. One popular item during the Spanish-American War was "Uncle Sam and the Don," depicting a fist-fight, with Uncle Sam ultimately sending the foe down for the count with "a solar-plexis blow." A few years later, when Russia and Japan were at war, the manufacturer revived the model with a new paint job — "The Cossack and the Jap." Teddy Roosevelt and the Rough Riders charging up San Juan Hill was also a huge success.

Although electrical motors were sold by themselves and "shocking machines" were a popular novelty, there were no real electrical toys in the 1880s. Steam engines were somewhat less dangerous, running on small quantities of alcohol, and toy steam trains and locomotives were very popular.

First electric train seems to have been produced in 1896, but the quintessential boy's toy did not come into its own until the new century. In 1903 Joshua Lionel Cowan issued a catalog of model trains featuring a small electric motor of his devising — and Lionel trains chugged into their place in history.

Playthings magazine noted in the same year that electricity had entered the toy world to stay. The new century brought an increasingly heavy burden to St. Nicholas' already straining sack: an electrified doll's house equipped with running water, miniature sewing machines, toy telegraph and telephone sets, toy printing presses, do-it-yourself electric toy kits and endless varieties of wind-up automobiles.

The love affair with motion and speed swiftly moved into a new realm — and model planes appeared hard on the heels of the Wright brothers' flight. Here the toy world began in earnest to anticipate and outstrip the adult reality, as eventually it anticipated man's move into space.

Early mechanical planes were propelled by wind-up spring motors, but by 1921 Sears was carrying one with an electric motor which flew around a pole. As always, manufacturers were at the mercy of the whims of the market. In the early '20s, Kingsbury produced a monoplane which sat on the shelves unnoticed by kids whose heroes were World War I aces in their biplanes. Then Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, and a quick paint job produced the "Spirit of St. Louis." An eventual lull in sales of this item was reversed when Wrong-Way Corrigan flew to Ireland; the planes were painted green and sold like hotcakes.

The Great Depression and the second World War meant the disappearance of many old, established firms and the toys they made. But a new generation swiftly filled the gap. The post-war baby boom brought unprecedented focus on family life and children. Nowadays, a major new toy emerges with a pedigree of psychological and education testing and marketing analysis.

Not so long ago, computers and calculators were sophisticated and expensive scientific equipment. This year, stockings will be filled with electronic games and devices, and some children will have more up-to-date equipment in their toy boxes than their parents have in their offices.

Whatever developments the future may bring, whatever unimaginable dreams our grandchildren may confide in their letters to Santa Claus, parents will greet them with the mixture of dismay, wonder and nostalgia that has always been the lot of Santa's helpers, and, like the boys and girls of 1917, they will awake to a merry Christmas morning.

Northern Farm Show Centers On Energy

Northern Farm Show, set for January 16 and 17, at the Minneapolis auditorium has been billed as one of the largest indoor farm equipment shows of its kind in the midwest.

Northern farm show director Bill Ryden, expects the two-day event to attract more farm visitors than ever before. Thousands of farm operators will again have an opportunity to examine and compare a wide variety of the newest farm equipment for the 1980s.

Main feature of the Northern farm show is equipment designed especially for livestock and crop farmers of the Midwest. However, this years version of the show has an exciting new dimension, a timely farm energy exhibit. Farm operators are continuously fighting the battle of escalating energy costs, and are becoming more and more aware of the need for alternate energy forms on their farms. According to Ryden, "the highlight of the farm energy exhibit is the display developed by the Tennessee Valley authority in cooperation with the United States department of energy." This exhibit features a unique model farm showing sixteen integrated energy systems that could be utilized on the typical midwest farm operation.

Farm operators will have an opportunity to enter their personal farm operation facts into a computer which is programmed to analyze each personal energy situation and recommend the most advantageous energy system for their farm. A wide variety of energy systems will be displayed and explained by experts representing firms specializing in the areas of solar energy, gasohol, methane production, wood energy, wind energy, and many other alternate energy systems.

A special treat for the ladies to enjoy will be a comfortable, convenient lounge area offering an opportunity to relax while enjoying an interesting exhibit of the latest concepts in food processing and cooking systems. A variety of systems such as convection cooking, microwave cooking, food dehydration equipment, food processing appliances and many other modern conveniences will be displayed by company representatives.

Show will be conducted at the Minneapolis Auditorium, located in downtown Minneapolis, where there are over 4,000 parking spaces nearby and nearly 5,000 modern hotel and motel accommodations available, as well as an assortment of entertainment and shopping areas. Hours for the two-day event are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, January 16, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, January 17.

Northern farm show is sponsored by the Retail Farm Equipment association of Minnesota and South Dakota. Association is comprised of nearly 900 farm equipment dealers serving farm customers across Minnesota and South Dakota. Free tickets are available to the show. Farm customers are asked to stop at their local farm equipment dealership for their free tickets to the show.

Oak Hills To Give Christmas Choir Program

"The Christmas Story" will be presented by the tenth annual Christmas festival chorus Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and again on Sunday at 2:30 p.m., at Oak Hills Bible Institute.

Kenneth J. Wold, director of music at OHBI, will conduct the 65-voice festival chorus. In addition to the featured work by the early American composer William Billings, the program schedules carols and pieces appropriate to the season presented by a string ensemble, vocal ensemble, brass quartet and the student musical team, "Joyful Song".

Public is cordially invited to attend this concert held in the fellowship center chapel on the campus of Oak Hills Bible Institute, two miles south and two miles west of Bemidji on the Oak Hills road.

Planning Now Can Offer Tax Break Later

From a tax point of view, this is the time of the year to get down to basics. The right step now can save you from paying unnecessary business and personal income taxes that, according to the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants, often inflate your tax bill.

Between now and December 31, you can arrange your financial affairs, either to increase or retard your 1980 taxable income depending upon which would serve your advantage.

CPAs suggest you ask yourself these questions:

+ Am I eligible for income averaging if I made much more money this year than the previous four?

+ Could I take advantage of income averaging by cashing in a substantial amount of certain savings bonds?

+ Can I shift a capital gain into 1981 by making a short sale on my stock now, and delivering it next year?

+ Can I still make any energy-saving improvements on my home which would entitle me to tax credit?

+ Can I accelerate my deductions by paying real estate or other taxes this year instead of next?

+Would additional medical or charitable deductions be better this year or next?

If you own a business, there are still more tax breaks to consider. Suppose after computing your 1980 income you suspect you might save some money by shifting some income into 1981. Here are some options.

If you are on a cash basis you can readily defer income. To an extent, you can hold off billing customers until next year — or until so late in December so that no payment is likely in 1980. Income generally must be received to be reported, so if you want to defer income, be sure it has not been received.

If you are an accrual basis taxpayer, you may be able to postpone completion of a job until 1981 so the right to income arises then even though most of the actual work is done in 1980. Also, hold up deliveries where that will defer income, and will not inconvenience customers.

Step up certain deductions to lower 1980 income by paying all your bills now and by paying some expenses which would normally be incurred next year. For instance, you may want to stock up on office supplies for next year and pay for them now. Or, you may want to sell at a loss all those plastic umbrellas that aren't moving off the shelves.

If you buy business equipment on the last day of the taxable year and put it into use that day, you can take a full 20 per cent first-year depreciation on your tax return — in addition to other depreciations for which you qualify. This bonus depreciation is limited to $10,000 of purchases — $20,000 if a joint return is filed — each year on equipment with at least a six-year life span. (Whether or not you qualify may depend on your accounting method, so check with your tax advisor.)

Some business property which qualifies for the regular 10 per cent investment credit may also qualify for an energy credit, giving you a double tax credit of up to 25 per cent, CPAs say. Any unused credits can be carried back and carried over, so consider taking advantage of the credit as soon as possible by investing in such property before the end of the year.

Social Security Men Here Tues.

Ted Hoversten and Neil Rowe, field representatives of the Grand Forks social security office, will be in Thief River Falls at the city auditorium Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

FACTUAL NEWS REPORTING EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

Wind And Economics

Conservation of resources is important and it makes sense to utilize renewable or seemingly wasted energy sources whenever possible. But Bob Graham, manager of PKM Electric cooperative in Warren, puts one potential in perspective in a recent column in the PKM News. Here is what he writes:

Perhaps the principal item of interest for members attending this year's annual meeting was the report by LeRoy Sletten on his wind power project located at his farm home just off highway 2 east of Larimore, North Dakota. LeRoy, who built his project from the ground up, after five years has come to the conclusion that wind power at present day prices in the Minnkota area or those in the foreseeable future is not a cost effective energy alternative.

There is no question but what wind power saves non-renewable resources. But so long as we live in a market economy the true success or failure of any alternative energy source will be based by the buying public on its ability to compete successfully with conventional sources.

I can remember back forty years ago, to the pre-REA era, there were occasional wind machines dotting the landscape. Shortly thereafter they all disappeared. Why? Because they could not compete in convenience, supply and price with the newly available energy source.

This is more true today than it was then because Red River Valley rural area electricity prices now are only moderately higher than in those days. In fact, in terms of real price (discounting for inflation), relative to other things we bought then and buy now, electricity has gone down in price.

By way of illustration, I am told that there is a salesman in the area selling a wind machine at an installed cost of $6,000, which it is claimed will produce 500 kwh of electricity per month. This amount of power costs $21.00 based on PKM rates or $252 a year.

Recognizing that federal and state tax credits enable the purchaser to write off almost 60 per cent of his wind machine investment, the fact still remains that he could take the reduced investment equivalent or $2,400 and invest it at 12 per cent with his local bank for a $288 annual return. This would give him a $36 annual profit for not investing in a wind machine. Note further there are no depreciation or maintenance expenses associated with the bank investment. So — what is the point to reinventing the wheel at a loss?

In conclusion, I wish to reemphasize: Conservation is vitally important. However, this does not mean that all conservation is cost effective on a no-nonsense basis. Thus, my only purpose for writing in this vein is to warn that you should get all the facts from all parties involved "before you leap".

Fuel Assistance

Government agencies are at work in this area as well as throughout much of the country, trying to give away money to help people heat their homes this winter. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are available for that purpose in the northwestern Minnesota area.

There is no question that heated homes are a necessity in our part of the country and we doubt there is anyone who would like to see anyone else suffer because of inability to purchase heating fuel. For that matter, most people are willing to provide help when they discover somebody else in need.

But one seldom-mentioned view of the fuel assistance program is in this editorial from the Sauk Centre Herald:

A young husband and father tells this story of frustration, lost pride, and hopelessness caused by a well-intentioned but counter-productive government program.

He had spent long hours in the woodlot cutting firewood. By late fall he had many cords of neatly stacked firewood to see his family through the winter.

Then his wife came home from the neighbors with news that he had foolishly wasted his time and effort.

On their income, she said, they could get government fuel assistance and could continue burning oil like many other families. By his ambition he had condemned his family to the inconvenience of a woodstove.

The young husband explained that by his after-work activities in the woodlot, garden, and home workshop his family lived quite well. Now he was officially branded as "poor." His wood piles were monuments to his stupidity. Instead of feeling good about the warm glow of his woodstove this winter, he would feel pain and defeat.

Several decades of big government paternalism have placed over half of this nation's population on some form of federal aid. Yet the party that promoted "something for everybody" lost the November election.

We suggest that the millions of Americans with ambition, pride, and hope for the future have been deeply offended by the government's feedlot philosophy. Most Americans resent being fattened for the next election by funds taken from their own pockets.

Fuel assistance, administered without careful guidelines, will discourage homeowners from cutting their own wood, insulating their homes, or turning down thermostats. Such lavish assistance can only promote continued waste when this country can no longer afford waste. It will discourage self-reliance at a time when self-reliance could solve much of the problem.

Ambition, pride, and hope for the future were forces which conquered a wild continent and built a great nation. These forces can do a great deal more.

Full use of Minnesota woodlots and forests as renewable energy sources should be promoted and rewarded as one way toward energy independence.

Tragic Truism

Having just had a family discussion on the disappearance of tools at home (and the reminder of who usually is the one to leave them lying scattered about), the following item from the Lions International magazine caught our attention. Perhaps others will appreciate the philosophy of the writer as well:

It is one of life's tragic truisms that if you go up a ladder with a screwdriver to remove, let's say, a drapery rod, you will find — as you sway back and forth — that you have brought a regular screwdriver when, in fact, all the screws have philips-heads.

So it's back down the ladder and out to the kitchen to root through the tool drawer. There will be no philips-head screwdriver there, even though you own three of them. Regular screwdrivers, will, of course, abound. So will various hammers, hundreds of nuts and bolts (none of which will match), odd pieces of sheet metal of no apparent value, nails either too small or too large for any earthly use, tubes of pipe joint compound that will have disappeared by the time you need them, rusty razor blades, two cores that once held electrical tape, a full roll of masking tape that won't come off in lengths longer than two inches, various pieces of string that will someday be pieced together to wrap a package, worn-out sandpaper, a wrench too small for the next pipe that bursts, three blown fuses, and copious amounts of the kind of fuzz usually associated with pants pockets and cuffs.

You will ultimately discover — when it's too late — that one of the philips-head screwdrivers is in the backyard, hidden in the grass, waiting to be chewed up by the lawnmower. Another is in the glove compartment of the car. The third is in the pocket of your 12-year-old son's winter coat, now hanging in the coatroom at school. He will not know why he put it there.

Muttering, you will go back up the ladder with the wrong screwdriver. The passage of an hour will find you sitting quietly, staring out the window. Your normal color will be returning, the sweat drying on your forehead. When your wife walks in the door, she will start to greet you, think better of the idea, and proceed to the liquor cabinet. You will resolve for the hundredth time to make sure that tools are returned to the drawer after each use. You will be lying to yourself. Some things, after all, are beyond human control.

Soviet Logic

This bit of comparison was taken from "Grassroots Editor", written by John DeMott, a faculty member in journalism at Memphis state university, after a tour of Russia. He quotes a Russian writer as saying:

"We have the same freedom of press that you do. In your country, there are no restrictions in what you can say in criticizing Jimmy Carter's actions as President of the United States. Neither are there any kind of restrictions on our press, concerning what it can say about the President of the United States."

Interesting Opinions:

"Majorities must recognize that minorities have rights which ought not to be extinguished and they must remember that history can be written as the record of the follies of the majority."

—Lindsay Rogers

Gov. Quie's Column

An Agenda For The Future of Minnesota

Last week in news conferences in Albert Lea and Austin I announced an agenda for the future which I believe will guide Minnesotans through the challenges of the 1980s.

The binding thread of this agenda is providing people a greater voice in government. The agenda focuses on several areas such as education, taxes, transportation, forestry, minerals, high technology, agriculture and the prevention of chemical dependency.

The greatest challenge of the 80s will be for Minnesota to remain a strong force in the Upper Midwest. Forecasters say the economic pulse of our nation is shifting to the south and the west.

This is documented by the preliminary reports from the 1980 census. In the last decade the west has seen a population gain of 18 per cent; the south, a 14 per cent increase; North Central states only a three per cent increase; the Northeast no growth at all.

Minnesota fared better than other North Central states with a 6.9 per cent increase.

To meet this challenge from the Sunbelt we must pull together as a state and concentrate our efforts on our best resources. And the best resources of all are the people. My entire legislative agenda centers around giving the people a greater voice in government.

Eight of the areas I believe Minnesota must address include the following:

(1) Education. I will again propose an education program which guarantees that the state will provide 70 per cent of education funding. This will allow Minnesota to continue to improve the quality of education. We also must improve our education system by developing a closer relationship among students, teachers and parents; reducing class sizes in the early primary grades; and training teachers to be more effective in these educational environments.

(2) Taxes. In 1979 and 1980 we took a major step in reducing our tax burden. We indexed income taxes, easing the impact of inflation upon taxpayers, and we cut property taxes. And, in total, we saved taxpayers $792 million in these two years. This amounts to nearly $200 for every man, woman and child in the state. I will continue to seek improvements in our tax system to provide a more equitable tax system.

(3) Transportation. For Minnesota to retain a viable economy we must have adequate transportation systems for the movement of people, goods and services. I will be recommending a plan for improving our transportation systems.

(4) Forestry. One of Minnesota's most valuable resources is its forests. However, we must increase production of this resource. We must intensify our forest management efforts.

(5) Minerals. Minnesota is one of the most mineral-rich states in the nation. We must review our current mineral practices and develop a mineral policy that creates new jobs while protecting our environment. I will be working with the departments of natural resources and economic development and the pollution control agency in exploring this area.

(6) High Technology. Futurists say the U.S. is rapidly shifting from a mass industrial society to an information society. As this evolution occurs, Minnesota, which is currently one of the three top high technology centers in the country, will be in an ideal situation. I will be working closely with the department of economic development to see that we enhance our position in this field.

(7) Agriculture. We must never lose sight of the fact that agriculture provides a large portion of our economic base. To see that agriculture continues to change and improve with the times, we must provide adequate agricultural research and extension services.

(8) Prevention of Chemical Dependency. One of the challenges of the 80s will be to solve the growing problem of chemical dependency that threatens every aspect of our society from our school children to our working men and women and our senior citizens. Last June I designated one person on my staff to work solely on the complex problem of chemical dependency. I will continue to pursue this critical area.

The specifics of these goals will be outlined later in the state of the state message and 1982-83 budget address which I will be presenting in January to the 1981 legislature.

CORRECTION

In the public opinion letter Wednesday from Dave's News, a paragraph stated: "Not wanting to antagonize people with good intentions, we made the decision that the magazine would not be carried if the majority of the operations were adverse." The statement should have read that the magazine (High Times) would not be carried if the majority of the opinions were adverse. The Times regrets the error.

Early Weeks Of December Best For Stargazers

Night sky will take on a certain pre-holiday glitter next week when Earth passes through the debris of an ancient comet. During the night of December 12, as many as 50 "falling stars" will be visible each hour.

Observers will get the best view of the meteors, which burn as they fall through Earth's atmosphere, between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m.

Stargazers will have other points of interest to watch during the early weeks of December as well. Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn will be visible to the naked eye. Just as twilight turns into darkness, the slightly reddish planet Mars will be visible low in the southwest. Venus will be apparent in the mornings in the southwestern sky near the star Spica (Venus is the brighter of the two). Also in the morning, Jupiter and Saturn will be visible close together high in the southeast. (Jupiter will be brighter).

Winter is also a prime time for galaxy viewing, and two are now visible to the naked eye. The Milky Way, our own galaxy, appears as a faint band of light stretching across the sky. Its hazy appearance is the result of the light from some of the 200 billion stars that compose the galaxy.

The Andromeda galaxy is visible as a small patch of light almost directly overhead. Much like our own galaxy, Andromeda is a huge pinwheel of stars, gas and dust, although it appears as little more than a blurred star because it is more than two million light years away (about 13 million trillion miles). The light we see now left Andromeda more than two million years ago.

Recently, astronomers discovered that the Milky Way and the Andromeda galaxies are part of a group of galaxies that move through space together, said Andy Fraser, a member of the Minnesota astronomical society. As prominent members of this small group, both galaxies are circled by satellite galaxies.

This galactic "neighborhood," called the local group, includes some 20 galaxies in an area of space 10 million light years across. All are somehow loosely connected and traveling through the universe together.

The Magellanic clouds, two galaxies discovered by Magellan that are visible only from the southern hemisphere, are also part of the group. The Magellanic clouds are in orbit around the Milky Way, taking more than a billion years to complete the trip.

Local groups of galaxies, like our group, are clustered into "supergalaxies," groups of hundreds of galaxies that move through space together. Larger still are families of supergalaxies, including thousands of galaxies each, Fraser said.

Of those galaxies familiar to astronomers, some are spiral in shape, others are elliptical and still others are filamentary, with filaments extending toward another galaxy. Some are irregular in shape and others are characterized by mysterious explosions at their centers. Yet another group, called the Seyfert galaxies, have intensely energetic centers. Each one pours forth more energy than the rest of its entire galaxy. Our own Milky Way is an ordinary spiral.

RRV Women's Division Plans For '81 Shows

Women's division of the Red River Valley Winter shows has firmed up the plans for their activities at the 1981 show beginning Februatry 20.

National Guard Armory is the location of the women's section and will be a beehive of activity with artists, crafts people, needlework hobbyists, and antique collectors. Week-long events will include a senior citizens day, special programs of interest to women and their families, including a number of specialized demonstrations, workshops, and seminars.

Sister Thomas Moore of Manitowoc, WI, will speak on "A Woman's Right to Nag—Alienable and Essential." Watch and listen as your newspaper and radio bring further details.

Ice Plant Project Delays

Problems that have surfaced in installing an artificial ice plant in the old arena in Thief River Falls have created a frustrating delay in the $40,000 project, headed by the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA). Original plans called for the ice sheet to be ready Dec. 1. Officials now promise ice — artificial or natural — in time for the annual Bantam A and Pee-Wee A Arctic tournament Dec. 26-28.

A volunteer work force laid some 40,000 feet of pipe on the arena floor this fall, but couplings, which connect the pipe system with a set of six-inch pipe that goes into the header and serves as a main feed and return flow for the refrigerant did not seal properly. Trying to figure out why the problem developed and how to correct it has been the stumbling block for project leaders.

If the artificial ice plant can't be put into operation shortly, TRFAHA officials will delay completion of the project until spring, settling for a natural ice sheet for the rest of the winter.

A year ago the Pee-Wee A portion of the Arctic tournament, recognized as the best youth hockey invitational tournaments in the area, was scratched because unseasonably warm weather spoiled the old arena ice sheet. Shortly thereafter TRFAHA officials began their fund-raising efforts for the artificial ice plant.

Those fund-raising efforts received a big boost from the recent Section 8 high school hockey jamboree, conducted by TRFAHA. The club pocketed nearly $2,500 from the 14-team event, including some $1,500 in gate receipts and about $1,000 profit from concessions. For comparison, the best night the club realized in concession sales at the 1980 Section 8 high school hockey tournament played in the Thief River Falls sports arena was $900.

Geatz Shines With Lakers

Cal Marvin, general manager of the Warroad Lakers amateur hockey team reports that Dave Geatz, an all-state defenseman at Lincoln high school last winter, "was outstanding for the Lakers in a Central Amateur Hockey League game played at Steinbach Tuesday."

The Lakers trailed 4-1 after the first eight minutes of play, but came back to score seven unanswered goals to move up in the tight CASH League race.

"Geatz, the rookie, had his best night in a Laker uniform," wrote Marvin. "He's tough on the opposition on a one-on-one, and he likes the heavy traffic. He's a true competitor who comes to play each time out. He's been a fine addition to the Warroad Lakers hockey club."

Geatz and Tom Goddard, whose playing time will be reduced because of his coaching responsibilities at Northland community college, are continuing a Thief River Falls tie to Laker hockey that has also found Tony Dorn, Jr. and Scott Sabo playing for Warroad in recent years.

The Lakers' next start features St. Boniface Saturday in Warroad.

Miscellaneous

+How good was that 1980 Mahnomen high school football team that finished 13-0 and won the Minnesota Class B state title with a 34-0 championship game victory over Austin Pacelli? Jerry Doebbert of the Detroit Lakes officials association, who worked the 21-0 Cambridge Class AA semifinal playoff victory over Grand Rapids, told Ralph Anderson of the Detroit Lakes Tribune that the Indians, as they played in finals, were equally as good as either Cambridge or Grand Rapids on the night he saw those two teams meet. Grand Rapids, ranked No. 1 in Class AA for part of the year, handed Thief River Falls its only nonconference loss of the 1980 season, 30-6.

+Freshman Diane Fisher of Plummer, a member of the 1,000-point club with the Cardinals, opened the 1980-81 season listed as a probable starting forward on the Moorhead State University women's basketball team.

+Lonnie Olson of Thief River Falls is a senior letterman on the 1980-81 University of North Dakota indoor track team which will begin its season Dec. 13 in the Bison Open at North Dakota State University.

+Kelly Lewis, who left his position as Bemidji high school girls swimming coach to take over the same role at Alexandria this fall and led the Cardinals to their first section title, was named Section 3 swimming coach of the year.

+Dacotah Aerie 350 of the Eagles Lodge has agreed to pledge $25,000 over five years to find construction of a natural ice arena at O'Leary Park in East Grand Forks. The gift was made to the East Grand Forks Blue Line club, which now has $185,000 in pledges toward its spring goal of $300,000, according to Lynn Stauss, project chairman for the club. Previously pledged were $100,000 by the East Grand Forks VFW club and $60,000 by the Blue Line club. Construction of the facility will not begin until enough funds have been raised and banked to pay for the majority of the facility.

LEADING SCORER IN Friday's Thief River Falls-Roseau season-opening high school basketball game in the Lincoln gym was the Prowlers' Mark Lundin, shown here putting up a base line lay-up following a Roseau turnover in the first minute of play. Lundin scored 18 points and was one of five Thief River Falls scorers in double figures in the Prowlers' 90-27 rout of the Rams.

Prowlers Rout Roseau; Host Grafton Tuesday

An easy 90-27 winner over Roseau in its Friday night season opener, the Lincoln high school basketball team expects to face a stiffer challenge Tuesday when the Prowlers host Grafton at 7:30 p.m.

The Spoilers have six returning lettermen, and four have seen extensive varsity duty: 6-1 Tim Praska, the team's second leading scorer a year ago, Bryan Carlson, Lance Anderson and Randy Capouch. The 6-4 Anderson, 6-1 Praska and 6-1 Carlson provide Grafton with its limited height, but do not provide bulk. All three weigh in around 160 pounds.

"If we have one drawback," said Grafton coach Gene Anderson, "it has to be rebounding. We're not as physical on the boards as many teams are. We'll have to work harder on positioning."

But the Grafton game plan calls for fast break offense and pressure defense.

"I'm pleased with the way it (running game) has progressed," Anderson reported. "I think the fans will enjoy watching this type of ball."

It'll be the season opener for the Spoilers, beaten 57-56 by the Prowlers last winter.

"Grafton will be tough, I'm sure," acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Glen Peters, who was happy with the Prowlers' performance against a weak Roseau team Friday.

Thief River Falls opened with a 10-0 lead, made it 26-6 at the end of eight minutes and sat on a 49-13 halftime cushion. It was 68-25 at the end of the third quarter and Thief River Falls reserves continued the blitz by out-scoring Roseau 22-2 in the fourth quarter.

It was the highest point total for the Prowlers since a school-record 115-69 victory over Climax in the consolation game of the 1973 District 31 tournament in the University of North Dakota fieldhouse. It was also the lowest point total the Prowlers have given up since beating the same Roseau club 58-27 in the second game of the 1974-75 season.

"It was a good effort by our kids," mentioned Peters. "We played well for the first game. But we know the competition will get better."

Five Prowlers hit double figures Friday, with senior guard Mark Lundin getting 18 points, Hal Swanson 14, Eric Bondy 11, Kevin Sanders 10 and reserve Shaw McCabe 10.

The Prowlers surprised even themselves by shooting 49 per cent from the field, hitting 43 of a staggering 87 attempts. The Rams struggled with a 21 per cent shooting night, 9-for-42.

"We shot well. I was really surprised," admitted Peters, who said his team's shooting ability was suspect. "We had good shots — we were patient," he explained.

Thief River Falls was just 4-for-14 at the free throw line, however, while the Rams went 9-for-18. The Prowlers outrebounded the Rams 49-35 and Roseau was charged with 31 of the game's 41 turnovers.

AN INTERFERENCE PENALTY was assessed Drey Bradley of the Bemidji State University junior varsity when he shoved Northland community college forward Darin Olimb to the ice in front of Bemidji goalie Bob Loos in the second period of Wednesday's hockey game played in the Thief River Falls sports arena. There were 20 penalties called in the game, won by Bemidji 6-1.

NCC Hockey Team Sweeps Rainy River

Northland community college hockey team began its 1980-81 Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) conference schedule with a weekend sweep over Rainy River, winning both games in the Saturday-Sunday series at International Falls by 7-6 scores. The Sunday afternoon game went into overtime.

The Saturday night victory snapped a 21-game Northland losing streak that covered part of three seasons. The Northmen lost a pair of state tournament games to close out the 1978-79 season, went 0-18 through the 1979-80 campaign and started 1980-81 with a 6-1 defeat at the hands of the Bemidji State University junior varsity last Wednesday.

Northland resumes MJCAA competition this weekend in the Thief River Falls sports arena by hosting Hibbing Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday afternoon at 1.

Northland 7
Rainy River 6

Northland built a 4-0 first period lead, but needed a goal by Roger Olimb with just 2:02 remaining in the game to snap a 6-6 tie and pick up a 7-6 series-opening victory Saturday night.

Rainy River tied it with 3:16 left before Olimb clinched the win and snapped the prolonged losing streak.

But it was a costly victory for the Northman, who lost the services of Bruce Salmela (thigh injury), Pat Murray (Shoulder injury) and Terry Mishler (hip-pointer) during the game. In addition, Gary Usitalo was sidelined by an earlier thigh injury.

Northland 7
Rainy River 6

Chippy play by Rainy River finally caught up to the Voyageurs when Northland scored on a power play goal in overtime Sunday afternoon for a 7-6 win and a series sweep.

Northland trailed 4-2 early in the third period before goals by Mike Schmitt, Roger Olimb and Wade Hoppe put the Northmen in front 5-4. But Northland still needed a Jeff Hockin goal with 6:59 remaining to gain a 6-6 tie; winning it on an unassisted goal by Schmitt with 7:01 left in overtime.

State Swim Meet . . .

Brenda Lund Places Third

Brenda Lund, a Lincoln high school senior competing in her fifth consecutive state meet, placed third Saturday in the diving portion of the 1980 Minnesota state high school girls swimming and diving championships held at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Lund finished with 385.7 points on her 11 dives, trailing only Kelly Johnson of Irondale, who successfully defended her diving title with 428.65 points, and Carol Libbesmeier of St. Cloud Tech with 398.3 points.

"WWith the exception of one dive, Brenda dove really well," explained Thief River Falls coach John Hustad. "She lost her concentration on one dive, and that kept her out of second, and maybe even first. But third in the state is not a bad place to be."

Fourth in the state meet a year ago and a sixth place finish as an eighth grader in 1976, Lund capped her brilliant six-year varsity career with the Prowlers by receiving a perfect 10 score from one judge Friday on the final dive of the prelims to vault from a seventh place logjam into third behind Johnson and Libbersmeier. Hustad says he can't recall ever seeing a girl receive a 10 in the state meet like Lund did with her one-summersault, one-twist, three-position dive that had a degree of difficulty of 2.0 on a scale that ranges from 1.2 to 3.0.

Lund missed her third dive during Friday's prelims, scoring poorly on a reverse, one-half twist, tuck position, difficulty 2.3.

"But from that point on she was really concentrating on her dives," noted Hustad.

Lund's teammate, senior Betsie Hallstrom, failed to survive the prelims in the 50-yard freestyle, swimming a 26.4 in the event where she had hoped to become the first Thief River Falls girl to break the 26-second barrier.

"Betsie swam a really good race, but the time on the board just didn't show what we had hoped for," offered Hustad, who was very impressed with the caliber of competition at the state meet. "It had to be the most outstanding state meet I've ever seen. What they did in the water was really something."

Richfield won the team title with 113 points, followed by Lindbergh 103, Burnsville 87, Alexander Ramsey 86 and Minnetonka 74 to round out the top five. Forty-seven teams scored at least one point in the meet, with Thief River Falls sharing 25th place on the basis of the 12 points scored by Lund.

1980-81 Hockey Opener . . .

Prowlers Beat Crookston 6-3

Six different players scored goals Saturday at the Lincoln high school hockey team opened its 1980-81 season with a 6-3 victory over Crookston in the Pirates' arena.

Although he wasn't overly impressed with the caliber of play, saying it was a typical first game performance by both teams, Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand was nevertheless happy to open with a road victory over a highly regarded Section 8 foe.

"We're delighted with the win," said Grand. "We're very pleased with the play of our defensemen. The three big guys (Scott Wiebolt, Steve Olson and Mark Harder) really took charge out there. Wiebolt had an exceptional game."

The Thief River Falls coach was also pleased with the play of the Prowlers' up front, a question mark at the start of the season. "All nine forwards played well," he mentioned, giving special recognition to junior wing Tom Ose, "who worked extra hard to set up several scoring chances."

It was a 1-1 standoff after the first period as the Prowlers' Jeff Moser and Pirates' Tony Sprague matched goals, but Thief River Falls took charge in the second period on goals by Harder, Rick Engelstad and Tim Bergland to go ahead 4-2.

A shorthanded goal by Murray Jorde made it 5-2 at 4:37 of the third period, and after the Pirates' Nate Johnson narrowed the gap to 5-3 on a power play goal at 5:41, Thief River Falls defenseman Dean Dokkin iced the victory on an assist from Ose with just 1:48 left.

Thief River Falls out-shot Crookston 29-17.

The Prowlers' home opener is scheduled Saturday night against Fergus Falls.

First Period

Scoring — TRF, Jeff Moser (Rob Blankenfeld, Scott Wiebolt), 2:35; Crookston, Tony Sprague (un.), 8:15.

NORTHLAND COMMUNITY COLLEGE goalie Mark Tangen looked back to see the puck go into the net as Bemidji State University junior varsity forward Stu Weston helped direct a Dan Deamon slap shot into the goal during Wednesday's hockey game played in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Northland dropped its 1980-81 season and home opener 6-1. The Northmen will host Hibbing in an MJCAA weekend series in the sports arena.

Slow Start Costs Skippers 67-57 Decision At Warren

Warren built a 39-19 halftime edge and held off a second half Middle River rally to claim a 67-57 high school basketball victory Friday. The 1980-81 season opener for both clubs matched preseason favorites in Districts 31 and 32.

"I was satisfied," said Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "Warren is going to be one of the better teams in the region. If the game would have gone another five minutes I think we would have won."

A defensive switch to a press helped Middle River outscore Warren 38-28 in the second half.

"The difference in the ball game was that their guards were a lot bigger than our guards," noted Sparby. "They really crashed the boards on us with their guards. Our smaller kids couldn't keep them off the boards."

Both teams had three scorers in double figures. Mike Brekke led the host Ponies with 16 points, while Dan Carlson had 12 and Bob Lubarski got 10. Delray Ness paced the Skippers with 16 points, while Jon Neumann contributed 13 and Mike Peterson 12.

Middle River struggled offensively at the start, shooting just 20 per cent from the field (6-for-30) in the first half. The Skippers finished 18-for-58 for the game (31 per cent).

The Skippers, without the services of standout Scott McKeever, who will be idled until after Christmas because of a football injury, will face Grygla in their home opener Tuesday before tackling Lake of the Woods in a key early season North Border Conference game Friday at Baudette.

Argyle 62
MCC 59

In another interesting early season match-up of strong area teams, Argyle outlasted Marshall County Central 62-59 Friday.

"It was a real good basketball game," pointed out Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland. "We had some mental lapses against their press that hurt. We played real well against it (press) overall, but we got burned a couple of times."

Argyle, ahead 19-15 at the end of the first quarter, used the press to make up a six-point deficit in the final 30 seconds of the first half as the host Eagles took a 35-34 lead into intermission. Another Argyle burst off its press at the end of the third quarter tied things at 49-49.

"They played really good pressure defense," acknowledged Ueland. "We lost our composure a couple of times."

Marshall County Central was in it to the very end, though. The Nordics, trailing by that final three-point margin, were at the free throw line with 10 seconds left, and had two field goal attempts in the finals moments.

Terry Moe, shooting from the outside, led Argyle with 22 points, while Steve Holloway added 14, Robert Hapka 12 and Jay Labine 12. Dave Kragness scored 16 points for the Nordics, with Rick Van Camp adding 13 and Scott Lindquist 12.

Both teams shot extremely well, with Marshall County Central going 27-for-50 for 54 per cent and Argyle hitting 29-for-51 for 57 per cent. The Nordics were 5-for-12 at the free throw line where the Eagles were 4-for-8. Marshall County Central held a slight 22-19 rebound edge, with Jeff Dahl pulling down 12 caroms for the Nordics.

Marshall County Central tackles another top District 31 contender Friday when the Nordics go to Warren.
